Administration of the Bengal
Presidency for the year 1932.

GOVERNMENT OF BENGAL.

Police Department.

CALCUTTA, THE 17TH OCTOBER
1933.

RESOLUTION—No. 5535Pl.

Read—

The Report on the Police Administration of the Bengal Presidency for the year 1932.

Mr. T. J. A. Craig, C.I.E., held the office of Inspector-General of Police during the year and Mr. J. C. Farmer officiated for him when he was on leave from the 23rd April to 13th November.

2. Eastern Frontier Rifles.—In spite of the continuous strain to which all ranks were subjected, the battalion maintained its past efficiency and discipline under the leadership of Commandant Lieutenant-Colonel E. D. Dallas-Smith and Assistant Commandant Captain J. K. Jones, who acted as Commandant for the greater part of the year. It is hoped that the annual training of batches of men of the battalion at the Army Schools, which has been arranged, will still further enhance the value of the battalion as a semi-military force.

3. Recruitment and health of the Force.—The number of constables recruited was 1,880 against 2,159 in 1931, while the number of vacancies at the end of the year was 72 against 56, 146 and 206 in the three previous years.

Additional police under section 15 of Act V of 1861 had to be posted during the year in the jurisdictions of Keshpur, Sutahata and Nandigram police stations in the district of Midnapore as well as in Midnapore town. A similar force was also employed within the limits of Sonamukhi Municipality in the Bankura district. These forces, with the exception of those posted to Midnapore town and Keshpur police station, were withdrawn during the year, and also the force posted to certain localities in the Chittagong district in the previous year.

The temporary force (Range reserve) of armed police consisting of 945 constables, with the necessary complement of officers, was retained throughout the year to meet the heavy continuous calls on the armed police.

It is regrettable that the experiment of enrolling Namasudras in the armed branch has not proved a success. In future suitable men of this community will be employed in the unarmed branch only.

Casualties showed a decrease under all heads except "retirement" and "dismissal" and the percentage fell from 5.7 in 1931 to 5.3 in the year under review. It is gratifying that there was again a marked drop in the number of resignations.

Admission into hospitals increased from 14,390 in 1931 to 16,071 in the present year. As pointed out last year, this was due to continuous extra work and to unsatisfactory housing conditions. While appreciating the need for extended and improved hospital accommodation, His Excellency in Council, regrets to have again to say that financial conditions rendered it impossible to make any noticeable progress in this direction.

4. Discipline.—His Excellency in Council notes with satisfaction that discipline continued to be maintained at a high standard. Although there was a slight increase in the number of punishments imposed departmentally, there was a considerable decrease in the number of punishments imposed judicially. The number of complaints instituted against police by private individuals fell from 253 in the previous year to 221. Out of the 221 cases instituted, 118 ended in dismissal, 52 in acquittal or discharge and only 17 in conviction.

Crime Statistics.—Though the number of cases of murder and burglary showed a slight increase, there was a decrease in the total number of cognisable cases. The number of rioting cases fell from 1,212 in 1931 to 911 in the year under review.

Theft of arms showed a slight increase—121 cases against 116 in 1931. The largest number of cases of theft of arms were reported from the districts of Mymensingh, Dacca, Chittagong, Khulna and Rangpur.

- (c) prepare a Settlement Rent-roll.

Procedure for settlement of rents of non-agricultural lands.

11. For the purposes of settling rents and preparing a Settlement Rent-roll under this Act of any non-agricultural lands the Revenue-officer may proceed in any one or more of the following ways or partly in one of those ways and partly in another, that is to say—

[Cf. Act VIII of 1885, s. 104A.]

- (a) if in any case the landlord and tenant agree between themselves as to the amount of rent fairly and equitably payable, the Revenue-officer shall satisfy himself that the rent so agreed upon is fair and equitable, and if he is so satisfied, but not otherwise, it may be settled and recorded as the fair and equitable rent ;
- (b) the Revenue-officer may himself propose what he deems to be fair and equitable rent, and if the amount so proposed is accepted, either orally or in writing, by the tenant, and if the landlord, after notice to attend, raises no objection, the rent so proposed may be settled and recorded as the fair and equitable rent ;
- (c) the Revenue-officer may settle all or any of the rents by maintaining the existing rents recorded in the record-of-rights as published under sub-section (1) of section 6 or by enhancing or reducing such rents, but no rent shall be reduced which has been fixed by contract or which has been paid without objection for a continuous period of three years immediately preceding the year in which the order under section 3 was issued.

The Bengal Non-agricultural Lands Rent Settlement Bill, 1933.

(Clauses 13—16.)

Provided that the rent fixed for the tenant or occupant who holds the land immediately under Government or a proprietor of a temporarily settled estate shall be based upon the considerations specified in sub-section (1) and no reduction of the rent payable by him shall be made on the ground that the land or any part of it has been sub-let to a tenant.

(3) In fixing a fair and equitable rent the Revenue-officer may, in any case where a substantial sum has been paid at the time of settlement by a tenant to his landlord as a salami take into account one-twentieth of this sum as annual rent paid for ever in advance :

[New.]

In the absence of satisfactory proof of the amount of rent payable in respect of the various parcels of lands included in the tenancy, the Revenue-officer may divide the rent in proportion to the areas of the various parcels of land or in such other manner as he considers fair and equitable.

Instalments of rent.

14. (1) The Revenue-officer may fix the instalments of rent payable for any land and the dates by which each such instalment shall be paid. [New.]

(2) If the instalments of rent or the dates of payment are not fixed under sub-section (1) the rent payable by a tenant shall be paid in advance in four equal instalments falling due on the first day of each quarter of the financial year. [Cf. Act VIII of 1885, s. 53.]

Explanation.—The expression "water-line" means the moving edge of the water wherever it may be at any time.

STATEMENT OF OBJECTS AND REASONS.

Part II of Chapter X of the Bengal Tenancy Act, 1885, contains statutory provisions for settlement of rents, preparation of Settlement Rent-roll and disposal of objections in cases where settlement of land revenue is being or is about to be made. The term "settlement of land revenue" by the meaning given to it in clause 4 includes settlement of rent in an estate which belongs to Government. Barring certain provisions in the Regulations we have no other statutory provision similar to that in part II of Chapter X of the Bengal Tenancy Act, 1885, which applies to the assessment of non-agricultural lands. The absence of statutory provision similar to that in Chapter X has from time to time caused difficulties not only to the assessing authority and Government, but also to tenants. There have also been cases where on account of the failure of the tenant to agree to the terms offered by the Collector as the assessing authority expensive litigation ensued and in a number of cases Government had to eject the tenant which is a harsh measure. It is, therefore, intended to provide more definite provisions for assessment of rent of non-agricultural lands in areas, estates, or tenancies the land revenue of which is being or is about to be settled.

Resolution on the Eighth Quinquennial Review on the Progress of Education in Bengal for the years 1927-28 to 1931-32.

GOVERNMENT OF BENGAL.

Education Department.

RESOLUTION—No. 1259T.Edn.

Minister-in-charge: The Hon'ble Mr. K. Nazim-ud-Din, C.I.E.

Read—

The Eighth Quinquennial Review on the Progress of Education in Bengal for the years 1927-28 to 1931-32.

General Remarks.—Unfavourable conditions, political and financial, have again checked the progress and expansion of educational activities. Communal dissension, political agitation and economic depression have all had most unfortunate effects on the development of educational policy. The Civil Disobedience Movement and the terrorist campaign did much to undermine discipline and unsettle the youths of the province during the latter part of the period under review, and these troubles were intensified by the acute financial and economic depression, which prevented the realisation of the many long-needed reforms and culminated in the appointment of another Retrenchment Committee at the end of the quinquennium. In spite of these handicaps some progress was made and the position consolidated for a further advance as soon as financial conditions improve. The outstanding feature of the period was the enactment in 1930 of the Bengal (Rural) Primary Education Act, which provides for the establishment of District School Boards as the central authority for primary education in each district, and affords the machinery for the eventual development of free and compulsory primary education throughout the province. For its financing the scheme depends in the main upon the imposition of a primary education cess, and it is a matter of regret that owing to the prevailing depression it has not been found possible to impose additional taxation on the rural population.

Another sign of the times was the amendment of the Primary Education Act of 1919, empowering Government to authorise municipalities to enforce the compulsory attendance of girls on the same conditions as boys.

The only other educational legislation was the Dacca University Amendment Act, 1928, one provision of which gave the Executive Council final and definite authority on matters affecting the emoluments of teachers.

While the Rural Primary Education Act has been placed on the Statute Book, no further progress has been made with the proposed Bills for the reorganisation of the Calcutta University and the establishment of a Board to control secondary education. The time has come when the whole future educational policy should be carefully reviewed and the different grades of education—primary, secondary, vocational and University—co-ordinated into a single comprehensive system, so that the various educational agencies can apply their energies in the most economical and effective directions and that duplication and waste of effort may be reduced to a minimum.

In all directions and particularly in the sphere of primary education, unmistakable evidence is forthcoming that the quality of the work done and the results achieved do not repay the expenditure of money and effort. Better trained and better paid teachers are essential. The insistence by the University on provident fund provision in high schools is a step in the right direction, but until the finances of the schools improve, it must in many cases be of doubtful advantage, as it is to be feared that there are too many schools which can institute such a fund only at the expense of the teachers' salaries.

The period under review is notable for the far greater insistence laid on the health and physical welfare of students and a Physical Director was appointed during the period to work out schemes of physical training and organise the activities of the schools throughout the province. The scheme involves the establishment of a physical training centre for the instruction of teachers, and it is hoped that the gradual replacement, at which the scheme aims, of the old type of drill and drawing master by graduate physical instructors will help to infuse new vigour into this important part of school life.

There has been a most notable advance during the quinquennium in the number of members of the backward classes and Muhammadans receiving education.

The increase of female scholars during the last five years has been 31·6 per cent. against 16 per cent. of boys, while the proportion of expenditure on female education to the total expenditure on education has increased by ·9 per cent. only.

The educational expenditure showed an increase of 25 lakhs only, or 6·3 per cent. during the five years, and indeed in 1931-32 it was 21 lakhs less than in 1929-30.

2. University education.—No further progress was made during the quinquennium in the reconstruction of the Calcutta University on the lines laid down by the Sadler Commission or in the development of the Secondary Education Board. The outstanding feature of the period, so far as Calcutta was concerned, was the appointment of the University Organisation Committee. Their report formed the basis of the financial settlement, which was eventually reached between Government and the University and which, on certain conditions, assured the University of an annual recurring grant of Rs. 3,60,000. This has enabled the University to balance its budget and to make its plans for the future with some degree of stability.

At Dacca the most important event was the completion of the Salimullah Muslim Hall, which was constructed at the cost of Government and which provides a residence for Moslem students. Reference has already been made to the Dacca University Amendment Act of 1928.

The resolution issued in 1928 commented upon the marked fall in the number of students in the post-graduate classes of the Calcutta University. The number increased from 989 in 1926-27 to 1,483 in 1929-30, but fell again to 1,144 in 1931-32, the decrease corresponding to the period of economic and political troubles.

There was a gratifying increase in the number of women students in the post-graduate classes.

Another satisfactory feature has been the growing realisation of the importance of the extra-academic activities which University life offers; greater attention is now paid to the physical welfare and medical examination of the students, and the various athletic activities of the University have been co-ordinated under the auspices of the Calcutta University Athletic Club.

3. Collegiate education.—No new college was opened during the period, but 4 Anglo-Indian schools adopted the University course, and there are now 33 first-grade and 16 second-grade or Intermediate Arts Colleges, of which 4 are for women. Of these 12 are managed by Government, 21 are aided and 16 unaided. The total number of students decreased from 22,420 to 19,744. Nearly all the colleges shared in this decrease; but the Calcutta colleges naturally suffered less than those in the mufassal, which were more immediately affected by the depreciation in agricultural prices.

The decrease in the number of students living in hostels from 5,807 to 3,780 and the fall in the number of Moslem students from 3,131 to 2,565 may be attributed to the same causes: the decrease in the number of hostel boarders is a development requiring careful attention, as it means that more students are living in conditions which render effective control difficult.

The difficulties of the college authorities were increased, when Government found itself compelled to suspend the Imperial grant of Rs. 1,29,000 on which private colleges had become accustomed to depend for the purchase and renewal of laboratory and library equipment.

Increased rates of fees in all colleges appear to provide the only means of effecting a general improvement in college finances and in normal times would be completely justifiable, but whether at the present time such increase would impose undue hardships and result in decreased roll strength, thus defeating the object in view, is a matter that requires consideration.

The percentage of passes in the Intermediate and Degree Examinations has again increased.

There has been a more general recognition of the value of games and physical exercise, and it is gratifying to learn that more intensive tutorial work is being done in some of the colleges.

4. Secondary education for Indian boys.—The number of high schools increased from 985 in 1926-27 to 1,076 in 1931-32 and that of middle English schools from 1,616 to 1,845, while the number of middle vernacular schools fell from 74 to 54. The number of pupils increased from 233,343 to 256,524 in high schools and from 142,684 to 177,102 in middle English schools, and it decreased from 4,802 to 3,986 in middle vernacular schools. The waning popularity of the middle vernacular schools has not been so marked as in the preceding quinquennium; the average roll strength and consequently the fee income of those schools, which still survive, have increased and this, coupled with the greater importance now attached to the vernacular, may well continue to keep them alive. The increase in the number of the middle English schools is notable; the middle English school is generally cheaper and more accessible than the high school and, as boys who read beyond the primary stage generally desire to continue to the high stage, the middle English school is the natural channel through which they pass. The average strength of a high school remained almost exactly the same as at the end of the preceding quinquennium, namely, about 238; if this were the minimum instead of the average, the economic position of the schools would be reasonably satisfactory, but unfortunately there are schools with an enrolment of less than half this number and many with a roll strength which renders financial stability impossible without considerable assistance from external sources: this assistance is often not forthcoming.

Most boys who pass through the high school are aiming at the University; but only 41 per cent. of those in the highest class succeeded in passing the Matriculation during 1931-32, while 63 per cent. of those who passed that examination joined arts colleges. The other function of the high school, to provide a sound all-round training complete in itself as the requisite preparation for life, tends to be overshadowed by the obsession that Matriculation is the only goal.

The establishment of a Board to control secondary education has been delayed for various reasons, financial as well as other, and the control, except in the Dacca University area, is still shared between Government and the University of Calcutta.

In Bengal, unlike other provinces, the very large majority of schools are private schools, and of these private schools about half receive no grant from public funds; during the quinquennium under review more than fifty new unaided schools came into being. The existence of so many schools, over which little effective control can be exercised, must be regarded as one of the factors responsible for the low standard of secondary education in the province. Another contributing cause is the small proportion of trained teachers; only 19 per cent. of the teachers in secondary schools were trained, and, in spite of a considerable increase during the quinquennium, there is, on the average, not even one trained graduate teacher per school. The pay of the teachers in private schools is insufficient to attract the best type of men, and it is not strange that the teaching should lack vigour and inspiration. Higher fees would go far to remedy this and would lessen the necessity for private tuition.

Since 1930 the vernacular has been used as the medium of instruction and examination in all classes below class VII. The University has now decided definitely in favour of its use as the medium of examination for the Matriculation, and the regulations giving effect to this are now under the consideration of Government. The regulations also provide for the introduction of vocational subjects as compulsory: one problem will be the co-ordination and reconciliation of vocational and general education. The introduction of elementary science as a compulsory subject for the Matriculation is another important departure provided in the regulations.

The total expenditure on secondary education, which amounted to Rs. 1,07,37,075 in 1926-27, rose in 1931-32 to Rs. 1,22,01,808 of which about 18 per cent. came from public sources, 67 per cent. from fees and 15 per cent. from other sources.

5. Primary education for Indian boys.—The outstanding feature of the period was the enactment of the Rural Primary Education Act of 1930, and it is a matter of great regret that the serious economic depression and the financial stringency, which have prevailed, have prevented it from being brought into force.

The number of boys' primary schools increased from 38,187 to 43,718, the rates of increase being twice as rapid as in the previous quinquennium. The total number of pupils rose from 1,398,942 to 1,682,275. The number of Moslems in the primary stage increased by 20·4 per cent. in this period.

The spread of primary education, however, is not as satisfactory as the figures would imply: the wastage was very great and the number of those who read up to class IV was comparatively small: in fact according to the census figures of 1921 and 1931 the percentage of literacy actually fell during that period. When, however, the conditions under which such education is carried on are realised, it is hardly surprising that so little real advance has been made. The village environment and public opinion generally are not such as to encourage education and there is no immediate inducement to the attainment of literacy. On an average there is 1·5 teacher to each primary school, so that any individual attention is impossible even if the teachers are willing to give it. Most of the teachers are ill paid and untrained and there are no counterbalancing amenities to attract them.

It is indeed time that a systematic effort was made to remove the prevailing illiteracy, and it is hoped that it will be possible before long to use the machinery provided by the Primary Education Act for this purpose.

There has been a remarkable expansion of primary education in Calcutta where the Corporation has extended its scheme of free primary education and now has 146 boys' schools with 17,415 pupils. The total number of primary schools was 229 with 30,064 pupils. The expenditure rose from Rs. 3,17,262 to Rs. 11,44,075, and the Corporation has now received sanction to introduce a system of compulsory education in one ward.

6. Education of Indian girls and women.—The number of girls' schools increased by 19 per cent. and their enrolment by 28 per cent. during the quinquennium. There were 770 girls in colleges in 1931-32 against 364 in 1926-27, 10,655 in high schools against 4,801, 9,506 in middle schools against 8,269 and 518,544 against 396,056 in primary schools. The increase was again most pronounced in the college and high school stages. The progress still appears to be slow in comparison with that of boys and the wastage even greater. In the primary stage there are 3 girls to 10 boys, but the proportion falls to 1 to 24 in the middle stage and 1 to 30 in the high stage. The number of women in arts colleges in 1931-32 was 712 against 20,912 men; only 41 women were in medical schools and colleges and no more than 277 were undergoing training in normal schools or training colleges.

In spite of these figures, however, there are indications of a growing interest in the spread of women's education and of general appreciation of its importance. Apart from its direct effect upon education, the passing of the Sarda Act may be regarded as symptomatic of the new attitude towards female education, and a very great increase in the demand for facilities may be anticipated: the problem henceforth will be not so much to create the demand as to satisfy it.

There are four colleges for women and in addition several men's colleges have classes for women students. The number of women candidates, who passed University examinations, doubled itself at every stage. Eighty-eight secured the B.A. and 10 the M.A. degree.

The syllabus in girls' schools has been revised to include such subjects as music and domestic science, and games and drill have become popular features of the curriculum.

In 1931-32 there were 303,830 Moslem girls in public institutions, forming 56 per cent. of the whole as against 54 per cent. five years previously. The progress that has been made has been mainly in the lowest stages and only one in a hundred acquires literacy. There were 8 girls in colleges, 92 in the high stage and 225 in the middle stage. The Sakhawat Memorial Girls' School was raised to the status of a high school.

The establishment of more Government girls' schools and of a women's training college, to which reference is made elsewhere, has been held up by want of funds, but the demand for such facilities will compel an early solution of these problems, and it is still not too late to organise the whole scheme of women's education on a systematic and comprehensive basis.

The total expenditure on girls' institutions rose from Rs. 22,07,483 in 1926-27 to Rs. 29,39,000 in 1931-32; 57 per cent. of this came from public funds.

7. Muhammadan education.—The number of Muhammadan pupils rose from 1,139,949 to 1,437,655, i.e., by 26 per cent. They now provide 51·6 per cent. of the total number of pupils. Although the wastage is much greater among Muhammadan pupils, the perceptible increase in their proportions in the high and middle stages indicates that the community is realising the value of higher education and it is perhaps significant that 1,455 Muhammadan (or 12·8 per cent. of the total number of successful candidates) passed the Matriculation Examination in 1931 as against 817 (or 10·5 per cent.) in 1927.

The number of maktabas increased by 5,108 and their roll strength by 231,087 during the quinquennium. The numbers attending high and junior madrasahs were 5,004 and 51,852 in 1931-32 against 4,204 and 44,475 in 1926-27.

The most noteworthy events during the period were the completion of the Muslim Hall in the Dacca University in 1931, the raising of the Sakhawwat Memorial School to the status of a high school and the appointment in 1931 of the Moslem Education Advisory Committee. The Muslim Hall was constructed at the cost of Government to provide a residential hall for Moslem students; the Sakhawwat Memorial Girls' School, Calcutta, is the first and only Muslim Girls' High School in the province; the Moslem Education Advisory Committee was appointed to advise on the right lines of development for Muhammadan education and much benefit is expected to result from its recommendations.

8. European and Anglo-Indian education.—The number of institutions increased from 62 to 69 and the number of pupils from 10,821 to 11,586. The number of Indians in these schools has been steadily growing and in four schools the percentage of non-European pupils admissible has been raised from 15 to 25 per cent.

A new code of regulations was framed during the quinquennium: it provides for the classification of schools as primary, higher grade and secondary and alters the system of grants, which now include maintenance grants (based on attendance), teaching staff grants (to assist in the maintenance of an efficient and adequate staff), and fixed grants (for the education of orphans and other unprovided children), but owing to the want of money it has not yet been found possible to provide the sum necessary for the award of the maintenance grants. The new code also lays great stress on various forms of practical training in the higher grade schools.

The community suffered severely from the depression, and it was apprehended that many parents would be compelled to remove their children from school owing to their inability to pay the fees. The Calcutta Schools Emergency Fund, which was inaugurated by His Excellency the Governor and is maintained by private subscriptions, has done something to ease the situation by providing for the payment of the school fees in cases where this was absolutely necessary.

The tendency, noticed in the last resolution, among European and Anglo-Indian students to take advantage of University education has developed during the quinquennium. The recognition subject to certain conditions by the Calcutta University of the Cambridge Examinations as equivalent to the University Matriculation and Intermediate Examinations has encouraged this tendency, and there is every indication that University qualifications will be more largely sought after than in the past.

Four institutions in Calcutta and one in Darjeeling now have college classes affiliated to Calcutta University.

The total expenditure in 1931-32 was Rs. 36,73,251 as against Rs. 38,94,104 in 1926-27, a decrease of over two lakhs.

9. Education of special classes.—The number of pupils of the educationally backward classes attending schools and colleges rose by 27·8 per cent from 344,179 in 1926-27 to 440,054 in 1931-32. Rs. 1,27,000 was contributed from provincial revenue in 1931-32 to various societies and boards for the advancement of education among the backward classes. The number of Santhal pupils increased from 9,527 to 12,477.

The administrative control of the Reformatory and Industrial Schools, Alipore, was transferred to the Education Department in 1928; in addition to the general education which they receive at the schools, the boys are taught tailoring, carpentry and similar subjects. Special attention is given to moral instruction and to games and drill.

10. Professional and Technical education.—In the two training colleges for men there were 144 students in 1931-32 against 136 in 1926-27. While it is recognised that both of these colleges are doing excellent work the contribution which they are able to make to the replacement of untrained by trained teachers must necessarily be very gradual.

The Guru and Moallim-training schools produce about 1,500 trained teachers each year: and here again the facilities are inadequate to meet the demand. If the greatest possible benefit is to be derived from the Rural Primary Education Act it is essential that there should be an ample supply of trained teachers. The provision of additional facilities for training teachers in all grades of schools is therefore one of the most pressing problems. There are only five normal schools in the province, but the proposal that high school subjects should be taught through the medium of the vernacular suggests that such schools may be called upon to play a more important part in training teachers in future.

A scheme has been prepared for the establishment of a Women's Training College in Calcutta at a capital cost of Rs. 7½ lakhs and recurring cost of Rs. 81,000 a year, but financial conditions have prevented any further progress being made with it. As the Diocesan College propose to close their training class very shortly and the demand for trained teachers naturally increases, the problem will have to be faced. Twelve students passed the B.T. from the Diocesan and 8 from the Loreto training classes in 1931-32, and 7 students passed the L.T. from the latter.

The number of Law Colleges remains at 3, but their roll strength fell from 3,638 to 2,527.

Two medical schools were added during the period under review to the seven already in existence, viz., the Jackson Medical School at Jalpaiguri and the Chittagong Medical School. The number of students at the medical colleges and schools decreased from 3,898 to 3,736.

The number in the Bengal Veterinary College, Belgachia, rose from 125 to 169.

The Bengal Engineering College had an enrolment of 307 students (170 in the Civil Engineering, 73 in the Mechanical and Electrical Engineering and 64 in the Industrial or Artisan classes) in 1932 against 265 in 1927. The total expenditure on the college in 1931-32 was Rs. 3,98,599 of which Rs. 3,39,310 came from provincial revenues. Thirty-two students passed the B. E. in Civil Engineering and 45 the I. E. in 1932: the college now prepares students for the B.E. in Mechanical Engineering also.

The enrolment of the Ahsanullah School of Engineering increased from 440 in 1927 to 493 in 1932. The cost to Government on account of the school was Rs. 1,25,376 of which Rs. 87,354 was met by provincial revenues.

The Commercial Art Section of the Government School of Art continues to attract students. A school magazine, containing reproductions of work done by the staff and the students, is a useful and interesting innovation. The roll strength of the school fell from 335 in 1926-27 to 237 in 1931-32.

The recognition of the Final Commercial Course Examination at the Government Commercial Institute as equivalent to the I.A. Examination for admission to B.A. and B.Com. classes has had a noticeable effect on the numbers attending the Institute's day classes. The Institute had 365 students on its rolls in 1932 against 225 in 1927.

11. Physical and Moral Training.—A definite advance was made in the organisation of physical training, when in 1923 physical exercise was made compulsory in all grades of schools and a Physical Director was appointed to organise a scheme of physical training for schools in the province. His recommendations included the establishment of a physical training centre, which was not opened, however, until after the end of the period under review. Graduates with a diploma in physical education are being appointed, as funds permit, as physical instructors in place of the old type of drill and drawing master. The quinquennium has seen a very great impetus given to the organisation of games and physical exercise competitions. Government also gave grants to secondary schools and madrasahs for apparatus, medical inspection and the organisation of games, but one condition with which some of the schools found it difficult to comply was that they should themselves contribute at least double the amount of the grant. One great obstacle to the introduction of compulsory exercise or games is the absence of any provision for a midday meal, without which boys cannot be expected to enter wholeheartedly into such recreation at the end of the day.

It is to be regretted that there has been no marked improvement in the general health of students in college.

The Boy Scout movement, to which Mr. N. N. Bhose, the Provincial Organising Secretary, still continues to devote his time and energy, has maintained its steady progress and its strength increased from 6,293 to 7,730.

The Physical Directress to the Young Women's Christian Association, which receives a grant from Government for this purpose, also did valuable work in girls' schools both in Calcutta and in the mufassal. Girl guides are now found in many of the girls' schools in Calcutta and the movement is spreading to the mufassal. The Boy Scout and Girl Guide movements exercise a healthy moral influence, but otherwise the conditions under which most schools are carried on are not calculated to produce an atmosphere favourable to the development of the requisite character and initiative.

12. Conclusion.—The thanks of Government are due to the various officers who administered the Education Department during the quinquennium and to Rai Sahib Monoranjan Mitra and Mr. K. Zachariah for a very interesting report.

ORDER—ORDERED that copies of the resolution be forwarded to the Government of India, Department of Education, Health and Lands, to the Director of Public Instruction, Bengal, to all Commissioners of Divisions and to the Local Self-Government Department of this Government for information.

ORDERED also that the resolution, together with the report, be published in the Calcutta Gazette.

Eighth Quinquennial Review

on the

for the years 1927-28 to 1931-32.

CHAPTER I.

Introductory.

General statistics.—The Presidency of Bengal, excluding the Native States, has an area of 77,521 square miles and by the census of 1931 a population of 50,114,002; 26,041,698 males and 24,072,304 females.

I.—Population by religion and sex.

Hindus—
Male	11,299,914
Female	10,270,493
		21,570,407	(43·04 per cent.)
Muhammadians—

Female ..	13,297,482
		27,497,624	(54·8 per cent.)
Christians—
Male .	95,849
Female	84,450
		180,299
Others		865,672
Total		50,114,002

The Presidency contains 138 towns with a population of 3,684,330 and 86,618 villages with a population of 46,429,672. Calcutta contains nearly a third of the town-dwellers and there are only 37 other towns with a population of more than 20,000 each. The population is thus mainly rural, the ratio of rural to urban population being 12·6:1. There are 5 administrative divisions, 26 district boards and 118 municipalities.

II.—Percentage of males and females under instruction to total population.

	Men and boys under instruction to total male population.	Women and girls under instruction to total female population.	Both sexes under instruction to total population.	Total number including adults under instruction.	Approximate number of children of school-going age.

1931-32	8·53	9·32	5·55	2,783,225	7,517,100

From the table it will be seen that the percentage of scholars (including adults) of both sexes to total population has risen from 4.05 in 1921-22 to 5.55 in 1931-32. The percentage of 1926-27 is not accurate as it was calculated on the census of 1921. It is clear that about half the boys, and five out of six of the girls, of school-going age have not yet been drawn into schools.

General forces affecting education.—The period under review was disturbed by communal dissensions, political agitation and economic depression, which had their repercussions on education. The communal troubles produced a feeling of insecurity and caused a temporary drop in the enrolment in certain areas. Political disturbances have undermined discipline in many institutions as well as affected the numerical strength. But, perhaps, the most potent influence was that of the acute economic distress, which has been chiefly responsible for the drop in the rate of increase. Towards the end of the period, the spectre of retrenchment appeared again; educational expenditure had to be seriously curtailed and many projects which had received administrative sanction had to be postponed.

On the other hand, the forces of conservatism are gradually weakening; and changes in the social outlook of the people, such as found expression in the Sarda Act, have done much to encourage the diffusion of education, specially among girls.

Progress of the quinquennium.—(1) General.—In spite of difficulties and hindrances considerable progress was made in several directions. The most important advance was in the sphere of primary education. The Despatch of 1854 laid great stress upon primary education and in the next thirty years some attention was bestowed on it. In 1885 the responsibility for primary education was thrown on the local bodies, but the results were not very satisfactory. It remained for the period under review to see legislation enacted on primary education affecting the rural population of the country.

The amendment of the Act of 1919 empowering Government to authorise municipalities in specific cases to enforce compulsory attendance of girls is also an important measure. Both of these laws are fraught with immense possibilities for the future progress of education.

It is true that funds have not been available for putting the Primary Education Act into operation; but, even if funds had been forthcoming, the machinery of direction at headquarters would have taken some time to create. Some essential preliminary work has, however, been done. Accurate surveys of population density, suitable sites for schools in certain districts, and estimates of the cost of bringing the Act into operation, wholly or partly, have been worked out. To mention smaller matters, the public primary final examination at the end of class IV has been revived. Funds have also been provided for the increase of the pay of untrained teachers by Rs. 2 each.

The Education Despatch of 1854 urged that practical agriculture should be taught in schools; and, in the period under review, about eighty years after, a definite scheme of agricultural education in secondary schools was launched, with the triple object of giving a more practical turn to a system hitherto purely literary, of emphasising the dignity of manual labour and of providing a stimulus to agriculture for a population mainly agricultural.

Important measures have also been adopted which affect secondary education. The syllabuses of the two parts of Bengal have been unified and the new syllabus has been well received. A provident fund scheme for teachers of schools in non-pensionable service has been created and necessary funds provided.

The University School Code has been revised and brought more into line with the Government grant-in-aid rules. An Arbitration Board has been established to which teachers of secondary schools may appeal against the decisions of managing committees.

Macauley's famous Minute of 1835 which led to the introduction of the English medium of instruction and examination looked forward to the time when the vernacular would be used for the diffusion of western learning. After about a century, the province has now declared unmistakably in favour of the vernacular medium in schools.

As regards religious education, the principle of absolute neutrality laid down in the Minute of 1835 led to a complete secularisation of education. The new Primary Education Act provides for compulsory religious education in primary schools.

Girls' education has witnessed striking developments in the quinquennium, its rate of progress having, at some points, outstripped that of boys' education.

All classes in the country are showing a remarkable desire for education. The Muhammadan community sends a larger proportion of its boys to school than ever before. The backward classes and even the aborigines are rapidly making up for lost time.

The physical training of the youth of Bengal has been placed on a sounder basis. Medical examination showed that only a small proportion of Bengali boys enjoyed normal health, but the physical training that has been hitherto given in schools was not based on any well thought out scheme. It was confined for the most part to dull drill and a few games in which only a small number of boys took part. But in this quinquennium a comprehensive scheme of physical training has been worked out and put into operation. It provides also for a centre for training a class of efficient physical instructors.

Of several measures which have been taken to improve the internal working of the administrative machinery of the department, mention may be made of the revision and publication of the Bengal Education Code and the institution of the Examination in Accounts Rules and Practice for departmental officers. As to future progress, much depends on the improvement of the material condition of the country, the provision of adequate funds, and the restoration of a calmer atmosphere in which alone useful work can be done in educational institutions.

A short statistical analysis of the different branches of education is now given

(2) Primary education—The number of primary schools increased during the quinquennium by 15·8 per cent, which is greater than the increase recorded in the preceding period, 10·5 per cent. The total enrolment in the primary schools in 1931-32 shows an increase of 21·5 per cent. as against an increase of 21·2 per cent. in 1926-27. The average enrolment per school is, however, only 34·6.

The fluctuation in the enrolment of primary schools during the last seven years seems to vary more or less directly with the amount of grants made available in each year for primary education. For instance, in the preceding quinquennium, the rate of increase in the number of boys enrolled in primary schools was only 1·7 per cent. in 1925-26 before additional grants were sanctioned to supplement the pay of teachers in aided primary schools and maktabas for boys. An additional grant in 1926-27 resulted in an increase of 5 per cent. in the rate of enrolment in that year. In the period under review a similar grant was available only in the year 1927-28, and the percentages of increase of primary scholars were 7·6, 4·2, 1·9, 2·6 and 1·03, respectively, for the five successive years. Similarly, the rate of increase in the number of primary schools dropped from 5·3 per cent. in 1927-28 to 2·3 per cent. in 1931-32. The rate of increase in the enrolment was highest in the year 1927-28 when an increased aid was given; since then it has steadily declined. This decline had been anticipated. It was apprehended in the annual report for 1928-29 that unless additional grants were made the rate of increase would fall.

The problem of the general spread of literacy may perhaps be solved within a reasonable time by a wise policy and by a judicious combination of increased expenditure and propaganda in the towns and villages of Bengal.

(3) Secondary education—Bengal has the largest secondary system in India. It has 3,126 secondary schools, whereas the number of English secondary schools in the rest of British India was less than 4,000, according to the report of the Hartog Committee, in 1926-27.

The total number of secondary schools and their enrolment shows an increase, but the middle vernacular schools have not increased, for a purely vernacular education is not popular.

The increase in the number of high schools was due to the opening of new schools under private management and the raising of middle schools to high school status. There are now 1,076 high schools.

The average number of candidates from a high school for the Matriculation Examination of 1932 was only 15·5 and that of the successful candidates only 10·0. It seems probable that a smaller number of schools with a better distribution over the province would achieve the same results.

The problem of the control of secondary education still remains unsolved, but a draft Bill for a Secondary Board of Education has been prepared. The proposal of the Calcutta University to adopt the vernacular as the medium of examination for the Matriculation with effect from 1937 is now before Government.

(4) Collegiate education.—The Universities of Calcutta and Dacca continued to work during the period under review, each on its own characteristic lines. No decision has yet been arrived at with regard to the question of the reconstruction of the Calcutta University in accordance with the recommendations of the Sadler Commission. The report of the University on the draft Bill which had been prepared by the Education Department for the purpose has not yet been submitted to Government.

The growth of arts colleges seems to have been checked a little—4 new colleges only were opened in the period under review, as against 9 new colleges in the preceding quinquennium. The increase in the number of colleges has not led to an increase in the admissions, for there is a drop of 2,676 in the number of scholars. The average number of students per college fell from 498 in 1926-27 to 403 in 1931-32. This has had serious effects on the colleges which depend largely on the fee income, and, unless the situation improves, some of them may find it difficult to tide over the crisis.

(5) Professional education.—No noteworthy change has taken place in the sphere of professional education except that the Mechanical Engineering side at Sibpur Engineering College has been raised to the degree status. The two Universities continued to provide higher professional instruction leading to a Bachelor's or Master's Degree in Commerce, Law, Engineering, Medicine and Teaching. A degree of M.T. has been instituted at Dacca and a D.Sc. degree (Public Health) in Calcutta.

(6) Industrial, agricultural and lower professional education.—No noteworthy change has taken place in the sphere of vocational training, but the work of the preceding quinquennium has been consolidated during the period under review, specially in technical, weaving and agricultural education. New lines of advance have been chalked out, new methods of teaching have been evolved, the organisation has been changed at certain points. Agricultural education has received special attention, and a scheme for providing an agricultural training in some secondary schools has been put into operation.

This is a very interesting table. Certain communities have remained more or less static, while others have taken tremendous strides forward. The total number of Christians in the province is about 180,000 and the children of school-going age number a little over 25,000. We find nearly all of them actually receiving education. The same is more or less true of the "educationally advanced" Hindus. The number of their pupils has not shown much variation during the last decade. These two communities are educationally almost saturated. On the other hand, the "backward" Hindus are now fully awake to the need for education. For every one of their number at school in 1921, there are now more than 5. The advance of the Muhammadans is almost as startling: they have nearly doubled their enrolment and the percentage has risen from 3.5 in 1921-22 to 5.2 in 1931-32. It may safely be predicted that any future spread of education in Bengal will be chiefly among those two communities.

(2) Muhammadans.—The progress in the education of Muhammadans may be more accurately measured by the following figures. The proportion of Muhammadan scholars to the total number of scholars is now 51.6, which is not far from 54.8—the percentage of Muhammadans to the total population.

X.—Muhammadan pupils in different stages.

In unrecognised schools	30,903	31,599
		Total	1,140,140	1,437,978

The increase of scholars is, however, chiefly in the primary stage and it does not, necessarily, lead to a proportionate increase in the number of literates, on account of the wastage from stage to stage.

But still it is an indication of the educational awakening of the community. A further proof of this was furnished by the cordial approval which the Bengal (Rural) Primary Education Bill met from the cultivating classes, of which the majority are Muhammadans. The drop of 746 Muhammadan pupils in colleges is more than made good by a remarkable advance in the secondary stage in which a continuous decline had been noticed in the preceding periods. A committee was appointed by Government during the year 1930-31 under the presidency of Khan Bahadur Maulvi Muhammad Abdul Momin to suggest the right lines for the development of Moslem education in the presidency.

(3) Backward classes.—As we have seen, education is spreading fast amongst the backward classes. The Namasudras and Pods, especially, have taken full advantage of the facilities available and are helping themselves by founding their own schools and providing scholarships for their children. It may be noticed here that the advanced Hindus have lost ground in the primary and secondary stages, in which their enrolment was 631,531 at the end of the quinquennium as against 640,309 in 1926-27. The aboriginal races too, especially the Santals, have made much progress.

(4) Europeans.—The introduction of the new Code of Regulations for European schools (Bengal) has been a noteworthy event. The number of schools and boys and girls under instruction, specially of girls, has increased. More advantage is being taken of the facilities offered by the Calcutta University.

Education of women.—Considerable progress is noticeable in the education of women in all stages. There has been a large increase of girls in primary schools, relatively greater than that of boys; new girls' high schools have been started where there were none and women's sections have been opened in colleges to meet the growing demand for higher education for women.

XI.—Girls in different stages of instruction.

The rate of increase of male scholars during the five years from 1921-22 to 1926-27 was greater than that of female scholars. But the position has been reversed during this quinquennium, the rate of increase of female scholars being 31·6 per cent. and that of males only 16 per cent. The increase is most striking above the primary stage. In the higher stages, there are now 7 girls where, five years ago, there were only 3. But, when we remember that the total number of boys at school is more than four times the number of girls, it is evident that women's education still lags far behind. The proportion of expenditure on female education to the total expenditure on education has only increased from 11·2 per cent. in 1926-27 to 12·1 per cent. in 1931-32.

A striking feature is the comparatively small increase in educational expenditure during the period. Between 1921-22 and 1926-27, the total expenditure increased by nearly Rs. 64 lakhs or by 19.1 per cent.; between 1926-27 and 1931-32, it increased only by about Rs. 25 lakhs or by 6.3 per cent. This was due to the financial depression, for in 1929-30, the expenditure was nearly Rs. 4.44 lakhs or about Rs. 21 lakhs more than in 1931-32. Expenditure was cut down wherever possible and the fall in endowment diminished the fee income.

It is also worth noticing that the contribution from provincial revenues was actually less at the end of the period than at the beginning by about Rs. 3½ lakhs, although in the previous period it had increased by about Rs. 12½ lakhs. District boards spent almost the same amount in 1931-32 as in 1926-27. Municipalities, however, spent much more. Municipal expenditure on education was only Rs. 2,42,713 in 1921-22, but rose to Rs. 6,34,463 in 1926-27 and to Rs. 15,04,943 in 1931-32—a remarkable increase. This was almost wholly due to the Calcutta Corporation which spent Rs. 3,17,262 in 1926-27 and no less than Rs. 11,44,075 in 1931-32. There has been a considerable net increase in fees as well, about Rs. 18 lakhs altogether. Government expenditure has both absolutely and relatively declined. At the beginning of the period, provincial revenues met 31.47 per cent. of the expenditure on institutions for males, 46.70 per cent. on institutions for females and 37.19 of the total expenditure. In 1931-32, the percentage on institutions for males had fallen to 29.5, on institutions for females to 37.7 and on the total to 34.1. In the financial condition of the province, retrenchment was inevitable, but there is no doubt that it has arrested development.

When we compare the different fields of education, we find that the expenditure on colleges has actually decreased, but that on secondary and primary education has increased. About Rs. 20 lakhs more is now spent on secondary education and about Rs. 14½ lakhs more on primary education. In other words, the disparity between the expenditure on primary and on secondary education is becoming greater. In 1921-22 nearly Rs. 49 lakhs more was spent on secondary than on primary education; in 1926-27 about Rs. 61 lakhs more; in 1931-32 Rs. 66½ lakhs more. It was pointed out in the last report that there was a marked contrast between Bengal and the rest of India in this respect. In 1926-27, the other provinces spent Rs. 6.28 lakhs on primary education and Rs. 5.34 lakhs on secondary education, while Bengal spent Rs. 68 lakhs on primary and Rs. 1.28 lakhs on secondary education. There are no signs as yet that primary education is receiving its proper measure of financial aid.

Nor should we fail to note that female education is also relatively neglected. While the expenditure on primary and secondary schools for boys has grown by Rs. 26½ lakhs, that on girls' schools has increased by less than Rs. 8 lakhs. Of the total expenditure, women's education receives only a ninth part. Perhaps the most important educational task in Bengal is to redress these two glaring inequalities.

CHAPTER II.

Administration and control.

The Legislative Council and its control over education.—It was the intention of the Government of India Act to transfer education generally to a Minister appointed by the Governor from amongst the elected members of the Council. But the education of Europeans is a reserved subject administered by a Member of the Executive Council. The Council gets an opportunity to criticise educational policy and administration during the annual budget discussions and, by virtue of its powers to pass, amend, or reject the budget, can shape the educational policy of the province and control the distribution of funds placed at the disposal of the Education Department. One outstanding feature of the quinquennium was the wide range of topics covered by the questions asked in Council. The discussions showed an increasing mastery of facts regarding educational matters which augurs well for the future. The following may be mentioned as illustrative of the type of questions asked:—

The advancement of Moslem education, grants to schools for the depressed classes, the causes of the outbreak of strikes, compulsory physical training and military drill, medical inspection, provident funds for teachers in non-Government institutions, Sanskrit as an optional subject in secondary schools, the supply of literature regarding the League of Nations, agricultural training in secondary schools, the education of factory children, the establishment of girls' high schools in district headquarters, the deprovincialisation of schools, the training of teachers, public libraries, etc. These are broad questions, but there was also a tendency to ask questions on petty details of the internal administration of the department or of educational institutions.

Important motions and resolutions of the period 1927-32.—1. The Bengal (Rural) Primary Education Bill was before the Bengal Legislative Council from 1928. The greatest interest was evinced in the progress of this measure and it finally passed into law on the 26th August 1930 and subsequently received the assent of the Governor-General.

2. In the winter session of 1931 a motion for an amendment of the Act of 1919 was agreed to, by virtue of which the Local Government can now authorise a particular municipality to enforce the compulsory attendance of girls, if Government are satisfied with the arrangements made by the municipality.

3. Babu Amarendranath Ghose's resolution that the Government of India should be approached to transfer the proceeds of the export duty on jute to the province of Bengal to be spent on compulsory primary education, agriculture and sanitary improvement, was accepted by the Council.

4. Babu Saral Kumar Dutt's motion to refuse the demand of Rs 17,500 towards the salary of the Vice-Chancellor of the Calcutta University was agreed to.

5. The Dacca University Amendment Act of 1928 was passed. By this the Academic Council was made purely advisory in function and all executive powers were centred in the Executive Council of the University.

6. Dr. Pramathanath Banerjee's Bill for the re-constitution of the Senate of Calcutta University on a more popular basis did not make any headway after emerging from the Select Committee, as Dr. Banerjee retired from the Council.

The period was marked by frequent changes in the personnel of the Ministry of Education—

Up to August 1927—Minister: The Hon'ble Mr. Byomkesh Chakravarty.

From August 1927 to 21st February 1929—Minister: The Hon'ble Nawab Musharruf Hossain, Khan Bahadur, who relinquished charge on a no-confidence motion passed by the Council.

From 22nd February 1929 to 18th December 1929—Educational affairs were administered by His Excellency the Governor through his Executive Council.

From 19th December 1929—Minister: The Hon'ble Mr. Khwaja Nazimuddin, C.I.E.

The department was thus administered by three Ministers and the Governor. Such frequent changes obviously make it difficult to conceive and execute any bold policy of reform. Still, the passing of the Bengal (Rural) Primary Education Act in 1930 will remain a landmark in the history of educational development in the province.

Government control over education.—Government retain wide powers of control and supervision over all aspects of education from the primary to the university stage. This control is threefold—administrative, financial and academic. The relations between Government and non-Government educational authorities are adjusted by administrative and legislative Acts by which Government transfer control and responsibility to public bodies within definite limits. The legislative Acts passed during the period have already been referred to.

Academic control is concerned with the course of studies, withdrawal and transfer of scholars, qualifications of teachers, examinations, text-books, etc. It varies in degree as one passes from the primary to the university stage. It will be found that the chief instrument of Government control is the system of monetary aid to which certain conditions are attached and this control is exercised through executive as well as through educational officers. Commissioners and District and Subdivisional Magistrates often act as presidents of the committees of management of educational institutions.

The following table shows the number of institutions of all grades according to management:—

XV.—Institutions according to management.

During the period under review institutions under the direct control of Government decreased by 7. The board and municipal schools have increased by 471 and schools under private management by 8,109 (aided by 6,968, unaided by 1,141).

Control of primary education.—(1) Government.—The actual number of primary schools managed directly by Government is very small, only about one in 570. But this is no measure of the extent of Government control over primary education. The recognition of primary schools and makhtabs rests with the department, which also prescribes the syllabus and text-books, frames rules for admission, withdrawal, examination and promotion of pupils. Government have thus large powers over primary schools.

(2) Local bodies.—The district boards are largely responsible for primary education in rural areas and municipalities in urban areas. Some district boards have delegated to local boards the power to pay stipends to teachers, an arrangement which, it is reported, often causes unnecessary delay.

The powers and functions of the district boards were defined by the Local Self-Government Act of 1885 and the statutory rules framed by Government under that Act.

The control of district boards over primary schools is exercised mainly through the conditions attached to grants. Grants are given by them partly from their own funds and partly from contributions for the purpose from provincial revenues. Generally speaking, Government does not give grants direct to primary schools. The district boards are thus able to impose their own conditions and in one district all lower primary schools are allowed to have only a single teacher each. The District Inspector represents Government on the Boards' Education Committee and plays the role of educational adviser to the local bodies. But he has no control over the deliberations of the committee and his recommendations are not always acted on. The local body may, and does, give grants to schools against his advice.

The grants given from district funds to education amounted to Rs. 16,41,190 in 1926-27. In 1929-30, the total rose to Rs. 17,77,842, but fell again to Rs. 16,48,662 in 1931-32. The reduction of income from cess has been responsible either for temporary diversions of educational allotments or for cuts in the education budget of district boards. One board was found to have spent less than was required by the conditions attached to Government grants; in another case, the diversion of Government money to non-educational purposes was detected.

Local bodies are also apt to encourage quantity rather than quality. The average amount of grant is very moderate and any reduction of it affects efficiency. The number of schools is, however, increasing; and it is time to consider whether aid should not be so distributed as to secure the financial stability and efficiency of a reasonable number of schools rather than be spread thinly over a very large number.

For inspection some district boards employ inspecting pandits and maulvis working under the departmental staff. The Government sub-inspectors are, to a certain extent, responsible to the chairmen of the district boards.

Powers have been delegated to union boards where they have come into existence to start and maintain primary schools. It is yet too early to appraise their activities.

The relations between the department and the municipalities are not very clearly defined. There is no officer of the department on any municipal board, but the educational budgets of the municipalities are prepared in consultation with the District Inspector of Schools, approved by the Inspector of Schools, and sanctioned by the Commissioner of the Division. A municipality which has the necessary enthusiasm and zeal in the cause of education may now seek the aid of the Primary Education Act of 1919 to enforce compulsion and levy an education cess.

In this connexion it is worth while quoting the conclusion of the Hartog Committee about the control of primary education: "We feel that for the healthy advance of primary education a change is desirable. It is obviously right that local affairs should be managed by local authorities; and it is not unreasonable that, in the early stages, mistakes should be made by inexperience. But we are of opinion that education is a national service and that the State cannot divest itself of its responsibility in the matter; and all the more is this so in a parliamentary system of government, in which the Minister has very definite responsibilities to a Legislative Council which votes the money and has a right to know how it is spent. If the goal of universal and compulsory education is to be reached, the Minister must be in a position to supervise, and to control, where necessary, the activities of local authorities."

(3) Private enterprise.—Special mention should be made of the various missionary bodies, Indian and non-Indian, which render valuable service to the cause of education, especially that of girls and backward communities. Christian missions certainly lead the way and amongst Indian organisations the activities of the Society for the Improvement of Backward Classes, the Nari Siksha Samity and the Saroj Nalini Memorial Association deserve mention. Railway authorities also help the cause of education by maintaining schools at important railway centres. Bodies like these generally seek aid and accept the conditions attached.

Mention may be made here of the educational activities of the Naogaon Ganga Cultivators' Co-operative Society, Ltd. The society gave aid to 50 schools (high schools 3, madrasah 1, middle English school 1 and primary schools 45) to the amount of Rs. 11,866 in 1931-32.

The following table gives statistics of the educational activities of the various missions:—

*Including two colleges.

The resources of missions and philanthropic bodies have dwindled considerably during the period, inasmuch as private charity was not forthcoming as largely as before on account of the worldwide trade depression and the fluctuations of the exchange. Unless trade revives and the economic condition improves, their activities will probably have to be curtailed.

Control of secondary education.—Control over secondary education is divided between Government acting through its executive officers and the Education Department, the University of Calcutta and the Board of Intermediate and Secondary Education, Dacca. A few schools are managed by district boards and municipalities.

(1) The Board of Intermediate and Secondary Education, Dacca.—The Board was created in 1921 as a temporary measure, with a view partly to circumvent a legal difficulty that arose consequent on the removal of the Dacca University area from the control of the Calcutta University and partly to effect improvements in intermediate and secondary education in the spirit of the recommendations made by the Sadler Commission. The Board consists largely of nominees of Government. Its academic control extends over the four intermediate colleges and the 15 high schools in the Dacca University area and also over the 3 Islamic intermediate colleges and 27 high madrasahs in the province. The Government inspecting staff is responsible for inspection.

The average total cost of the Board was Rs. 54,120 a year and the average net cost to Government Rs. 25,082. It has been contended that the results achieved have not been commensurate with the expenditure involved. It is difficult to appraise its results in view of its financial handicaps and its jurisdictional disabilities. To quote from the previous review, "the Board cannot go on as it has done and the cry has been raised 'End or extend.' " The constitution of a Provincial Board of Secondary Education has been drafted. It is overdue in the true interests of secondary education. The control of high schools in Dacca will automatically pass to such a Board if a Secondary Education Bill is passed by the Council. The future control of the intermediate colleges and high madrasahs has not yet been settled.

(2) Calcutta University.—The University exercises academic control over high school education in Bengal by its power of recognition of high schools (outside the Dacca University area) as qualified to prepare and send up candidates for the Matriculation Examination held by the University. This examination is a preliminary to the higher University examinations, success in which is the passport to Government service and other employments and has a social value much beyond its intrinsic merits. Secondary education is thus under the dual control of the Government and the University which do not always have the same standards of efficiency. The immense preponderance of privately-managed aided and unaided institutions in the province makes the situation very acute. The University has been charged with lowering the standard of examination, and granting recognition too easily in the face of the adverse reports by the Government inspecting staff. The inspectors point out that the minimum requirements for the purpose of recognition do not exist in a good many schools.

During the last five years, however, the University has attempted to effect some improvements by revising the regulations relating to the Matriculation Examination, by introducing a revised School Code and by constituting an Arbitration Board to safeguard the interests of teachers. But these measures do not go far enough. Secondary education in Bengal is still unsatisfactory. Bengali boys do not get from it a sound training either in will or intellect. It is hoped the proposed Secondary Board will solve the question of control by co-ordinating the controlling agencies, the department, the University and private bodies. It is further hoped that this Board will have sufficient funds at its disposal to bestow help where help is needed. It will be possible then to insist on a higher standard, on the appointment of better qualified and better paid teachers, on a judicious system of recognition and a better distribution of schools over the province.

(3) Government control.—Government control over aided schools is secured by attaching certain conditions to aid in respect of the constitution of managing committees, the remuneration and appointment of teachers, the buildings, etc. The District Magistrate and Subdivisional Officers often act as presidents of managing committees of schools and their approval of the constitution of managing committees is required for the purpose of an aid. Government prescribes the syllabus and text-books for all classes except the two top classes of high schools. The University syllabus and text-books are followed in these classes. The unaided schools are expected to adopt and, in fact, do largely adopt the departmental curricula and text-books, and the rules for admission, withdrawal, promotion and examination. The fear of forfeiting the scholarship and examination privileges secures compliance with the departmental rules. During the period under review warnings had to be given to some schools which indulged in undesirable extra-academic activities.

The organisation of the Education Department.—The headquarters staff was strengthened by the addition of a Physical Director for five years from the 13th November 1928 and the post of the Additional Assistant Director of Public Instruction has been renewed annually. In other respects it remained the same as in the previous quinquennium. The hierarchy of the different classes of officers of the department is indicated below:—

The Secretary must, by statute, be a member of the Indian Civil Service. The Assistant Secretary is, as a rule, an officer of the Bengal Civil Service. In the last report, reference was made to the suggestion that the post of Director should be abolished and that the Secretary should act also as Director. Since then, the question has been discussed in the Hartog Committee's Report, where it is shown that the reasons which once justified the existence of the Secretary are no longer valid. The more the educational system develops, the greater is the need for expert direction and control. What is needed is not the abolition of the Directorate but its strengthening. "We are of opinion," said the Hartog Committee, "that the headquarters staffs are lamentably inadequate, and that the preparation of schemes of policy for consideration by the Minister has been seriously hampered by this inadequacy. Neglect to provide a proper staff leads not to economy, but to extravagance."

The educational services.—The officers of the Education Department are divided into different services.

(1) Indian Educational Service.—The Director of Public Instruction and the Assistant Director of Public Instruction belong to the Indian Educational Service. Recruitment to the Indian Educational Service has for some years been stopped by orders of the Secretary of State. It has been proposed to replace it by a Provincial Educational Service of superior grade, and the delay in the formation of the new service has caused considerable disappointment. Vacancies in the Indian Educational Service are now either kept in abeyance or filled on a contract system on a special rate of pay or filled by the officers of the Bengal Educational Service on their own pay. The number of posts in the men's branch remains the same, namely, 67 (excluding the post of the Director) on paper. But the actual number is steadily dropping; only 22 posts out of 67 are now held by permanent members of the service and 3 on an officiating basis. Three posts are in abeyance, 10 posts are lying vacant and 29 have been filled on the Bengal Educational Service basis on a special rate of pay. Of the 25 posts, 11 are held by Europeans and 14 by Indians.

Women's branch.—The cadre of the women's branch of the Indian Educational Service consists of four appointments of which three are in the ordinary grade and one in the selection grade. Those in the ordinary grade are filled, one by an Indian officiating in the Indian Educational Service, one by an officer on a special rate of pay and one by a European on special contract. The pay of the service is Rs. 400—25—800 and that of the selection grade Rs. 900—25—950—50—1,050.

(2) Bengal Educational Service.—One Bengal Educational Service post was created for the Superintendentship of the Rajshahi Madrasah. Three Bengal Educational Service posts, belonging to the Sanskrit College, the Krishnagar College and the Rajshahi College, respectively, were reduced to the Subordinate Educational Service grade. Three posts of the defunct Dacca College were removed from the list. Thus the permanent strength of the cadre on 31st March 1932 was 211 against 216 on 31st March 1927, and the temporary Bengal Educational Service posts on the same date were 16 as compared with 1 on 31st March 1927. Eleven posts had to be created to provide for the appointment of officers against vacancies in the Indian Educational Service.

In the women's branch, there was no change. There were 20 posts on 31st March 1932.

The number of special posts on 31st March 1932 was 42 against 41 on 31st March 1927. Two posts were added, by the appointment of the Physical Director from 13th November 1928 and by the transfer of the post of the Superintendent, Reformatory and Industrial School, Alipore, to the Education Department, while one temporary post was abolished on the expiry of the term of the appointment.

The number of posts outside the classified list on 31st March 1932 was 19 as against 11 on 31st March 1927.

(3) Subordinate Educational Service.—The table below shows the strength of the Subordinate Educational Service posts, teaching, inspecting, ministerial and miscellaneous:—

XVII.—Posts in the Subordinate Educational Service.

	31st March 1927	31st March 1932.

Inspecting	.. 327	316
Ministerial	.. 403	420
Miscellaneous	.. 80	97 (including 10 posts held in abeyance)

Inspecting agency.—Strength and duties.—An Inspector of Schools is attached to each administrative division of the presidency. He is responsible for all educational matters within his division except colleges, some madrasahs and European schools, which are under the control of the Principals, the Dacca Board of Secondary Education, and Inspector of European Schools. The Divisional Inspectors were granted during the quinquennium a special pay of Rs. 150 per mensem each. The Inspector is assisted by one or two Second Inspectors and one Assistant Inspector of Schools for Muhammadans. The District Inspector is in general charge of educational administration in the district. He controls all institutions except high schools and senior madrasahs, and supervises the work of Subdivisional Inspectors under him. He has long ceased to be an ex-officio member of the district board, but he is still a member of the board's Education Committee. His position, as has already been shown, is rather anomalous. The Subdivisional Inspectors inspect middle English schools, junior madrasahs and guru-training schools; and supervise sub-inspectors under them. They form a useful link between the District Inspector and the sub-inspector, whose chief business is to inspect primary schools and maktabas. There are besides, in certain districts, assistant sub-inspectors and inspecting maulvis for primary education. These posts are to be abolished gradually as vacancies occur, in pursuance of the recommendations of the Bengal Retrenchment Committee; 15 out of 27 such posts have already been abolished. The Inspector's jurisdiction is divided into circles comprising one or more districts. Each circle is placed under a second Inspector of Schools and the Inspector may delegate, with the permission of the Director of Public Instruction, powers other than those relating to appointment, and finance to a Second Inspector. The Assistant Inspector for Muhammadan Education submits his reports, in the first instance, to the Second Inspector whose circle contains the schools reported on and the Second Inspector transmits the report to the Inspector for consideration. The following table shows the strength of the inspectorate in the different divisions:—

Efficiency of inspection.—The strength of the subordinate staff has decreased, but the number of schools to be inspected by the staff has increased. In consequence, the number of schools which a sub-inspector of schools is expected to visit during the course of the year has increased considerably, especially in East Bengal. The conference of Directors at Allahabad some years ago laid down 100 schools as a reasonable number for a sub-inspector, but in Chittagong district a sub-inspector is responsible for 380 schools and in Rajshahi Division for 323 schools. It is physically impossible for one man to inspect so many schools properly in one year. Besides inspection, the sub-inspector of schools has many other duties. The Hartog Committee's remarks in this connection are worth pondering—"The inspecting staff should be both strong in quality and quantity if improvement is to be secured and wastage reduced."

It is worthwhile to mention that the inspectorate during the period took an active interest in teaching. Khan Bahadur Moula Baksh carried out certain experiments to obtain standard tests and Rai Bahadur K. C. Roy initiated a system of intensive inspection and active participation in teaching work in a few selected schools which has resulted in increased efficiency. It may be noted that in some divisions as many as four Inspectors were in charge during the last five years. Frequent transfers are prejudicial to the interests of the division and allow no opportunity to the Ins. to carry out reforms.

CHAPTER III.

Primary education—Indian boys.

I.—The provision for primary education.—(a) The number of schools.—The number of boys' primary schools increased during the period from 38,187 to 43,718, an increase of 5,531 schools or 14·4 per cent. In the previous quinquennium, the increase was only 2,572 schools or 7·2 per cent. The rate of increase was, therefore, twice as rapid as before; and it would have been even greater but for the economic difficulties and the reduction of educational expenditure. In 1927-28, the increase was 5·3 per cent., and in the following years 3·1, 2·7, ·8 and 2·3 per cent., respectively. The growth from period to period is in more than arithmetical progression, the speed is accelerating, and this is, so far, satisfactory. The expansion was not, however, equal in all parts of the province, as the following table will show:—

XIX.—Number of boys' primary schools in each division.

Presidency	6,437	7,696	1,259
Calcutta	415	477	62
Burdwan	8,603	9,321	628
Dacca	9,762	11,810	2,048
Rajshahi	6,814	7,782	968
Chittagong	6,066	6,632	566

The following table shows the distribution of schools according to management:—

XX.—Boys' primary schools according to management.

	1926-27.	1931-32

Local bodies	3,783	4,211
Aided	29,984	31,719
Unaided	4,323	4,705
Total	38,187	43,718

A few tea estate schools in Jalpaiguri district which were shown as managed by Government in 1926-27 are now returned as "aided"; hence the decrease under that head.

(b) The number of pupils.—The total number of pupils in primary schools for Indian boys rose from 1,398,942 in 1926-27 to 1,682,275 in 1931-32. Here, again, the rate of progress was arrested in the last years. In 1927-28, the increase was 7·6 per cent. and in 1931-32 only 2·8 per cent. A few of the pupils were girls; the number of boys in primary schools was 1,596,866. Including the lower classes of secondary schools, the total number of all boys in the primary stage was 1,781,050 at the end of the period.

When we compare the different communities, we find that the Muham-madans have made the greatest relative progress. The number of Moslems in the primary stage rose from 793,653 in 1926-27 to 955, 938 in 1931-32 or by 20·4 per cent., while the number of Hindu pupils increased only by 3·5 per cent., from 776,772 to 804,062. Even this increase is to the credit of the backward rather than of the advanced Hindus; the latter have lost more than a quarter of a lakh of boys in the primary stage during the period.

The fact is, as already suggested, that the men of the bhadralok classes are nearly all literate and their numbers under education are not likely to increase at a higher ratio than the population. According to the census of 1921 (all the figures for 1931 are not yet available), the total male literacy in the province was 15·9 per cent. and the literacy in English under 3 per cent. But the corresponding figures for the chief bhadralok classes were as follows:—

XXI.—Literacy in bhadralok castes.

Caste.	Percentage of literacy.		Percentage of literacy in English.
Barlya	82·2	51·3
Brahmin	72·9	27·9
Kayastha	62·6	25·6

To put it in another way, among males, nearly a quarter of all literates and nearly half of all literates in English belonged to these classes, although they formed only an eighteenth part of the whole population.

(c) The adequacy of the provision.—We proceed now to examine whether the existing provision of schools is adequate to the needs of the province. The last census reports nearly 87,000 villages and towns in the province, but it should be remembered that more than half of these are small hamlets and that three-fourths of the population live in villages with more than 500 inhabitants each. Nor should it be forgotten that there is, on the average, more than one village to one square mile and that, except in the districts of Chittagong, the Chittagong Hill Tracts, Jalpaiguri, Darjeeling, Khulna and the 24-Parganas, the villages are very near each other. In other words, if there were schools in every large village and town, probably five-sixths of the population would have the means of education within easy reach. It may be said with confidence that there are in Bengal at present nearly as many school-units for boys as are needed. The table below shows that, with the exception of Rajshahi, every other division is well supplied with schools:—

XXII.—Proportion of boys' primary schools to area and number of villages.

Division.	Area in square miles served by one school.		Number of towns and villages served by one school.
	1926-27.	1931-32.	1926-27.	1931-32.
Presidency	2·7	2·2	2·1	1·6
Dacca	1·5	1·25	1·8	1·7
Rajshahi	2·7	2·4	3·4	3·03
Chittagong	1·9	1·8	1·1	1·1
Burdwan	2·0	1·5	2·5	2·4

Let us put the argument in another way. By the last census, the total number of males of school-going age was 3,906,254 and the number of boys in primary schools was 1,596,866 in 1931-32. That is, 40·8 per cent. of those who should be at school were actually there. If we take all the boys in the primary stage, the percentage is as high as 45·6. Now the average strength of a primary school was 38·4 in 1931-32 (as against 36·6 in 1926-27). There is no reason, however, why a school should not have 70 or 80 pupils, if there is sufficient accommodation and the necessary teachers. If each school could double its numbers, we should have practically universal education for boys.

Or, we can approach the question from yet another angle. In 1931-32, there were 957,406 boys in class I. Now, the normal proportion of decrease from class to class may be reckoned at a sixth, which would include the incidence of mortality as well as the losses resulting from other causes. On this basis, taking 100 as the strength of the first class, there should be 359 in the first five classes, provided there is no abnormal wastage and stagnation. Thus, if the boys who join the infant class remain at school for five years, there would be no fewer than 3,437,000 in primary classes, that is, 88 per cent. of the male school-going population.

From this enquiry it would appear that the problem is not so much how to provide more school-units or to draw children to school, but how to retain them till they are literate and how to give them efficient instruction. It is a problem of quality, not of quantity.

II.—The quality of primary school teaching.—(a) Tests of efficiency.—We have, then, to ask whether the instruction now given is really efficient. Certain tests may be applied to judge its efficiency. First, there is the test of literacy. The least that a school can do is to make its pupils literate; if it does not do that, it has no justification. But, in Bengal, literacy instead of spreading is, in fact, dwindling. In 1921, the percentage of literate males was 15·9; in 1931, it was only 15·75. Whatever allowances we make for variations in the census standard of literacy, this decrease is extremely disquieting. But careful observers had already discerned the tendency. A child can scarcely become permanently literate unless he is in the fourth primary class at least. But the number of pupils in class IV in 1931 was only 118,771 and this included those in secondary schools as well as those in primary schools. This number is barely sufficient to make up for the losses caused by death each year among the literate population; and it is obvious that the number of literates cannot grow in these circumstances. Roughly speaking, one may say that the primary schools do not produce literacy. Many of them are only lower primary schools, with only three classes, and their contribution is negligible. The fact is that most of the bhadralok classes attend secondary schools from the beginning and become literate; the backward classes and Moslems constitute the bulk of the pupils of primary schools and they do not become literate. In class I, there are three Moslem boys to each boy from the advanced Hindu castes, but in class IV the latter are more numerous.

Nor do these schools do much to prepare children for their avocations. The great majority of the people are and must remain agriculturists, and primary education does not help them, to any appreciable extent, to become better agriculturists. On the contrary, it often gives them a distaste for work on the land and lures them to the towns and to other occupations. The small number who are made literate are thus tempted away from the countryside. The rural districts are drained of their most intelligent or enterprising inhabitants and the level of culture, work and living in the villages remains unchanged.

It follows that the education given neither equips the rural child for his traditional pursuits nor raises the general level of community life. At present, the village is generally no place for the educated person nor does he make any attempt to stay there. The system has not succeeded, with exceptions which are rare and local, in making the school the general centre of the life of the village and a means of social and political education.

(b) Conditions of efficiency.—(1) Environment and public opinion.—The home environment, at any rate in villages, is generally not such as to encourage education. The parents are, as a rule, themselves uneducated; there are no books and no real atmosphere of culture in the home. Nor is the general village environment any more helpful. The proportion of literates in the village is not large enough to make education seem a necessity to the average villager. There is not much community work that requires literacy for its transaction. The whole plane of village life is on the level of traditional occupations and inherited instincts, which do not presuppose education of the available kind.

On the other hand, there has been in recent years a very considerable awakening to the need for education among classes hitherto backward. What had been the monopoly of the higher Hindu castes is now craved by the lower castes and by Moslems. But they do not always know exactly what they want, and, asking for bread, generally get a stone.

(2) The duration of school life.—The full primary course in Bengal is for five years. But, as has been shown, a very large number of the schools are lower primary schools which have only three classes. The old public examination at the end of the primary course has been revived and was first held in November 1927. In 1931, 13,956 candidates appeared for this primary (maktab) Final Examination and 8,884 were successful. The examination is gradually growing in popularity and may arouse a healthy rivalry between schools and help to arrest wastage.

Although the full course lasts five years, the great majority of children begin and end with the first class; they are withdrawn before they proceed any further. Most parents regard the school as a convenient creche and teachers are glad to make up anyhow the requisite number of pupils for earning a grant. There is one beneficial result—for the practice, as the Inspector of Schools, Burdwan, says, “brings the children from home to an environment where at least the first elements of communal living and the first principles of manners” are learnt.

But no one can regard with equanimity the enormous amount of wastage. The following table shows that out of every 100 boys who entered class I in 1928 only 10·6 reached class V in 1932—the rest had stumbled or fallen by the way:—

XXIII.—Pupils in primary classes in successive years.

Year.		Class.	Number of pupils.
1928	..	I	885,432
1929	..	II	341,350
1930	..	III	246,421
1931	..	IV	112,789
1932	..	V	94,030

On behalf of the Hartog Committee, a careful study was made of the amount of wastage and stagnation in a considerable number of schools of different types in Bengal. It is interesting to compare the urban secondary schools and the rural primary schools in these respects. Taking the four lowest classes, in the former only 4·2 per cent. of the children remained in a class for more than a year, in the latter 20·1. The proportion of children in classes II—IV to those in class I was 836:100 in the town secondary school and only 81 in the rural primary school. In the former 58 per cent. of the pupils were promoted from class I to class II, in the latter only 16·9 per cent. The primary schools in town and country and the rural secondary schools are most wasteful. Only about one child in ten in them goes through the primary stage without wasting at least a year, whereas in urban secondary schools two children in three accomplish this feat.

There has been, however, some little improvement, as is shown by the following table:—

XXIV.—Number and percentage of boys in primary classes by religion.

	Total number of boys in the primary stage.	Lower primary stage.		Upper primary stage.
		Infant, I and II.		III and IV.
1926-27.		Pupils.	Per cent.	Pupils.	Per cent.
Hindus	776,772	671,897	86·5	104,875	13·5
Muslims	793,653	752,356	94·8	41,297	5·2
1931-32.
Muslims	955,757	876,817	91·8	78,940	8·2

The number in the infant class has actually diminished by about 22,000. It will be noticed that the wastage is greater among Moslems than among Hindus. The Inspector of Schools for Burdwan Division is of the opinion that about two-fifths of the children in the infant class are not ready for school at all—they are at school merely to be out of the way at home. He considers also that the upper primary schools have greater retaining power than the lower primary schools. This is inherently probable and is undoubtedly the fact. In spreading literacy, the lower primary schools are almost wholly useless.

Figures are, unfortunately, not available to show the numbers of upper and lower primary schools in the province. In one division, it was found that 85 per cent. of the schools were lower primary; and the proportion is probably much the same for other divisions. The preponderance of such schools accounts in part—but only in part—for the extraordinary decrease in numbers between the third and fourth school years; many children, when they finish the lower primary course, have no higher school in the vicinity to attend. But three years of schooling are insufficient to impart permanent literacy, secure from any danger of relapse. This fact does not appear to have been recognised and even the panchayati union schools are all only of the lower primary standard. Any scheme for reconstruction should aim first at the substitution of upper primary for lower primary schools, by improvement or amalgamation.

(3) The teaching.—One of the conditions of good teaching is that each class should receive sufficient attention from the teacher. And what makes the lower primary schools even more futile is the fact that nearly all of them have only a single teacher. In fact, one district board has refused to allow more than one teacher each in lower primary schools. Educationally, such a policy is most mischievous, for the ordinary teacher, untrained in the methods of "plural teaching," neglects the infant class, where, in fact, the best teaching is necessary and where it would be most fruitful. The proportion of single-teacher schools is higher in Bengal than in any other province. In 1926-27, no fewer than 76 per cent. of the schools in Bengal had only one teacher each and the average number of teachers per school was 1·24 to 2·59 in Bombay and 1·87 in Madras. There has been a little improvement. The number of teachers in boys' primary schools has risen from 52,822 in 1926-27 to 65,435 in 1931-32, which now gives an average of 1·5. But in one division 80 per cent. of the schools are still single-teacher schools, and in nearly every lower primary school the teacher has to teach three classes simultaneously. Thus, first, we have schools which are not likely to make pupils literate; and, secondly, we destroy whatever chance of literacy there may be by a system of teaching that is equivalent to a system of neglect. The lower primary schools in Bengal remind one of the old nursery rhyme of the old woman who lived in a shoe; the last line supplies an alternative not much worse than the present method!

Most of the teachers remain untrained. In 1926-27, Bengal, in this respect also, was at the bottom of the list of provinces. The trained teachers have increased from 14,261 to 19,379 during the period, but the rate of increase is still slow. Of the untrained teachers there are, it is reported, many who cannot even read correctly or with ease and it is idle to expect them to teach their pupils efficiently.

The fact is that the conditions of service of the primary school teacher are such that the profession can scarcely attract any but those who are driven into it in despair as the last refuge of the unemployed. This is particularly true of the rural districts. Life in the village is not congenial to an educated man; there are scarcely any prospects, no intellectual stimulus, no cultured society. The pay is not enough to live on in any comfort. The average pay in a school under public management rose from Rs. 11·8 in 1926-27 to Rs. 15·2 in 1931-32, but in private schools it fell from Rs. 8·2 to Rs. 6·4. The panchayati union teacher receives only Rs. 10. The average salary in Bengal is the lowest in all India. The teacher is compelled to find other sources of income to supplement his pittance and 269 of them acted as school postmasters, receiving an additional remuneration of Rs. 6 to Rs. 15 per month. Often, the teacher is a stranger with no attachments to the village. His status is lower than that of any substantial farmer. Government provided additional grants to the amount of Rs. 5,51,000 for paying Rs. 6 to a trained teacher and Rs. 2 to an untrained teacher in addition to their income from local funds, but this sum is wholly inadequate. Here, as elsewhere, cheap labour is ineffective labour.

(4) Inspection.—However well qualified or trained the teacher may be, he would need to be encouraged and stimulated from time to time by expert and sympathetic supervision. But we find, in fact, that inspection is becoming perhaps rather less, than more, effective. In 1927, the sub-inspector in Bengal had more schools on the average to inspect than his colleague in any other province. The number of schools has increased, but the number of inspectors has decreased a little. There are now 256 sub-inspectors and sub-assistant inspectors (as against 262 in 1926-27). In Chittagong district a sub-inspector is responsible for 380 schools and in Rajshahi Division for 323 schools. No man can do so much conscientiously or usefully. But, besides inspection, he has to attend to other duties; he is the pivot of the whole system. He is also the Cinderella of the department. He has no office, not even a peon. The substitution of daily allowance for mileage has brought him no relief, for the daily allowance of Rs. 2 barely covers the cost of conveyance. In some cases, the boat and travelling allowances were cut down. The axe of retrenchment always falls first on the inspectorate. The reason is perhaps that the visit of the inspector is regarded as of little use, as a visitation rather than as helpful supervision. The inspector is regarded by the teacher as an enemy come to spy out the land, to criticise, not as a friend to appreciate and encourage. This is the result, partly of the hurried nature of the inspection, partly of a bad tradition, partly of the lack of a proper understanding of their functions by the inspectors themselves. They are often unsuited to the work, graduates who have undergone secondary training but have little conception of the problems of primary education, men of the town with no idea of the needs of a rural school, men bound by the routine of official procedure and the letter of education codes, without much imagination or freshness of mind. It is surprising that under such conditions so much work is loyally and often competently done. The problem of inspection can be solved not by cutting down the number of inspectors, but probably by recruiting and training in large numbers men of a different and perhaps less expensive type.

(5) The curriculum.—The new curriculum extending over five years has been in operation since 1923. It is an improvement on the old one, but there are too many compulsory subjects to be tackled by a single teacher. The gradation of classes corresponds to that of secondary schools, which is probably responsible for the fact that the course is beyond the capacity of the average teacher. Some subjects are thus neglected. Nature study and observation lessons have often little connexion with either observation or nature; hygiene is learnt by rote in unhygienic surroundings without any reference to its practical application. There is an obvious need for simplification.

The Inspector of Schools, Chittagong, considers Urdu undesirable for maktabas. "There are few teachers who can do justice to it..... As it is a foreign tongue to most Bengali boys, it hampers their progress in the general subjects of the curriculum."

English is an optional subject in the upper primary classes. One inspector says it is growing in popularity, but there are not enough qualified teachers. But the number of matriculates on the staff of the primary schools is increasing. In the Rajshahi Division, there are 277 matriculate teachers and English is taught in 725 schools. The Inspector of Schools, Rajshahi, suggests that "the granting of certificates of competency to teach English should be insisted upon by the district inspecting staff".

It may be pointed out, on the other hand, that the general teaching of English in primary schools will tend to approximate rural schools even more to urban schools and strengthen the drift to the towns. Only a small proportion of children can continue their studies beyond the primary stage; and, if the primary curriculum is designed to lead to higher courses of study, the interests of the many will be sacrificed to the interests of the few.

(6) Accommodation and equipment.—Primary schools under public management are generally well housed. The total cost, including equipment, of the board school is about Rs. 1,000, which is met from provincial revenues. The cost of repairs is borne, two parts by Government and one part by the district board. In certain districts the Government contribution did not come up to the quota and the boards could not find money for repairs when repairs were needed. Some school houses are thus fast becoming dilapidated. The majority of private schools have no habitation worth the name. Even in towns many schools have no buildings of their own. The equipment is generally of the rudest and simplest, where it exists at all.

(7) The training of body and character.—Little or no positive attention is paid to the physical development of the child, at the age when care is most necessary and valuable. Some attempts are being made in a few areas to introduce the wolf cub organisation and cub games, but they are yet very isolated and irregular. The conditions of study are often actually detrimental. The lack of light and ventilation, the absence of insistence on personal cleanliness and care, the stooping posture, the long hours of dull work—all these tend to stunt the body and develop deformities and diseases.

Nor is much done, except in the denominational schools, to instil into the young mind, the lessons of religion and morality. Education is nearly always secular and the moral text-book, where it is taught, is wellnigh useless.

(8) After-care.—To check the relapse into illiteracy and to develop the right environment in the home and the village, much might be done by continuation schools, night schools, adult schools, zenana instruction, lantern lectures, village libraries and co-operative work. A little is attempted along some of these lines. The adult schools fell in number during the period from 1,515 to 1,089 and the pupils from 31,000 to 26,804. This was partly due to the fact that some night schools in which children predominated were returned as primary schools. The cost of maintenance decreased disproportionately from Rs. 1,26,489 in 1926-27 to Rs. 52,526 in 1931-32. The attempt to spread literacy among adults has, on the whole, failed.

In the Presidency Division and in Calcutta, there are also continuation schools intended for those who have already acquired the rudiments of literacy. The Group I schools are for boys below 15 and the Group II schools for adults. But, as a matter of fact, both types of schools are often attended by those who have never been to school before and do not care to undergo the full primary training. The second class provides instruction also in technical subjects, like carpentry, tailoring and hat-making, but there are not many of them. The following table shows the number of institutions and pupils:—

XXV.—Continuation schools and pupils.

	Schools.		Pupils.
	1926-27.	1931-32.	1926-27.	1931-32.
Group I schools ..	125	162	3,434	4,374
Group II schools ..	44	52	1,058	1,462

It is evident that there is scarcely any organised attempt to provide adequate "after-care" on a large scale. Once the child leaves school, there is little opportunity or encouragement for it to continue or even keep up its education. The illiterate society all round drags it down and few counter-acting influences exist. The school fights a forlorn battle, with antiquated weapons, against an enveloping host of enemies; and this can scarcely be but a losing battle. The fact that the school subjects and methods of teaching are not related to the actual environment makes it hard to sustain any interest in them afterwards. Once the books are laid aside, education is also laid aside and gradually forgotten. Some scheme of village vernacular libraries, such as that of the Punjab, might be helpful.

III.—The financial aspects.—The expenditure on primary education has grown from Rs. 55,90,162 in 1926-27 to Rs. 66,95,818 in 1931-32. The highest figure for the period was Rs. 68,95,245 in 1929-30. In the last period, there was an increase of about a fourth, in this of about a fifth. The pace has slackened a little.

XXVI.—Expenditure on boys' primary schools according to source.

	Rs.	Rs.
Provincial revenue	17,74,820	22,03,933
District funds	7,27,857	7,22,935
Municipal funds	2,57,046	6,88,680
Fees	22,64,433	24,17,305
Other sources	5,66,006	6,02,965
Total	55,90,162	66,95,818

It will be noticed that the district boards have reduced their expenditure on education a little. In Rajshahi, the reduction was very considerable. The Calcutta Corporation is chiefly responsible for the increase of municipal expenditure. Government now spend about Rs. 4½ lakhs more than at the end of the last period. The income from fees rose to over Rs. 27 lakhs in 1929-30, but fell again owing to the general economic distress.

There are some interesting features in these figures. In the first place, Bengal is one of the very few provinces where fees form a considerable part of the cost of primary education. In most provinces, primary education is free, but here the average fee is about Re. 1-8 per head per year; and Government actually contribute less than the parents do. Secondly, the average annual expense per scholar is just under Rs. 4. The average expense per school is Rs. 153, or a little over Rs. 12 per month. A Government school cost Rs. 97-9 a month, a local body school Rs. 35-9, a private school very much less. When we compare Bengal with the other provinces (excluding Burma) on the figures for 1926-27—and there is no reason to think that the relative position has altered since—we find that Bengal spends the smallest percentage on primary education, that the contribution by public bodies to the total primary expenditure is lowest in this province, that the expenditure per head of the population is lowest, the expenditure per school is the smallest, the expenditure per scholar is the least, the average fee the highest. It is difficult to extract much cause for complacency from these facts.

The scholarship system remained the same as during the last period. There were 270 final scholarships of the value of Rs. 3 each, of which 177 were open to competition. They are awarded by the Inspector of Schools. The preliminary scholarships, of the value of Rs. 2 each, are awarded by the local bodies on the results of an examination held at the end of class II. The total number of scholarships fell from 1,376 to 1,089, but the total expenditure rose from Rs. 41,854 to Rs. 53,949.

IV.—Schemes for primary education, old and new.—The old schemes, the panchayati union scheme, and the Biss Scheme, were in operation during the period. The number of panchayati union schools was 3,816 in 1931-32 against 3,584 in 1926-27. The scheme did not make much progress. The schools are not generally located in populous areas and do not get much support from the local people who have little control over their management. A scheme to raise the pay of the board school teachers received administrative sanction in 1927, but could not be carried into effect owing to the lack of funds.

The department exercises control over schools managed by local bodies in many ways. They are inspected by departmental officers. They are required to follow the rules governing the admission and withdrawal of pupils, to adopt the departmental curricula and to choose text-books from the approved lists. Their establishment bills are passed by departmental officers. Generally, they have to accept the conditions attached to Government grants.

The extension of the Biss Scheme has been suspended in view of the Primary Education Act of 1930. Few municipalities showed any enthusiasm to bear their share of the cost of starting and maintaining schools. Notable exceptions are Chittagong, Berhampore, Burdwan, Howrah, Rangpur, Dacca and Asamul. The number of the Biss type of schools was 252 in 1931-32. In a few of them in Bogra district, the double shift system is being tried.

A third scheme may be called the Griffith scheme. This aimed at the establishment of one well-equipped upper primary school with a staff of four qualified teachers in each union. These were to serve as model institutions and have the option to levy fees. There were seven such schools in 1931-32, all in the district of Howrah.

The Calcutta Corporation has extended its scheme of free primary education. At the end of the period, there were 229 Corporation schools for boys and girls, as against 139 in 1927. Three of them were morning schools, 3 night schools and the rest ordinary day schools. Of the day schools, 142 were of the bustee type, 74 of the class I type and 7 were model schools. One hundred and forty-six were boys' schools (95 for Hindus and 51 for Muhammadans) and 83 were girls' schools (62 for Hindus and 21 for Muhammadans). The number of pupils increased from 16,649 to 30,064, including 17,415 boys and 12,649 girls. The expenditure rose from Rs. 3,17,262 to Rs. 11,44,075. The supervising staff consisted of the Corporation Education Officer, five inspectors and one inspectress. These schools have quickly won a large measure of popularity because they charge no fees and employ well-paid teachers.

The Primary Education Act.—The reason why the different schemes for the expansion of primary education were not pushed forward more rapidly was the passing of the Bengal (Rural) Primary Education Act of 1930—the most outstanding achievement of the period. The Bill was prepared during 1925-26 and in September 1926 Government issued a resolution for the information and criticism of the public, endorsing the principles of the Bill and sketching the outlines of the proposed legislation on primary education. The chief objects of the Bill, which was published during 1927-28, in brief, are—

- (1) to provide a central authority for each district, called the District School Board, to control primary education;
- (2) to raise funds for universal primary education by imposition of a cess;
- (3) to provide for compulsory attendance in schools, and
- (4) to abolish the system of realisation of fees in the primary schools of any area where primary education has been declared compulsory.

During the rainy season of 1928 much propaganda work was done in rural areas in connection with the Bill by the sub-inspectors who explained its provisions to the villagers and distributed circulars and leaflets issued by the department. The Bill met with cordial approval from the cultivating class and primary school teachers. But the motion brought forward in August 1928 by the Hon'ble Minister for Education that the Bengal (Rural) Primary Education Bill, 1928, be referred to a Select Committee evoked some amount of criticism as to the scope of the Bill, the constitution of the proposed School Boards and the principle of taxation proposed. Ultimately, however, the motion was agreed to, and the report of the Select Committee was presented to the Council just before the close of the spring session of 1929. The Bill, as it emerged from the first Select Committee, was introduced in the Council in August 1929 and aroused some opposition. Ultimately, however, the motion of Mr. Nalini Ranjan Sarkar that the Bill be referred to a Select Committee with instruction to submit their report in time for presentation in the November session of the Council was carried. In November, however, there was no sitting of the Council. The Bengal Primary Education Bill, 1929, as reported on by the second Select Committee, was subsequently withdrawn by Government after considerable discussion in the Council by a motion of the Hon'ble Minister in March 1930, as the second Select Committee to which it was referred made radical changes that Government was unable to accept. A promise was, however, made that it should be brought up again in a modified form in the following summer session.

In compliance with that undertaking the Hon'ble Minister introduced it in August 1930 in nearly the form in which it emerged from the first Select Committee and moved that the Bill be taken into consideration. The greatest interest was evinced in the progress of this measure and it finally passed into Act on the 25th August 1930. The assent of the Governor-General was received on the 10th January 1931.

The total cost of putting the Act into full operation has been calculated at Rs. 3,76,65,000. Against this sum the estimated income from cess, taxation, and Government allotment is about Rs. 1,32,50,000 per year.

The full functioning of the Act, however, will have to be held back until the financial position improves. Pending the introduction of the full scheme, Government have under consideration an optional scheme for such district boards as will agree to place at the disposal of the District School Boards their existing allotment for primary education. Some district boards have already signified their desire to participate in this scheme.

V.—General remarks.—From this survey, it is probably clear that an improvement in quality rather than in quantity is the first requisite of an effective system of primary education in Bengal. Nothing is more melancholy than the amount of time and money wasted in the past on schemes and efforts that have not appreciably increased literacy and have proved largely infructuous. The one real achievement has been the general recognition of the need for and the possibility of compulsory education and the translation of this recognition into law. But it should be remembered that the mere expenditure of money cannot solve the fundamental problems of primary education unless it is spent according to some well-considered scheme based on faith and courage as well as on the experience and experiments of the past.

When one considers the history of primary education in Bengal, it is difficult to decide whether hope or depression is the stronger emotion. The losses seem almost to balance the gains after the exertions and plans of many years. The number of schools has increased, largely as a result of individual initiative, but there has been no effective control over them by local authorities and there are about twice the number of primary schools as are actually necessary. What are regarded as faults and weaknesses elsewhere have become the characteristic features of primary education in Bengal. Schools of a very low grade, schools with one teacher, teachers without a living wage, teachers without proper training, schools under no adequate control, schools with no effective inspection—these are the problems we have to face. The sad thing is that many of these problems are old and many of the solutions offered to-day were offered generations ago. The branch and central school system was foreshadowed by the "school circles" of the C. M. S. in 1822: The germ of the Parents' Association and the conception of the school as the centre of the village community may be found in Adam's Report, in which he advocates village school associations. "Such associations, originally formed for school purposes and effectually contributing to their accomplishment, would gradually and almost necessarily grow into nuclei of public spirit and organs for its expression in various ways and for various purposes"

A local cess for education was levied with success seventy years ago. Sixty years ago, the Rev. J. Long noted that "the existing system does not tap the masses.....it exhibits but a slow tendency to work downwards and expand itself towards the millions; it embraces but a fraction of the population, leaving the agricultural and working classes in the main as ignorant as ever". Sixty years ago, the Governor-General in Council felt "that it would not be right to evade any longer the responsibility which properly falls upon the Government of providing that the means of obtaining at least an elementary education should be made accessible to the people of Bengal." And we are now little further forward. In 1859 it was urged that arrangements should be made for instructing the pupils of village schools in practical agriculture and horticulture, which would "not only conduce to the improvement of the material condition of the people, but serve substantially the cause of popular education". "Nothing", said another observer at the time, "should be guarded against more carefully than the insensible introduction of a system whereby.....youths are weaned from the plough, the axe and the loom, to render them ambitious only for a clerkship". The things they feared have come to pass, their hopes and plans are still hopes and plans alone. To-day we stand on the threshold of a new era; it may be said without contradiction that the introduction of autonomy will alone be justified and made successful if the general spread of the elements of a sound and practical education among the masses of the province is insisted on as the first work of the new régime.

CHAPTER IV.

Secondary education—Indian boys.

Types of secondary schools.—In Bengal, as elsewhere there are three types of secondary schools—the middle vernacular, the middle English and the high school. All of them have generally primary classes as well as secondary classes. The middle stage consists of two classes only and the high stage of four. Bengal, Bihar and Assam—three provinces that have similar educational systems—are alone in having a high stage that is longer than the middle.

XXVII.—Boys' secondary schools and pupils.

1921-22	878	1,468	217	2,563	190,630	108,582	10,632	309,844

1931-32	1,070	1,845	54	2,970	250,524	177,102	3,986	431,612

(1) Middle vernacular schools.—There were 349 middle vernacular schools in 1916-17, but only 54 survived in 1931-32. During the last three years of the period, however, the number remained more or less constant. The average roll strength has actually increased; it was 49 in 1921-22, 65 in 1926-27 and 74 in 1931-32. The average fee income has consequently increased. This coupled with the greater importance now laid on the vernacular, may help the existing schools to maintain themselves. It is also possible that the economic depression may have indirectly helped these institutions by inducing the poorer parents to choose the less expensive schools.

Some of the middle vernacular schools introduced English as an optional subject and were ultimately converted into middle English schools.

(2) Middle English schools.—The middle English schools have progressed in every direction. An Inspector says, "the function of middle English schools is to provide a more efficient form of instruction and to extend the school life of a scholar beyond the elementary stage. This they do on cheaper lines and nearer the boys' homes (than the high schools), and hence they are useful and popular". Their number increased by 229, from 1,616 in 1926-27 to 1,845 in 1931-32, that is by 14·1 per cent. The enrolment rose from 142,684 to 177,102. There was a setback in 1930-31, which was more than made up the next year. The average roll strength was 96.

(3) High schools.—Many middle English schools were converted into high schools, which have increased in number from 985 in 1926-27 to 1,676 in 1931-32. The pupils numbered 256,524 (as compared with 233,313 in 1926-27). The average roll strength remained almost exactly the same, about 238. It is worth while remembering that in 1916-17, the average enrolment was as high as 312. The high schools vary greatly in size. For example, in Burdwan Division, the largest schools had over 1,100 pupils and the smallest under 100. The number of small schools is on the increase. Out of 227 high schools in that division, no fewer than 138 had less than 200 pupils each, as against 98 such schools in the previous period.

The place of secondary schools in the educational system.—

(1) The middle vernacular as completing the primary.—The object of the middle vernacular school is or should be, to supplement the primary, to serve those pupils who desire the elements of a liberal education, but who do not care or are not able to go on to English schools. In certain provinces, like Madras and Bombay, the middle vernacular stage is actually merged in the primary. In Bengal, on the other hand, not only are most of the primary schools lower primary institutions, but the middle vernacular schools are disappearing. The inference is that for the ordinary country boy a sound vernacular education is neither desired nor accessible. This is in striking contrast to a province like the Punjab, where the number of middle vernacular schools jumped from 151 in 1916-17 to 2,114 in 1926-27 and the number of pupils in the middle vernacular stage was more than 100,000. In Bengal, it is probably not a 1,000. The result of the weakness of the middle vernacular stage is that the literacy of pupils who stop at the close of the primary stage is precarious. But the reason is that boys prefer to go on to middle English school. Two out of the three of all boys who reach class IV go on to the middle school classes, nearly all of them to the middle English school.

(2) The middle English as leading up to the high stage.—The middle English stage is not intended to be complete in itself, but is a preparation for the high stage. Pupils who join a middle English school intend in most cases to go on to the high school. From this it follows that if the majority of pupils in the last primary class go on to the middle English stage, they are not likely to return to the countryside and the literacy of the rural districts remains unchanged. Nearly three out of four of the boys in the highest middle class continue their studies in the high school.

(3) The high stage as offering a complete general education.—The high stage of secondary education has two functions in a well-constituted system. First, it should prepare those pupils who wish for and are capable of further education for the University. But, secondly, for the large number who can and will go no further it should provide a sound all-round training, complete in itself, which, while perhaps not preparing directly for a technical career, yet provides the requisite grounding in general knowledge and training of the mind and character. But this second object has been almost completely lost sight of in Bengal and the attempts which have been made from time to time have, as we shall see, not yet achieved any large measure of success.

(4) The high stage as preparatory to the University.—The reason is that most boys wish to pass through the high school in order to proceed to the University. Of those who passed the Matriculation in 1930-31, no fewer than 62 per cent. joined arts colleges. The University entrance examination has long dominated the entire secondary school teaching. Unfortunately, it cannot be said that the Matriculation is a satisfactory examination with a sufficiently wide scope, providing an adequate test of fitness to profit by a college course. The results of the final school examinations are given below:—

XXVIII.—Results of final school examinations.

Matriculation Examination.				High School Examination Dacca Board.
Year.	Candidates appeared	Candidates passed	Percentage	Year	Candidates appeared	Candidates passed	Percentage.
1926-27	14 001	7,328	52.3	1926-27	289	209	72.3
1927-28	13,978	9,218	65.9	1927-28	320	236	73.7
1928-29	14 013	9,279	66.1	1928-29	301	206	68.4
1929-30	14,833	9,158	61.7	1929-30	322	257	79.8
1930-31	16,101	10,871	67.5	1930-31	345	220	63.7
1931-32	16 714	10,776	64.5	1931-32	340	234	68.8

It is interesting to note that the actual stopping places in the educational ladder in Bengal are not where one would reasonably expect them to be— not at the natural stages of a well-devised system, but at the examinations, lax enough as they are. The following table is sufficient proof of this statement. All figures are for 1931-32, so that the percentages are not exact:—

XXIX.—Wastage in different stages.

	Percentage.
Boys in first middle class to those in last primary class	67
Boys in first high class to those in last middle class	72
Boys passing the Matriculation to those in last high class	41
Boys in first college class to those passing the Matriculation	63

From the upper primary classes to the middle classes and from those to the high school classes there is fairly steady flow with few diverting channels or backwaters. But only about two in five of the boys in the Matriculation class actually pass the Matriculation. There is an enormous wastage at this point, just as there is wastage in the lowest primary classes. It is all the more regrettable that high schools are so wholly concerned with the narrow goal of the Matriculation.

Management and control of the secondary schools.—There are three different types of management—Government, local bodies and private bodies. Of the schools under private management, some are aided from public funds and some are not. The following table gives the necessary figures:—

XXX.—Percentage of Government aided and unaided high schools to total number of high schools.

	Government and local bodies.	Aided.	Unaided.
1921-22	4.5	38.6	56.9
1931-32	3.8	47.5	48.7

Those who are acquainted with the educational system of Bengal alone are apt to miss the significance of some of these figures. In 1926-27—and the position is much the same now—the seven other provinces of India, excluding Burma, had 4,590 secondary schools under public and 2,439 under private management. In Bengal the corresponding figures were 119 and 2,686. In other words, while elsewhere public secondary schools are the rule, in Bengal the overwhelming majority are private schools. This is a peculiarity of the Bengal system, not only in secondary, but in primary and collegiate education as well—a peculiarity that has had an interesting history as well as far-reaching consequences. Secondly, in the other provinces the aided schools outnumbered the unaided schools in the proportion of more than ten to one. In Bengal the unaided schools were more than half as numerous as the aided. Out of 1,268 unaided secondary schools in the whole country, no fewer than 903 were in this province. If we took high schools alone, the contrast would be even more remarkable. About half of all the high schools in Bengal receive no grant from public funds. During the last quinquennium more than fifty new unaided schools sprang into existence. While a few of the aided schools are excellent institutions, the existence of larger numbers of private and especially unaided schools over which little effective control is in fact exercised is undoubtedly one of the main reasons for the low standard of the quality of secondary education in the province.

The agencies of control have already been described in Chapter II. But one or two points may be elaborated. Proprietary schools are not "recognised", so none are supposed to exist. All high schools are now obliged to have a managing committee constituted in accordance with the "School Code" of the University issued in 1930; and aided and Government high schools have to follow the departmental rules also. The "School Code" lays down rules for the management of non-Government high schools and affords a common basis for the department and the University to act jointly in the control of high schools. A new rule, rule 12 of the new grant-in-aid rules, has been inserted under section III to bring the Government rules into line with the University code. The new departmental rules came into force from January 1931. The District Magistrate now exercises some control over the grant of aid to high schools; but middle schools are aided entirely by the departmental officers.

The University has also created an Arbitration Board to which teachers may appeal against the decisions of managing committees. Aided schools have been given the option to come under its jurisdiction. The School Code and the Arbitration Board have increased the work of the Inspectors, for the elections of committees often rival a political election in heat and dust; the defeated party sometimes asks the Inspector for arbitration and occasionally appeals to the courts. Some of the committees, however, have shown a genuine and commendable zeal for the efficiency of their schools.

The quality of the teaching.—The quality of the teaching obviously depends largely on the equipment and training of the teacher. The belief that is too widely prevalent that teaching is an unskilled profession demanding no special apprenticeship or training is one that the best educational opinion has long discarded. But, in Bengal, except in the Government schools, a trained teacher in a high school is still a rare phenomenon. The progress that has been made is almost imperceptible, as the following table will show:—

XXXI.—Trained teachers in boys' high schools according to management.

Management.	Trained teachers.		Percentage of trained to all teachers.
	1926-27.	1931-32.	1926-27.	1931-32.
Government	277	342	12.4	51.6
Board	10	18	16.4	23.4
Aided	732	903	12.2	13.4
Unaided	437	553	7.5	8.5

The total number of trained graduate teachers has risen from 389 to 744, but there is even now not even one, on the average, per school. The number of trained teachers in all secondary schools was 4,771 as against 20,069 untrained or 19 per cent.

The number of trained teachers is thus very small; but the average number of all teachers in a high school is also too small, nor has it increased.

XXXII.—Average number of teachers in boys' high schools according to management.

Government	16	16.1
Board ..	20	19.2
Aided ..	12.7	13.2
Unaided ..	12.5	12.4

For all high schools, the average is under 13. When we remember that a high school has 11 classes, it is clear that the number of teachers engaged is usually the barest minimum. A comparison with Madras, a province with about the same population, will emphasise the meaning of the figures:—

XXXIII.—Teachers in all high schools in Bengal and Madras.

		Bengal.	Madras.
Average number of teachers per school	..	12.8	20.1
Average number of trained teachers	..	1.8	15.6
Percentage of trained teachers to total	..	14.2	77.8

It is not surprising that in Bengal the immense majority of schools have been content to stand in the old ways, to teach the old subjects in the traditional manner, to be satisfied with success in the examination test. Little effort is made to arouse the dawning intelligence, to develop the innate spirit of questioning and curiosity, to teach through the medium of all the faculties instead of merely one. A few schools have experimented with the Dalton plan, not always with happy results. The successful issue of such experiments depends on a favourable atmosphere and on keen and well-trained teachers. Both these conditions are generally conspicuous by their absence.

Another reason for the inefficient quality of the teaching is that the profession does not attract the best type of men. The low salaries that are paid make this inevitable. The average salary of a high school teacher has increased only from Rs. 55.4 in 1926-27 to Rs. 55.8 in 1931-32, of a middle English School teacher from Rs. 21.5 to Rs. 22.6. The average in aided and especially in unaided schools is very much lower. In these schools, teachers are often subjected to forced subscriptions, "Benevolences" one might call them, using an ironic term from English history. The pay is insufficient either to draw good men or to put them above the constant anxiety of want. The prospects, again, are slight and remote. Government service provides a few highly paid posts, but they are usually not open to teachers in private schools. There is no career in teaching open to talents. Nothing could be imagined more damping to youthful ardour; only the slow progress of years brings any amelioration to the lot of the teacher; and, at 50, when his enthusiasm has long since evaporated and his keenness been blunted, he may find himself in the proud position of a headmaster with a salary of Rs. 100 or 150.

The practice of private tuition is a necessary concomitant of such conditions and it is almost universal. Managers shut their eyes to it as they cannot pay proper salaries. In one unaided school in Calcutta, it was found that no fewer than three out of four boys had private tutors—and this is probably not exceptionally high, at any rate for urban schools. But when the suggestion was made that fees should be raised, there was a general outcry. Higher fees would enable schools to employ more teachers and pay them better and remove the necessity for private tuition both for the teacher and for the pupil. But it is a curious fact that parents in Bengal would rather pay Rs. 10 to a private tutor than Re. 1 more to the school. Private tuition, however, is no remedy, it is rather a symptom, an arc of the vicious circle. It helps to keep fees and salaries low and teaching inefficient.

The Education Department has now laid down definite principles to regulate private tuition by its own officers. Not more than four teachers of any school are to engage in tuition at one time. The work should be done outside school hours and not more than an hour per day should be devoted to it. Headmasters are not allowed in any circumstances, to undertake private tuition. Tuition of pupils of Government institutions should be discouraged as much as possible. Where tutor and people belong to the same school, the tuition should not be given in a subject in which the tutor may examine the pupil.

The inadequate salaries are responsible also for the comparatively small number of graduate teachers in schools, although economic pressure is forcing more and more graduates into the profession.

AA VII —Graduate teachers in boys high schools

	1926-27	1931-32
Graduate teachers	4,315	5,127
Trained graduates	389	744
Average number of graduates per school	1.1	5

The total number of secondary school teachers has increased during the period from 21,873 to 24,840.

A real improvement that has been achieved in the prospects of the teacher is the insistence by the University on the creation of provident funds as a condition of recognition. The last report referred to the Government scheme, which was introduced with effect from 1st January 1928. Teachers are to contribute one anna in the rupee, the school management half an anna and Government half an anna. Middle English as well as high schools can participate in this scheme. The rules are, briefly, as follows. The controlling authorities are the Divisional Inspectors or Circle Inspectresses or the Inspector of European Schools or the Chairman of the Dacca Board, for the schools under their charge. The contributions are to be deposited in the post office savings bank. The managers are to keep the registers and the total sum at the credit of a subscriber is to be paid to him when he leaves the institution or to his nominee if he dies in service. Loans may be given in necessary cases on condition of repayment.

A large number of schools had their own provident funds, which were deposited in local banks at high rates of interest, but they were occasionally used for emergencies. Schools which can contribute an anna per rupee of salary without Government aid and can satisfy the University regulation are not very eager to join in the departmental scheme with its condition that all the money should be in post office savings banks and should not be used for unauthorised expenditure. But the teachers are generally anxious to participate in the Government scheme and many high and middle schools have come in. It has been reported, however, that contributions by school managers are not always regular and that there is a danger of insecure investment where no post office exists in the vicinity. These are, however, details for which remedies can be devised without much difficulty.

Curriculum and medium of instruction.—A revised curriculum, unifying the syllabuses for all classes from III to VIII of secondary schools in the two parts of Bengal, was introduced from January 1931.

Nature study and science, music, the history of England, civics, cooking, hygiene, agriculture and manual work find a prominent place in the new syllabus. The Matriculation syllabus of the Calcutta University is followed in the two top classes.

(1) The use of the vernacular.—The most noteworthy reform has been the use of the vernacular since 1930 as the medium of instruction and examination in all classes below VII. In the top classes it is at present optional, but as the University has decided definitely in favour of the vernacular medium of instruction and examination, it is expected that it will be adopted in the top classes also in the near future. In some quarters a fear exists that the standard of English, which is already low, will fall lower still. The medium of instruction is now generally bilingual, which is inevitable in a period of transition and on account of the paucity of good books in the vernacular, especially in scientific subjects. The time that is allotted to English proper in the school timetable is ample to cultivate in the boys correct habits of speech and writing and to develop an ability to read simple books with comprehension, provided good books and proper methods are used. Again, a good grounding in the vernacular will have a transfer value in the learning of the foreign language as well.

(2) Vocational subjects—Manual work.—The curriculum reflects popular demands which are often uncritical and swing from extreme utilitarianism to idealism. A wise policy cannot yield to the mere persistency of demands which often defeat their own purpose by overlooking the needs of the child, his aptitude and capacity, and the feasible and useful lines of educational advance. The cry for the introduction of spinning and weaving as “the nucleus of national culture” and for other vocational subjects, a cry which gained impetus from the failure of educated young men to earn a living has been largely responsible for the invasion of secondary schools by so-called vocational subjects. In the absence of a tradition of technical education and clearly envisaged or well-defined aims and standards, numerous subjects have been tried at random in the secondary schools, like spinning, weaving, carpentry, tailoring, soap-making, metal work, basket-making, dyeing, music, agriculture, typewriting. Several of them are classed under “manual instruction” and may, if properly handled, add variety and interest to school life by relieving the monotony and humdrum routine of the ordinary course. But they do not, in fact cannot, except in rare cases, produce vocational training in the strict sense of the term in the ordinary school. The demand for vocational education is real, but the danger is that the secondary schools may be pushed out of their proper lines of work. The problem for the next few years will be the co-ordination of vocational and general education. It is high time to decide how far the secondary curriculum should make room for technical subjects. The country has to evolve a system of technical education to be given in technical schools to such children as cannot continue their general studies. Boys in the high stage need “educational handwork”, which may include amongst others several of the subjects that now come under manual work and provide the necessary hand and eye training.

(3) Science.—Nature study and science have been prescribed for classes IV to VIII, but the necessary equipment could not be provided for want of money; some non-Government schools, however, are reported to have purchased apparatus from their surplus funds and started science teaching.

The School Final classes (science side) do not attract the best boys. The syllabus is considered stiffer than the Matriculation syllabus and is generally shunned.

The Darjeeling High School final classes seem to have achieved appreciable success and the period of the experiment has been extended for another five years with effect from 1932.

The growth of science teaching is shown below :—

It may be noted that competent science teachers are difficult to obtain and an endeavour is being made to train science graduates.

(4) Music.—The question of the teaching of music in secondary schools, and of the establishment of training centres for teachers of music was discussed by a representative conference held on 14th and 15th September 1928 under the presidency of the Director. The conference appointed a committee of musical experts to go into the matter and to draw up courses of studies. The committee met twice with the Rev. H. A. Popley, as Chairman, and ultimately appointed a sub-committee to give a final shape to its recommendations. Their proposals were finally endorsed at another meeting of the conference. The recommendations of the committee, which will be discussed in detail in the appropriate chapter, were submitted to Government in April 1930, but the consideration of the proposals has been held in abeyance on account of financial stringency.

(5) Agricultural education.—A scheme of agricultural education on the lines adopted in the Punjab was sanctioned in 1927. The scheme provided for the training of 60 teachers in the first instance recruited from both high and middle schools, in groups of 15 each year from 1928, at a special class opened for the purpose at the Dacca Agricultural Farm.

The first batch of 15 teachers completed their training in 1930 and commenced work in their schools. Since then two more batches have been trained. The last batch of 14 teachers will complete their training in January 1933.

Five schools failed to fulfil the conditions; so the scheme was in actual operation in 40 (20 high and 20 middle schools) instead of 45 schools. The further extension of the scheme will depend on the progress of the experiment and the provision of funds in 1934.

An equipment grant of Rs. 550 is given to a school for a garden measuring half an acre, and Rs. 2,000 for a farm measuring 5 acres. Small grants are also given to recoup the loss in working the scheme during the first five years. The advice of the Agricultural Department is obtained.

Agriculture is taught for four years in classes V to VIII of high schools and in middle schools in classes V and VI with a two years' extension course. The full high school curriculum will be taught in these extension classes along with agricultural training. For the present, only 16 middle English schools will be financially helped to develop into a special type of agricultural education schools, on condition that they will not be converted into high schools. The teaching will be based on the text book used in the Punjab, with the necessary adaptations to suit conditions in Bengal.

The scheme is estimated to cost Rs 27,040 recurring and Rs 19,650 non-recurring.

The total expenditure on secondary schools has increased by nearly Rs. 14 2/3 lakhs or 13.7 per cent; in the previous period it increased by 26 per cent. The chief source of additional income has been fees, a natural result of the growth in the number of pupils. The average fee per pupil is practically the same, Rs. 18-8 in 1931-32 and Rs. 18-6 in 1926-27.

The financial position of the ordinary school has not, therefore, improved during the period. Let us consider high schools in detail. The average expenditure per high school in 1931-32 was Rs. 718 per month, Rs. 13 more than in 1926-27. The average cost of an aided school was Rs. 795 and of an unaided school Rs. 521. When we remember that nearly half the high schools in Bengal are unaided, these figures are eloquent of the general condition of high school education.

A school depends chiefly on fees and grants. The fee income has not increased as the average enrolment per school remains the same, nor is it likely to increase as long as new schools arise in large numbers. If there are a great many schools to be aided, the average Government grant also will correspondingly decrease. The real problem here, again, is a problem of numbers. The more schools there are, the smaller the fee income and the smaller the grant. No school can be efficiently run on an expenditure of Rs. 521 a month and hundreds of unaided schools are able to exist only because they have little or no equipment, employ the minimum staff and pay them a mere pittance. These schools unfortunately tend to drag the others down to their level.

XXXIX.—Average costs in different types of boys' secondary schools.

Middle vernacular schools	74	86	13.6	13.9

In 1926-27, the average expenditure on a boys' high school in Madras per month was Rs. 1,587, in Bombay Rs. 2,208 and in Bengal Rs. 705. The average aid per school from Government and local funds was Rs. 4,066 in Madras, Rs. 7,415 in Bombay and Rs. 1,997 in Bengal.

Government grants go mainly to high schools and occasionally to middle English schools. The Inspectors of Schools have considerable discretion in granting aid. The factors usually considered are the geographical position of the school, its size and the backwardness of the locality. Emphasis is laid on the principle that the entire cost should be covered by fees and grant. The present distribution of grants has grown up in a rather haphazard manner. A conference of the Director of Public Instruction, the Inspectors and the Principals of training colleges was held in 1929, but their recommendations are still under consideration. All aided schools were, however, given a warning that the grant might be reduced or withdrawn if the percentage of passes fell below a certain standard. In certain districts, the rigid application of the existing rules has led to the concentration of aid in populous areas with large schools, to the injury of backward localities. A periodical revision of grants-in-aid seems necessary.

General remarks.—Most of the comments that were made in the last report still remain true. But it is worth while to call special attention to two or three features of the ~~secondary~~ system in Bengal.

In the first place, it has already been pointed out that it is impossible for all the high schools in Bengal to achieve financial stability, so that some reduction of their number seems to be necessary in the interests of quality. But the problem may be approached in another way. On a comparison with other provinces, there seems to be no doubt that there is an unnecessarily large number of high schools in Bengal.

In Bengal, the secondary schools are very numerous and close to each other. Even the high schools are not all in large centres of population; no fewer than 775 of them are in rural areas.

Reports are unanimous that schools in the same neighbourhood often compete with each other. The result is that neither can attract the economic minimum of pupils. The average number of pupils per high school in 1926-27 was only 238 in Bengal, while it was 408 in Madras; and in the three upper classes, Bengal had 71 boys per school and Madras 138. The average number of pupils who pass the Matriculation from a high school is only 10. Undoubtedly, there is a superfluity of schools—and this superfluity is one of the radical vices of the whole system.

Some of the schools are very small indeed. In one division alone, there were half a dozen high schools with less than 100 pupils each, one with only 75. The University standard for recognition is a monthly expenditure of Rs. 375. It is difficult to see how anything approaching efficiency can be maintained on this expenditure but even that is not always insisted on. There are schools with an income of less than Rs. 300 a month. Neither their numerical strength nor their location nor the quality of their general work nor even their results in the Matriculation Examination justify the existence of a considerable number of the existing high schools. And we should remember that every year more schools are springing up in response to no demand except a mistaken sense of personal or local prestige.

Without any reduction of numbers, two ways have been suggested in which the schools might be improved. In the first place, larger Government grants might be given to high schools. But Government already contribute to secondary education almost as much as they contribute to primary education and it is not likely that more funds can be diverted to the former. The alternative proposal is that the Government schools should be deprovincialised and the savings allotted to private institutions. On a comparatively small number of institutions, Government spent in 1931-32 about Rs. 6 1/3 lakhs. The average expenditure on a Government school was Rs. 2,228 per month.

On the other hand, it should be noted that this is no more than the general average for all schools in Bombay. Even a deprovincialised school should be efficient and if the average cost of these schools were reduced to the average amount spent on a school (not a Government school) in Madras, the total ultimate saving would be only about Rs. 3,17,000, sufficient to give each of the private schools about Rs. 25 a month, a sum inadequate for any useful purpose. To make all the schools financially stable, a sum of about Rs. 40 lakhs is necessary. From this point of view, the problem is insoluble. Even with the deprovincialisation of all Government schools, Government will not be able now or in the future to provide for all high schools in Bengal the financial basis for an efficient education.

Another way in which some improvement has been attempted is by enlarging the scope and character of the Matriculation Examination. Everything depends at present on the Matriculation, for it covers the whole mental horizon of school and pupil. The University has been making efforts to widen the range of subjects, but it is impossible, to teach science, for instance, without apparatus, which costs money; it is impossible to improve teaching without getting better teachers and paying them more. Besides, the University can properly regard the Matriculation only as an entrance examination, whereas for schools it is a final examination. The University is concerned with the question whether candidates who seek admission to colleges are capable of profiting by higher education; it does not ask whether they have had the training which a rounded secondary education should seek to give. To reconcile these two points of view is a difficult task. The harm done is great—the interests of the many who should be and are content with a secondary education are overlooked in the interests of those who enter colleges.

It is not strange that the schools have all tended to conform to a single uniform type. They have one narrow aim; they are controlled by authorities which lay down rigid rules, and look with no friendly eye on experiments; they depend for income on the fees of pupils who wish for no training except what will enable them to pass an examination. Every school under the pressure of the same forces takes the same impress; they are all cast in a single mould. But the population for which they cater is not homogeneous—it includes many social strata, many communities, groups with different traditions and outlook, children with different aptitudes. For all, there is the same scanty, innutritious fare. Schools are too often merely conching establishments and neither seek nor achieve any training of the mind in discipline, leadership and corporate action or any proper training of the body. Surely the time has come to consider whether far more harm than good is not being done by the expansion of secondary education along the present lines and whether quality rather than quantity should not be the first principle of any fruitful reconstruction.

CHAPTER V.

University and college education.

Calcutta University and Post-graduate work.—The Calcutta University, on the whole, maintains the same position and retains the same powers as in the last period. Its bulk has become so heavy and unwieldy that no ordinary force can shake its pyramidal immobility. A special officer, appointed by the department, Dr. W. A. Jenkins, prepared a draft Bill to reconstitute the University; but the report of the Senate Committee on it has not yet appeared. Dr. P. N. Banerjee's Bill was, as we have seen, withdrawn. Dr. Jenkins prepared also a draft Bill for the establishment of a Secondary Board of Education. This was examined by a special University Committee, whose report, together with the minutes of the Senate meeting in which it was discussed, have been forwarded to Government.

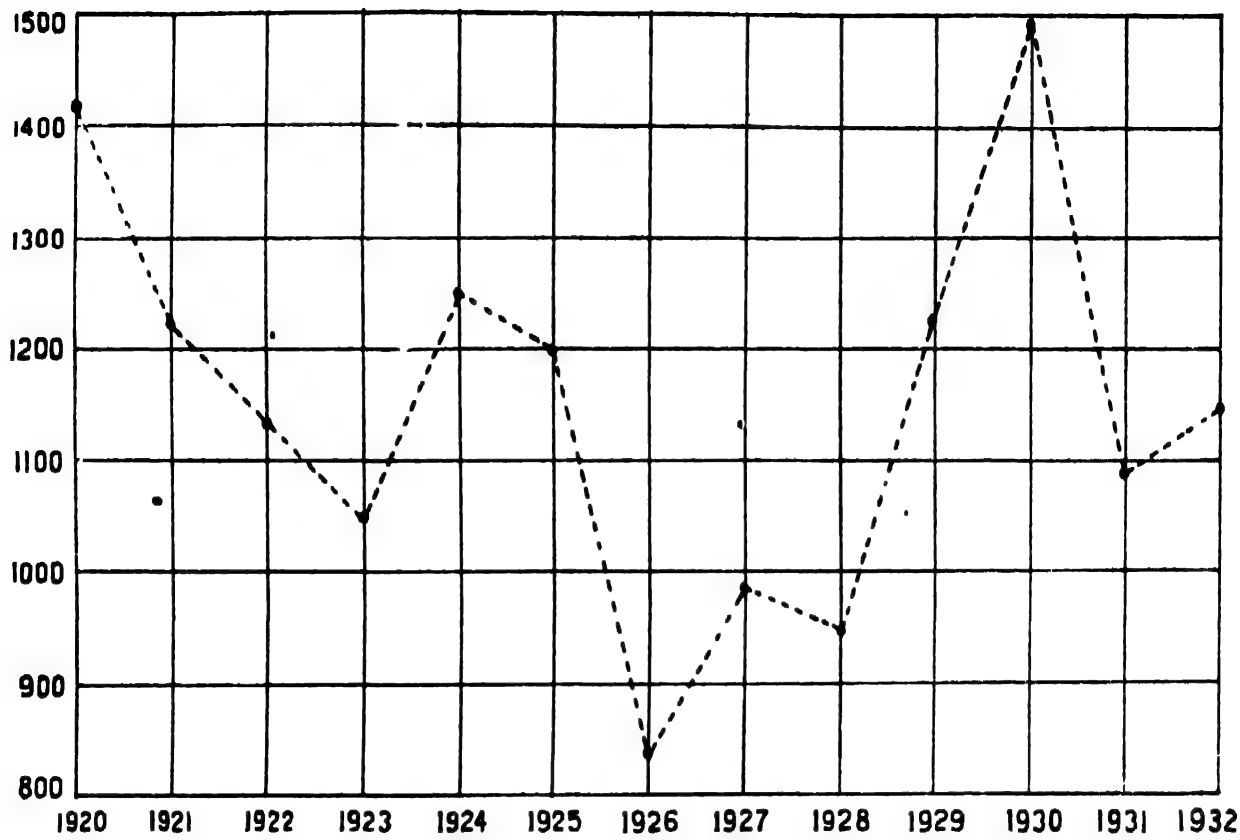

The financial embarrassments of the University led, however, to the appointment by the Senate in December 1928 of a University Organisation Committee. It estimated the strength of the staff necessary for each post-graduate department and urged that teachers should be appointed on a permanent basis. The Senate in April 1930 accepted generally the recommendations of the committee, which were then submitted to Government. After a conference, Government agreed to give the University an annual recurring grant of Rs. 3,60,000. The University has thus been enabled to balance its budget and give effect to some of the recommendations of the committee. Post-graduate teachers have been made permanent. The post of an audit officer was created in 1927 to ensure a better checking of University accounts.

The number of post-graduate students varied greatly, much as in the last period. There was a rapid increase, no less than 56 per cent., from 1927 to 1929, followed by an equally sudden decline and a very partial recovery. Economic and political reasons were largely responsible for the fall. The accompanying graph, which resembles the temperature chart of a malaria patient, indicates the strength of the forces that have convulsed higher education in Bengal during the last decade. In six years the number of post-graduate students decreased by nearly 600; in four years it rose by about 650. These violent fluctuations suggest that the enrolment is not based on an altogether real demand. Many students come to the post-graduate classes because they have nothing better to do.

XLII.—Number of Post-graduate students in Calcutta University year by year.

1931-32	888	256	1,144

Some of the post-graduate students were attached, for tutorial and residential purposes, to a few of the larger colleges. In 1931-32, Presidency College had 124 such students, the Scottish Church College 136 and Vidyasagar College 14. The number of Moslem students was 82 and of women 26. It is gratifying that women students are coming to the post-graduate classes in increasing numbers. In addition to the post-graduate students, there were 89 undergraduate students in the commerce classes of the University.

The table below shows the results of the higher examinations:—

The different athletic activities of the University have been co-ordinated and placed under the central organisation of the Calcutta University Athletic Club. Its expenses are met by contributions from the University and from the affiliated colleges.

A committee was appointed by the Senate to consider the future development of the Students' Welfare Committee. It recommended that in every year at least two high schools should also be examined, so as to find out at what stage physical defects generally begin to assert themselves and that the medical inspection of colleges should be limited to first year students. It urged that greater attention should be given to aftercare work and that there should be intensive propaganda to improve the diet of Bengali students. It proposed finally that the University should appoint a Director of Physical Education and erect a gymnasium in the college area.

During the period, the syllabuses of some of the examinations were revised. Lectures in the vernacular up to the B. A. standard are now compulsory in all affiliated colleges. A new degree, the degree of Doctor of Science in Public Health, has been instituted. A College Code, similar to the School Code, is in process of preparation, in consultation with the authorities of private colleges.

Arts colleges and undergraduate work.—(1) Numbers.—No college was founded during the period, but four Anglo-Indian schools, La Martinière, Calcutta, St. Joseph's, Calcutta, St. Joseph's, Darjeeling, and St. James', Calcutta, adopted the University intermediate course, so that the total number of arts colleges has risen from 45 to 49, including four for women. Of these, 16 were second grade or intermediate colleges, including those under the Dacca Board, 12 were managed by Government, 21 were aided and 16 unaided.

The total number of students decreased from 22,420 in 1926-27 to 19,744 in 1931-32, or by 11.9 per cent. In Government colleges, the decrease was 4.9 per cent., in aided colleges 11.1 per cent. and in unaided colleges 15.8 per cent. The number of Moslem students fell from 3,131 to 2,565. The maximum enrolment during the period was 20,871 in 1929-30 and the minimum the next year.

The arts colleges have, therefore, suffered a net diminution greater than that of the post-graduate classes. The decline in 1921-22 was owing mainly to political reasons. But in this period, though political unrest in general and the civil disobedience movement in particular interfered with the smooth working of colleges for a time, there was not much talk of the futility of education. It is chiefly the depreciation in agricultural prices in a province whose prosperity is almost wholly dependent on agricultural products that was in the main responsible for the decrease in numbers. This also explains the large reduction of Moslem students who come from a class chiefly agricultural. Nearly all colleges were affected, especially those in the mufassal, some severely. At Daulatpur, the numbers fell by 40 per cent. between 1926 and 1931, at Comilla by nearly 35 per cent. The City College in Calcutta lost altogether about 500 students during the period. On the other hand, a few of the Calcutta colleges, like the Vidyasagar and the Scottish Church have actually increased their enrolment.

The colleges vary greatly in size. The largest are in Calcutta: the Vidyasagar had 2,455 students in 1932 and the Scottish Church the City, the Bangabasi and the Ripon Colleges have generally well over a thousand each. This is partly the reason why several of these colleges are unaided—they have a considerable income from fees and are, as a rule, independent. The only small degree college in Calcutta is St. Paul's, with about 350 students. In the mufassal, the largest college is the Braja Mohan at Barrisal with more than a thousand pupils. In 1927 Comilla had 993, but only 650 in 1932. The other large mufassal colleges are the Hindu Academy at Daulatpur (754 in 1926, 520 in 1932), the Krishnath College, Berhampur (510 in 1932), the Carmichael College, Rangpur (550 in 1932), the Ananda Mohan College, Mymensingh (713 in 1932). But the majority are comparatively small and at the other extreme are colleges like Uttarpara (53 students), Victoria College, Narail (103 students), Hetampur (105) and Contai (46). Such institutions cannot be managed efficiently or economically and are constantly in financial difficulties.

The preponderance of the Calcutta colleges, especially of the large ones, in the educational system of Bengal is not always sufficiently understood. Of the candidates (excluding non-collegiates) who appeared for the I.A. and I.Sc., B.A. and B.Sc. examinations in 1931, no fewer than 58 per cent. belonged to Calcutta colleges and over 52 per cent. came from the eight large colleges in the city. Of all the I.A. candidates, about one in six came from a single Calcutta college, of the I.Sc. candidates about one in four from another. Of the B.A. candidates, two colleges supplied a fourth part. The tendency for students to flock to the city and in particular to a few large institutions is probably gathering strength. Their attractive power is not always due to their superior efficiency, for the percentage of success in some of the largest is well below the average for the University. And, when we remember how difficult it is in large colleges to create a spirit of solidarity, to establish individual contacts, to develop extra-academic activities, the tendency will not appear a healthy one.

(2) General work.—The ordinary teaching work has continued on the old lines. Attempts have been made in some of the smaller colleges to do more intensive tutorial work and a few colleges, like the Wesleyan College, Bankura, and St. Paul's College, have periodical "reviews." The value of games and physical exercise is more generally recognised. St. Xavier's College has distinguished itself in athletics and obtained no fewer than 9 out of the 28 "blues" awarded by the University for the first time. The City, Vidyasagar and Scottish Church Colleges also have a creditable record in games. Rowing is a new form of sport that has been taken up by some colleges. There are platoons of the University Training Corps in many Calcutta colleges and also at Hooghly.

The economic distress was responsible for a very large decrease in the number of students living in hostels. In 1926-27 no fewer than 5,807 university and college students were living in approved hostels, but in 1931-32 only 3,780. For some years, at any rate, there will be little need to increase hostel accommodation.

The following table shows that the percentage of passes in the University examinations has generally risen:—

In the missionary and other colleges which pay moderately good salaries and keep up a fairly high standard of efficiency, the average cost per pupil is usually between Rs. 200 and Rs. 250.

The fall in numbers has affected many, especially the smaller colleges. Their financial position, never very stable, became extremely precarious. Accordingly, in most institutions all improvements had to be indefinitely postponed and salaries had to be reduced; in a few, even the provident fund contributions were kept in abeyance. The income from fees fell altogether by a twelfth. The Imperial grant of Rs. 1,29,000 which was distributed through the University among private colleges was suspended as a measure of economy, but the suspension has caused very considerable hardship.

Some improvement may probably be effected by raising the rate of fees in mufassal colleges. The fees in Calcutta are generally higher, but in the mufassal, the fees in the I.A. vary from Rs. 4 to Rs. 6 and in the I.Sc. from Rs. 4 to Rs. 7. A uniform rate of Rs. 6 for the I.A., Rs. 7 for the I.Sc. and B.A. and Rs. 8 for the B.Sc. would add appreciably to the income of all private colleges in the mufassal.

The University has, of late, been urging the creation of provident funds in all private affiliated colleges. Many colleges have a provident fund scheme and a few have pension schemes. For example, in the Vidyasagar College there is a pension fund, although the amount is small, and teachers who retire after 15 years' service get one-third pension and those who have worked for 25 years get half pension, if the funds allow it. At present, three former teachers get pensions. There is a similar scheme in the Burdwan Raj College.

Dacca University—The University of Dacca was founded in July 1921. The chief executive authority is vested in an Executive Council consisting of 19 members. Under the provisions of the Dacca University Amendment Act of 1925 the University receives annually a recurring grant of Rs. 5½ lakhs from the Government. One important piece of legislation was enacted during the period. The Dacca University Amendment Act of 1928 has made the Academic Council purely advisory.

The educational control exercised by the University is restricted to a small area of 5 miles' radius in the city of Dacca. The University has three faculties, arts, science, and law, teaching and commerce being included within the arts faculty. The number of students in the arts and science classes was 710 in 1926-27 and 719 (including 16 women students) in 1931-32. In addition there were 237 law students, 24 students in commerce classes, 83 students in the department of education (reading in the Teachers' Training College which is a Government institution), 150 students of the Medical School, who take their science courses in the University, and 24 research students against 442, 39, 79, 130 and 15, respectively, at the end of the last quinquennium. The total number receiving instruction thus decreased from 1,415 to 1,237 during the period under review; the decrease was almost wholly in the law classes.

The growing popularity of research work may be gauged by the increase of research students from 15 to 24. The number of Moslem and women students in the general department have also increased, the former from 225 to 235 and the latter from 4 to 16. Several women students achieved notable distinction in the examinations.

The Dacca University is intended to be mainly residential. Residential quarters are provided for the senior members of the teaching staff and a few others. Students are housed in comfortable hostels—Halls of Residence—of which there are three, in addition to a Women's Residence—each under a provost assisted by the house tutors. It is a matter of regret that in spite of the amenities, both residential and financial, afforded by the halls, the number of resident students decreased considerably during the period.

The University has altered the character of its test in English composition and seminar classes have been opened in many departments to make senior students more proficient in writing and speaking English. The first and second year pass classes of the Islamic side have been abolished, as there was no demand for pass instruction in this branch. In the department of philosophy a practical examination in psychology has been instituted for honours students. Commerce has been included as a pass subject. The Bengali course has been made less Sanskritic. The course in Politics has been enlarged. The department of history has arranged for regular instruction in current historical problems. A double honours course in physics and mathematics was started from the session 1931.

For systematic research in agricultural chemistry the University sanctioned the appointment of a Research Fellow from June 1930. It received a grant of Rs. 11,618 (including a capital grant of Rs. 5,000) in 1930-31 and Rs. 6,500 in 1931-32, from the Imperial Council of Agricultural Research for this purpose.

A beginning has been made in the teaching of German and French through the generous help of Frau Fück, the wife of the Professor of Arabic, and Dr. Md. Shahidullah of the Department of Sanskrit and Bengali.

Several changes were made in the regulations for the conduct of examinations, notably a bifurcation of the M.A. course for generalised and special study with effect from 1935. This modification involves the abolition of the preliminary M.A. Examination after 1933. In accordance with a change in the ordinances, a pass degree can now be taken within six years of admission instead of five as before.

A considerable number of teachers of the University went abroad for further training or for visits. Many original papers have been published by members of the University staff or by research students. Extension lectures have become a regular feature of University activities and bring it into closer contact with the people.

The 12th (Dacca) Company University Training Corps was formed in June 1928. The number of recruits and their keenness have justified the formation of the unit.

As compared with the previous quinquennium, the growth of the University Library was slow. No capital grant could be provided. The library has, however, been much more extensively used by the students during this period. It included 61,917 printed volumes and more than 17,000 manuscripts. A generous gift was received from Khan Bahadur Kazimuddin Siddiqui who gave no fewer than 738 printed volumes and 52 manuscripts of considerable value.

The extra-academic activities of the three halls cover a wide range: athletics, social service, humanitarian and philanthropic work, labour banks, literary and dramatic societies. Old boys' gatherings are extremely popular annual fixtures and form a close bond between the University and its alumni. All these activities centre round the Hall unions, between which a healthy rivalry is growing. Besides, there is a University Students' Union to bring the students of the different halls together.

A comparison of this table with the corresponding one in the last report will show that the three large colleges suffered a considerable diminution in numbers, but the smaller colleges maintained their strength. As a result, the average cost per pupil and the cost to public funds have increased in the Presidency, Rajshahi and Chittagong Colleges, but have decreased in the Hooghly and Krishnagar Colleges. They have risen in the Islamia College also; but this college had only intermediate classes in 1926-27 and the institution of B.A. classes has involved a considerable additional expenditure. The total increase in the contribution from provincial revenues of about Rs. 1½ lakhs is almost entirely to be accounted for by the Presidency and Islamia Colleges. In the Krishnagar College, it fell by nearly half a lakh. In the Hooghly College, it fell by about Rs. 17,000 between 1927 and 1930, but has since increased owing to the transfer to the college of senior officers, although it is still smaller than in 1927. It should also be noted that the cut in salaries came into force only towards the end of the last year of the period and its full effect is not apparent from these figures.

Presidency College.—On the 31st March 1932, the Presidency College had on its rolls 906 students, as compared with 1,044 in 1927. The enrolment during the period showed a tendency to decline, partly, no doubt, owing to the enhancement of the fee rates which are now about double those obtaining in most other colleges in Calcutta. In 1925-26, before the introduction of the new fee rates, there were 2/4 post-graduate students attached to the college, but there were only 124 in 1931-32. The number of applications for admission into the I.A. and I.Sc. classes were so few that the admission rules of the college had to be relaxed to admit even third division students and students from other colleges who had failed in order to maintain the average strength of classes. The admission of students of inferior calibre has reacted on the results of the college.

As many as six Principals, permanent and officiating, held charge of the college during the period. Several important changes occurred in the teaching staff as well. Six professors of the college were transferred, several being appointed Principals of other Government colleges. Sir Jehangir Coyajee, the head of the department of economics and officiating Principal, and Raj S. P. Das Bahadur, Professor of Mathematics, retired. All these important posts were in the Indian Educational Service, but, with two exceptions in the departments of mathematics and chemistry, respectively, they were temporarily filled by Bengal Educational Service officers acting on their own pay. Sanction was obtained for additional staff in the departments of economics, history, English and physiology, but no appointments were actually made during the period.

The college obtained affiliation in geography at the intermediate stage and applied for affiliation in civics to the intermediate standard.

Tutorial work continued to be done on the old lines. A test examination was introduced for the first time for the students of the second and 4th year classes. The results of the examination and the records of tutorial work were taken into consideration before students were sent up for the University examinations.

From the point of view of discipline, the period under review was a very trying one. Occasional attempts were made by outside agencies to interfere with the normal working of the college. In 1928-29 the governing body took disciplinary action against the student secretary of the College Union, which created a temporary disturbance. Soon after, on the arrival of the Simon Commission in India, a general strike was attempted. This compelled the closing of the college and the Eden Hindu Hostel for about a month, and a number of students were required to leave the hostel. The All-Bengal Students' Association took up the matter and endeavoured to organise another strike. The attempt collapsed and a further batch of the students who had taken part in picketing were required to leave. In July 1930, after the arrest of the Nehrus, an effort was made to stop all educational work in the city, but the college continued to work guarded by police. The situation was handled with great tact and firmness by the then Principal, Mr. J. R. Barrow. Hence the revival of the civil disobedience movement in January 1932 brought no trouble, though the tense political situation was a source of constant anxiety. The enthusiastic celebration of the Founders' Day after the disturbances was an unmistakable evidence of the revival of loyalty to the college.

In the last Quinquennial Report reference was made to the reorganisation of the College Union in 1925-26. Unfortunately, after a year's work the union fell a prey to party strife and, after the regrettable incident of February 1928, ending in the expulsion of the secretary, the union constitution was suspended under orders of the governing body. The normal activities of the union, however, continued to be carried on through ad hoc committees and the spirit of comradeship and social service soon reappeared. But it has not yet been considered advisable to revive the union constitution. The Autumn Social and Founder's Day were celebrated every year in an appropriate manner. Throughout the period the college magazine maintained its high level of excellence. Two new literary societies were established, the Rabindra Parishad and the Bankim Sarat Samiti, and periodical meetings and literary discussions were held under their auspices. The Rabindra Parishad published a volume of appreciations of the poet, entitled Kabi-Parichiti. The period also saw the inauguration of the Presidency College Science Association. Thus, on the academic as well as on the social side, in spite of disturbances, a good deal of constructive work has been done.

A medical examination of all the first year students of the college was made at the beginning of every session and careful records were kept of the results of these examinations. Those found suffering from specific ailments were asked to seek medical advice, while special exercises were prescribed for those suffering from malnutrition. This system was very much appreciated and some improvement in the health of the students was noticeable during this period.

The record of the college athletic club was fairly satisfactory. A revision of the constitution of the athletic club is under contemplation in order to secure greater co-operation from the bulk of the students. Games continued to be compulsory for all first year students and optional for others. The college gymnasium was utilised by about 100 students daily on the average. The appointment of a trained and well-qualified physical instructor at the beginning of the period supplied a long-felt need. The Calcutta University Training Corps continued to be popular with the students who supplied two efficient platoons. Arrangements were made to supply refreshments to students in the college premises through a local restaurant.

The Muhammadan students of the college continued to live in the Taylor Hostel and in the hostels attached to the Islamia College. The number of Hindu boarders in the Eden Hindu Hostel and in the Post-graduate Mess fell considerably during this period and a proposal for the amalgamation of the mess and the hostel is under consideration. In spite of the fall in the number of boarders, it was considered desirable for disciplinary purposes to strengthen the hostel staff by an additional assistant superintendent. The hostel is, thus, in charge of a Bengal Educational Service member of the staff, on an allowance of Rs. 125 with free family quarters assisted by two Subordinate Educational Service members, each on an allowance of Rs. 50 per month with free bachelor quarters. There is also a part-time medical officer.

During the period a new astronomical observatory building was constructed. The college compound was walled up on the north and western sides, the lavatory block removed to the north-west of the main building, and the arts library provided with steel racks and a gallery; the floor space set free by the provision of steel racks has been divided into 8 cubicles ~~used~~ as tutorial rooms.

Hooghly College.—This is a small college and its numbers are what the Calcutta University Commission regarded as ideal, 200 to 300. Its situation is ideal, by the banks of the river, in a country town, away from the unhealthy physical conditions and moral excitements of a large city and yet near enough to share in the intellectual activity of the metropolis. It is a symbol of communal unity, for though the greater number of the students are Hindus, the college is indissolubly connected with the name of Haji Mahomed Mohsin. It is, in a peculiar degree, a local college with a remarkably small number of students from other districts. The Principal observes that the college is indispensable for the district. The numerical strength of the Hooghly College has been steadily, it slowly, increasing. In 1917, there were only 230 pupils, but during the last period the enrolment was generally between 290 and 300.

There were frequent and numerous changes of staff during the period. In all 22 teachers left the college either for good or for a time and 28 new teachers came temporarily or permanently. It is evident that changes on such a scale must affect the efficiency of teaching.

During the period, however, some additions were made to the staff. Administrative sanction was given to a post of lecturer in Arabic. A second demonstrator in physics was appointed when affiliation was obtained in B.Sc. Honours in that subject. A fourth teacher of English was appointed temporarily. Some further strengthening of the staff is desirable; except in the small honours classes there were not enough teachers to do the right kind of tutorial work.

The library possesses a considerable number of books, over 15,000. But in nearly every other respect it was unsatisfactory. The shelf-space was limited; the rooms are dark and airless, and what was worst of all, the reading space was measured by a single desk and two benches. Some improvements were, however, made. A considerable number of interesting early editions were discovered and withdrawn from circulation. With the permission of Government some hundreds of legal works, useless to the college, were transferred to the University Law College Library. During the period two considerable bequests of books were received from Messrs. Mallik of Hooghly and the late Colonel D. Bose. The recataloguing of books on a more scientific plan has begun. And, after the end of the period, thanks to a grant, steel shelves have replaced the wood almirahs and a whole room has been set apart for reading.

In science also there has been some development. In 1927-28 affiliation was obtained in B.Sc. Physics Honours and a second lecturer was appointed. Electric lights and fans and plug points were put into the Physics Laboratory and a verandah was added on the west side. Some structural changes provided a small honours practical room and workshop. But both are far too small and more room is badly required. There is yet no electric installation in the Chemical Laboratory.

The results in the University examinations have, on the whole, been satisfactory. That they are not better is due mainly to three reasons; first, to the fact that the students who come to this college, being drawn from the neighbourhood, are generally of only average capacity and are weak specially in English; secondly, to the inadequacy of the staff which has made proper tutorial work and individual attention almost impossible; and thirdly, to the proximity of Calcutta which tempts away many of the best students of the college in the B.A. and B.Sc. stages. Thirty-eight candidates obtained honours in different subjects during the years 1927-1932

The athletic club arranges for three kinds of games, football, cricket and hockey. One handicap is that the college does not possess the exclusive use of a playground. Plans have been made to open a tennis court in the college compound. The gymnasium was fairly well attended, but its usefulness has been hampered by the fact that much of the apparatus is old and in urgent need of repair.

The platoon has been doing good work under difficulties. The members have attended parades regularly and upheld the credit of the college in the annual camps. But during the last two or three years there has been great delay in approving the applications of recruits.

The college was opened on 1st August 1836 and is, therefore, one of the oldest in Bengal. On 1st August 1931 Founder's Day was celebrated for the first time under the presidency of the Hon'ble Minister for Education. A register of old students with an account of the history of the college is under preparation.

The Hindu Hostel attached to the college has accommodation for 40 boarders and the Muhammadan Hostel for 16. During the period neither has been full. The college suffered little from political disturbances and the general atmosphere was quiet. It is true on a few occasions, in sympathy with hartals, some of the students stayed away from their classes, but there was no serious commotion within the college premises. Only on one occasion was it necessary to send away any students and even then only four had to leave.

Krishnagar College.—The strength of the college varied between about 140 and 250 during the period. The highest in the I.A. class was 87, in the I.Sc. 98, in the B.A. 60 and in the B.Sc. 26. Probably more students could be attracted if there were more accommodation in the laboratories and if there were affiliation in civics in the I.A.

and in more honours subjects at the degree stage. Some improvements were made. The Chemical Laboratory is now better lighted and ventilated. The workshop attached to the Physical Laboratory, however, needs improvement. By a readjustment of rooms it has been possible to provide ample accommodation for a large reading room which has removed the congestion noticed in the last review. A capital grant of Rs. 5,000 has been requisitioned to make the library up to date. A wireless receiving set was bought and is proving of considerable interest to students and staff.

The hostel provides room for 66 students in all, but the maximum number of boarders during the session 1931-32 was only 52. There has been no assistant superintendent for the last two years. The direct connection with the municipal water-main has improved the water-supply to a certain extent. The Muhammadan Hostel was located as before in a rented house about a mile away from the college. It had only 6 boarders in 1931-32. The number of Muhammadan students in the college declined, which is all the more regrettable in view of the fact that Muslims form by far the greater bulk of the population of the district. The construction of a Moslem hostel within the college grounds, when built, may attract more Muhammadan students. Steps have been taken for periodically ascertaining and recording the weights of individual students.

In February 1930, there was a strike in the Hindu Hostel in connection with the hoisting of the national flag on the hostel building and subsequently there was a sympathetic strike in the college also. After the strike had gone on for over a fortnight, Government closed the college down indefinitely. Representations were subsequently made to Government by guardians and when the assurance asked for had been given Government permitted the reopening of the college in April 1930, after it had been closed for over a month. Disciplinary action was taken against some of the students for their complicity in the disturbance.

During the quinquennium the College Union was revived through the efforts of Mr. A. K. Chanda, when he was in charge of the college. An essay competition was organised in January last under the auspices of the College Union and four silver medals were awarded out of the common room funds. The college magazine was published twice a year, the expenses being met from the students' subscriptions and the common room fund. The old stables have been equipped as a gymnasium.

The results on the whole have been fairly satisfactory and the percentage of passes has always been above the University average. Arrangements are generally made for giving one hour's tutorial work every week in each class and in each subject. The progress of the students is tested by periodical examinations.

Sanskrit College.—The Sanskrit College has entered on the one hundred and eighth year of its existence. It was founded in 1824 by Lord Amherst for the "promotion and cultivation of the literature, the religion and the law of Hindus" and a scheme of western studies through the medium of English was engrafted on it in 1844. It is open only to Hindu students.

The college has three departments—(1) the English or college department, (2) the oriental or tol department, and (3) the Anglo-Sanskrit School. The common feature which characterises these three departments is the unified pursuit of Sanskrit studies from the lowest to the highest grades.

The college is affiliated up to the B.A. standard of the Calcutta University in English (pass), Sanskrit (pass and honours), history (pass), and philosophy (pass). Affiliation in civics was obtained during the period. Students taking up honours in philosophy and history were allowed to attend lectures in these subjects in the Presidency College without any extra charge. The rate of tuition fee in the college department is Rs. 6 a month, but there is provision for the admission of 60 students at the concession rate of Rs. 2 a month, if they are the sons of bona fide pandits.

The maximum number of students was recorded in 1928-29, but since then there has been a fall.

The college hostel was abolished in 1921. All the students reside with their parents and guardians, but there has been of late a demand for hostel accommodation. The Principal suggests that until Government can provide a hostel, accommodation may be found for the students in other Government college hostels which are not full.

Tutorial work in the form of class exercises was done in English, philosophy and history and monthly examinations in all subjects were held. The marks secured by students in tutorials and monthly examinations were taken into consideration at the time of promotion and selection.

The common room subscribed to the usual periodicals and managed a library of its own. The record of work done by the College Union during the period under review is creditable. The debating club met regularly and held debates on a variety of subjects. Under the auspices of the union, the anniversary in 1931 was celebrated with great enthusiasm. A large number of old students of the college including many prominent citizens met together in the college hall and a Sanskrit drama was staged with great success. A professor of the college is writing a history of the college and, under the guidance of the Principal, he has been collecting materials from the Secretariat records. To commemorate the name of the first Indian Principal of the Sanskrit College, a Vidyasagar pool fund has been started for helping poor students with money and books.

Political disturbances did not affect the affairs of the college in any material way during the period under review.

The athletic club won the All-Bengal Championship for Basket Ball and annexed the Grey Challenge Shield in two successive years. The gymnasium was well attended and the contest at the annual sports was keen. The football section was revived in 1931. The crying need of the club is a play-ground. The students of the college were medically examined on two occasions during the last five years. Compulsory drill has been introduced in the first year class.

During the period, about 2,000 volumes were added to the library. Government have accorded administrative approval to the quinquennial grant of Rs. 5,000 for the purchase and preservation of manuscripts. A research department has been opened in which pandits and outsiders (research students and advanced scholars) who pay a monthly fee of Rs. 5 can carry on research work under the direction of the Principal and the professors of the oriental department. Several professors of local colleges have joined as advanced scholars and scholars from Indian and foreign universities have been attached as research scholars. Research work bids fair to become a very important part of the college activities. The association of pandits and professors called the Sanskrit College Vidya Parishad has been started. It arranges for extra-mural lectures on philosophic, religious and other general subjects in order to foster intellectual interest and cultural sympathies in the students. A new philosophy and Sanskrit seminar has also been opened in the college department.

Two college Councils have been organised, one for the English department and one for the oriental department.

The Principal reports that one of the chief difficulties is the want of proper accommodation. As a temporary makeshift, three rooms of the menials' quarters have been repaired and made fit for use as class rooms. Government have under consideration a scheme involving an expenditure of Rs. 46,000 for the expansion of the college. The congestion in the library has been relieved by the removal of a number of almirahs into the class rooms. Some of the recommendations of the Calcutta University Commission and the Sanskrit College Committee have been accepted, but they are as far off realisation as ever.

Twenty-two trust funds continued to be administered by the Principal of the Sanskrit College.

Chittagong College.—Towards the end of the preceding period the enrolment exceeded 600—a number too large for the existing accommodation and equipment of the college. No money, however, was available for the construction of the three-storied building of which a scheme is before Government. It was a wise step, therefore, to fix the maximum for the various classes at the beginning of the period under review. But the fact that the number of students has not decreased is good reason for an extension of the accommodation.

The college obtained affiliation in Urdu as a vernacular during the period. A part-time lecturer in Urdu was appointed and also a lecturer in Bengali in the Subordinate Educational Service. A Bengal Educational Service post in chemistry was reduced to a Subordinate Educational Service one.

The college is not affiliated up to the honours standard in any science subject other than mathematics, or in economics, philosophy or Sanskrit, and there is no provision for the teaching of civics (a most popular subject for the I.A.) or for Bengali language and literature in the college nor for the study of science subjects like geology or botany.

There are not enough class rooms, but provision for a common room and small reading rooms will be made in the building formerly occupied by the Hindu Hostel which has been closed down.

The New Muhammadan Hostel with accommodation for 60 boarders has been occupied and placed in charge of a Bengal Educational Service officer. A scheme for a Buddhist hostel is before the Director of Public Instruction. It is essential that properly constructed hostels for Hindu and Buddhist students should be provided, as many students live under conditions which cannot be considered satisfactory. The existing Buddhist Hostel is housed in two small and dingy houses, rented for the purpose, and provides accommodation for 25 boarders. It is under the supervision of a Subordinate Educational Service officer.

During the quinquennium, Chittagong was in a state of great disturbance. The armoury raid and the terrorist activities which culminated in the murder of Khan Bahadur Ahsanullah, Inspector of Police, greatly disturbed the town and naturally the repercussions of it were felt in the college. But the college students as a body behaved very well and during the riots which followed the murder of Khan Bahadur Ahsanullah, the Moslem students acted splendidly in trying to restore calm and large numbers of Moslem students voluntarily and spontaneously guarded the houses of the teachers of the college. Some students and some ex-students of the college were involved in the armoury raid case and a few students of the college have been interned under the ordinances. During the picketing in 1930 in connection with the civil disobedience movement, the majority of the college students behaved well and there was no appreciable fall in the number on the rolls. During the period under review one student of the third year B.A. class was rusticated and one student of the fourth year B.A. class was expelled. The Principal reports that from the last session of the quinquennium a determined attempt has been made to get into closer personal touch with the students and each student of the college has been attached to some member of the staff whose duty it is to interest himself in the general welfare of the student. Attempts have also been made to encourage the growth of a corporate life in the college.

The College Union used to be controlled by a senior professor of the college assisted by students. In 1931 the union was made a fully elected body with the Principal of the college as the ex-officio president and had the following branches: study circle, dramatic club, publications, social service, athletic club, junior common room. Debates were held in which both students and members of the teaching staff took part. From 1930, autumn socials were regularly held before the Puja vacation.

The College Co-operative Society was in a moribund condition and the Benevolent Fund has also been hit hard by the financial distress.

The college magazine, which is a bi-lingual journal, was published throughout the period under review.

The athletic club organised games and athletic sports, but the college has no playing fields of its own. Comparatively few organised games were played on account of the disturbed conditions in the town.

The total number of books in the library was 11,775 on 31st March 1932 as compared with 10,264 volumes on 31st March 1927.

The Principal observes that "the cost of educating a scholar at the Chittagong College is lower than that at other Government colleges in the province and this fact strengthens the demand of the college for a larger share of public funds for the most essential improvements which will make the college a real educational centre for the eastern districts of the province."

Rajshahi College.—Four Principals, permanent and temporary, successively held charge of the college during the period. There were a few changes in the staff as well. The posts of demonstrator in physics and chemistry in the Bengal Educational Service were replaced by posts in the Subordinate Educational Service. The following additional staff among others was sanctioned during the quinquennium: a lecturer each in botany, Bengali and mathematics and a whole-time medical officer.

The college has received affiliation in botany up to the intermediate standard with effect from the session 1930-31 and a room has been fitted as a botanical laboratory at a cost of Rs. 7,336. With the opening of the botany classes the fee rates of the science students have been enhanced from Rs. 6 to Rs. 7 for the I.Sc. and Rs. 8 for B.Sc. students.

Considerable additions have been made to the laboratories, particularly the Chemical Laboratory at a total cost of approximately Rs. 34,100. A tube-well also has been sunk for the supply of water to the laboratories. The construction of this well has also removed the long-felt want of a supply of good drinking water. A house was built in the college compound for the Principal at a cost of Rs. 42,210.

Each class is divided into groups of 15 to 20 students and each group of students received tutorial help once a week. There are also four seminars in history, philosophy, Sanskrit and mathematics, where students work under the supervision of the professors concerned.

To provide better accommodation for resident Moslem students in the college the New Muhammadan Hostel accommodating 50 boarders was made over in 1928 to the authorities of the Collegiate School and Rajshahi Senior Madrasah in exchange for the Fuller Moslem Hostel accommodating 75 students. This is a temporary measure pending the construction of a separate hostel for the Moslem students of these institutions. There is another hostel for the accommodation of 294 Hindu students and one for 75 Muhammadan students. In addition, there is also accommodation for about 50 students in the Westminster Hostel and for about 12 in the Students' Home. Out of 617 students of the college, only 142 students were in residence in attached and private hostels.

An Assistant Surgeon was appointed in July 1928. He inspects the hostels and also conducts a medical examination of all the college students twice a year and delivers lectures on hygiene to the students of the first year class once a week. There is a dispensary attached to the college which is kept open day and night.

A Geeta class was opened during the session 1931-32 to impart religious and moral instruction to Hindu students. This class meets every Friday during the Jumma recess. Attendance is optional.

No serious breach of discipline occurred in the college except once in July 1930 when the college was picketed by outsiders who for political reason wished to see it closed. The Police had to be called in and a number of arrests were effected. The college remained open and classes were carried on with a diminished attendance. Guardians were requested to warn their wards not to join in any political movements. Only five students of the college were found assisting the picketers and were compelled to leave with transfer certificates.

A trained drill and gymnastic master is in charge of the gymnasium, which was well attended. In addition, there are different sections of the athletic club, for football, cricket, hockey, tennis and badminton, rowing, country games and water polo each under a member of the teaching staff.

His Excellency the Governor of Bengal was pleased to visit the college and hostel on the 7th August 1927 and also to unveil the portrait of the late Principal, Rai Kumudinee Kanta Banerji Bahadur.

The library is now more conveniently housed in a part of the main college building. A reading room has also been at length provided, which can seat 50 students at a time. The library contained 17,927 volumes on 31st March 1932. There is a valuable collection of both Sanskrit and Bengali manuscripts known as the Kumudini Kanta Collection.

Islamia College.—The college completed its sixth year in 1932 and thus may be said to have stepped out of the period of infancy. The numbers on the roll were 336 in 1931-32, 281 on the arts side, and 55 on the science side which is affiliated only up to the I.Sc. standard. The science course is, apparently, not yet popular with Moslem students.

The results were satisfactory—the percentage of passes in the B.A. Examination exceeded the University average.

The annual grants under certain heads, including library and apparatus, have had to be reduced. This is particularly unfortunate for a young institution as it arrests the natural growth.

The College Union successfully organised debates on Saturdays in which several prominent outsiders were kind enough to take part. Evening lantern lectures were also arranged. A register of old students has been opened with the object of keeping them in touch with the college. A Duty Fund has been started to give pecuniary help to deserving students.

A physical instructor was appointed in 1929; since then regular physical exercise classes have been held. Attendance at these classes is compulsory for the first year students. Land has been acquired at a cost of Rs. 2,04,700 for a playground which is to be shared by the Islamia College and the Calcutta Madrasah. Dr. H. Rahim kindly conducted an Ambulance class without remuneration; several students obtained the certificates of the St. John's Ambulance Association. The general health of the students was good. The medical examination of the students revealed no alarming physical defects.

The library has 6,025 volumes and was well used by the students.

The Baker Hostel which has accommodation for 196 students was transferred from the Calcutta Madrasah to the Islamia College, 50 seats being reserved for the Moslem students of the Presidency College. In the session 1931-32 as many as 30 seats were unoccupied.

Undergraduate work of the Dacca Board.—There were four intermediate colleges under the Board, three for men and one for women. The number of Islamic intermediate colleges rose from 2 to 3. Two intermediate colleges—the Dacca Intermediate College and the Eden Intermediate College for Girls—are managed by Government. The Jagannath Intermediate College and the Salimullah Intermediate College are aided. The Dacca Islamic Intermediate College and the Chittagong Islamic Intermediate College are managed by Government and the Sirajganj Islamic Intermediate College is aided.

The number of pupils in all intermediate classes was much the same, 994 (including 211 Muhammadans) in 1926-27 and 989 in 1932. Six hundred and thirty-eight of them were Hindus (579 boys and 59 girls), and 349 were Muhammadans. The Moslem scholars have increased by 138, while Hindu scholars have decreased by 145, the highest enrolment was recorded in 1928.

The future of the Imperial Salimullah College is yet uncertain. Some capital grant was paid to the college besides the usual monthly grant-in-aid, but its financial position continues to be unsatisfactory.

Some retrenchments were effected in the Jagannath Intermediate College on the recommendations of a committee appointed by Government; but it has not yet attained financial stability. This institution received a grant of Rs. 42,072 in 1931-32 against Rs. 48,072 in 1926-27. The enrolment was 376 in 1931-32 against 617 in 1926-27. The two vocational courses in the college—dyeing and commerce—have been kept up; the dyeing course has been a great success.

At the Intermediate Examination of the Board in 1932, 505 candidates appeared, of whom 283 passed; the corresponding figures for 1926-27 were 546 and 230, respectively.

Dacca Intermediate College.—The Dacca Intermediate College is under the direct control of Government.

In spite of the acute financial difficulties, money was found to effect some improvements. The Botanical Laboratory was extended and the Assembly Hall was furnished at a cost of Rs. 1,920. Considerable additions were made to the laboratories, library and physical exercise apparatus.

Serious breaches of the discipline occurred during the closing years of the quinquennium. The college gates were picketed by Congress volunteers throughout the last week of July 1930. There were three strikes. The general body of students, however, particularly the Muhamadan section, was unmoved. On the evening of 14th November 1930, some persons, presumably students, broke into the Principal's office and carried off a number of college registers. A daring robbery in broad day-light was perpetrated within the college compound on the 8th December 1930, when a college bearer, carrying a large sum of money to the treasury, was suddenly attacked by some young men and a haversack containing Rs. 2,060 was snatched away. The loss had to be written off. Between November 1930 and March 1932, as many as four cases of theft of electric fans and bulbs occurred, necessitating the appointment of a Gurkha to guard the premises at night.

There are two hostels attached to the college, one for Hindus and the other for Muhammadans. Each hostel is in the charge of a superintendent and an assistant superintendent, the latter being appointed, when the number of boarders is 50 or more. Students are also permitted to live in a licensed mess for Moslem students and in the Baptist Mission Hostel. Under a Government order which came into force in June 1930, boarders are now required to pay seat-rent at a uniform rate of Rs. 1-14 per month, while they are charged separately for electricity, medicine, etc. There was no serious breach of discipline in the hostels during the quinquennium.

No direct religious instruction is imparted. The Hindu boarders of the hostel have their weekly Harisabha meetings and the annual Saraswati Puja celebrations, while the Moslem boarders performed the milad ceremony every year. The Principal once convened a meeting of the local guardians of the Hindu students to secure their co-operation in maintaining discipline.

Special tutorial classes in English composition were arranged for the students of the second year class. The percentage of passes, in spite of untoward circumstances, compared favourably with that of other institutions.

The college had 321 pupils on the roll in 1931-32 as against 316 in 1926-27. The highest figure was 358 in 1928-29 and the lowest 284 in 1930-31.

The physical exercise and drill classes were held regularly by the physical instructor. The small area games, introduced in 1929, proved generally attractive. No provision could be made for manual training.

In 1926-27 the library contained 4,177 volumes and 1,909 volumes were added in course of the last five years.

Indications of progress.—The rate of growth has been accelerated. In the previous period, the girls' schools increased by 17.9 per cent., and their enrolment by 9.1 per cent. In this period, the corresponding figures were 19.0 and 27.7 per cent. The total number of girls under instruction increased by 31.9 per cent., as against 22.2 per cent. The number of Hindu girls rose by nearly 26 per cent., and that of the Moslem girls by over 37 per cent. At present, the number of girls of each community at school is more or less proportional to their population.

Not only has the pace quickened. Some of the social obstacles to women's education are crumbling down. Instead of being generally hostile, men are now generally friendly to the education of their women-folk. Purdah is slowly disappearing; the age of marriage has been raised by the Sarda Act. Women are being gradually released from the bondage of social fetters and are coming to be recognised as partners in the home and the commonwealth. This is a movement of no small consequence, for it entails and demands the education of women as a necessary corollary. But even more significant is the interest now taken by educated women themselves in the uplifting of their sisters. The influence of the Women's Educational Conference already reaches out in different directions. On one hand, the example is contagious and in increasing numbers women will come out into public life; on the other hand, an organised movement can exert a far more powerful pressure on Government, legislative bodies and public opinion than the voices of a few enthusiasts crying in the wilderness.

Backwardness of women's education.—The education of women is by far the most important need in India to-day. If it is neglected, the cultural disparity between the sexes will produce social and spiritual discord. The education of women is the surest means of achieving permanent national literacy; it is the only hope of the satisfactory re-ordering of the whole social economy. In the present condition of the country, the education of women connotes something more than the mere personal acquisition of literacy. For an educated mother is the best guarantee of the education of her children, and women will be able to come out of seclusion and make their contribution to the culture and development of the country. "We are definitely of opinion," wrote the Hartog Committee, "that, in the interest of the advance of Indian education as a whole, priority should now be given to the claims of girls' education in every scheme of expansion."

In spite of this, the actual progress is lamentably slow. During the period, boys' secondary schools increased by 302, those of girls only by 19. There were nearly twice as many new primary schools for boys as for girls. For every two more girls who came to school, about five more boys came. The total expenditure on men's education increased by Rs. 18½ lakhs, while women's education had to be content with Rs. 6½ lakhs.

The differences become more marked the higher we go up the educational ladder. In the lowest class, there are two girls to five boys, but in class III only one to 12 and in class IV only one to 16. This means that proportionately fewer girls are being made literate. In the primary stage as a whole, there are 3 girls to 10 boys, but in the middle stage only one girl to 24 boys and in the high stage only one to 30. The number of women in arts colleges was only 712 in 1931-32, while the number of men was 20,912.

Girls' education, then, resembles a pyramid with extremely concave sides. The waste in this field is peculiarly disastrous. It means not only that a great part of the money spent and the effort put forth is infructuous, but it means also that the leaders and teachers who should march in the van of women's education are not being produced. The progress of female education depends on an adequate supply of women teachers and advisers. Highly educated women are needed as teachers and inspectresses; they are needed to lay down the principles of women's education; they are needed for propaganda. But even in 1931-32, only 98 women took an arts degree.

It is not surprising that the number in professional colleges is smaller still. And yet women are sorely needed in at least two professions, medicine and teaching. In each of these, an almost boundless sphere of useful activity lies in front of trained women. The existence of zonanas and social conservatism make medical aid for women by women a primary necessity, but the total number of women in medical schools and colleges was only 41 at the end of the period. Similarly, there is scarcely any limit to the number of women who might be employed as teachers, but there were no more than 277 undergoing training in normal schools or training colleges.

The lack of women teachers is a matter for special regret. Women are, by general consent, the best teachers for the lower classes of all primary schools; but for girls' schools they are indispensable. They know their sex best; they can be comrades as well as teachers; they will arouse more confidence in the parents as well as in the pupils. But in fact, the number of women teachers increases very slowly. In 1926-27 there were 5,263 in the province, of whom 1,019 were trained; in 1931-32 there were still only 6,469, including 1,269 trained teachers. (These figures include the teachers in European schools.) Only about one in four of even the girls' primary schools has a woman teacher.

Collegiate education.—In 1931-32 there were, as previously, 4 arts colleges for women in the Presidency, including the Intermediate Department of the Eden High School for Girls, Dacca. These colleges had altogether 366 students on the rolls on 31st March 1932 as compared with 289 on the corresponding date of the previous quinquennium. Two of them, the Bethune College, Calcutta, and the Eden Intermediate College, Dacca, are directly managed by Government, while the Diocesan College and the Loreto House, Calcutta, are under private management, the former being aided. There were also 236 girls reading in arts colleges for men and in the University classes. A women's section was opened in the Vidyasagar College which had 110 students on its rolls on the 31st March 1932; and several other men's colleges also have made special arrangements to attract and help women students. Thus the higher education of women is steadily, if slowly, extending. It is gratifying also to note that 10 women passed the M.A. Examination of the University, during this, as against 4 in the previous, period. Several women candidates secured high distinctions.

The following table shows the number of women students who passed University examinations during the quinquennium. At every examination the number of successful women students has doubled itself in five years.

LXIV.—Successful women candidates in examinations.

(1) Bethune College.—The Bethune College had 149 students on its rolls on 31st March 1932 as compared with 135 five years before. The upkeep of the college cost Rs. 79,597 of which Rs. 69,018 were met from provincial revenues. The corresponding figures in 1926-27 were Rs. 84,369 and Rs. 74,118, respectively. The average cost of educating a student amounted to Rs. 543. The college presented 20 students at the last B.A. Examination, of whom 17 were successful. In the Intermediate Examinations 23 out of 24 girls passed in arts, and 5 out of 5 girls passed in science. The Christ Church School premises, adjacent to the Bethune College grounds, have been acquired at a cost of

Rs. 3,55,000 to provide additional hostel accommodation for the Bethune College. During the quinquennium the Bethune College secured affiliation in physics up to the Intermediate standard. The Principal is of opinion that, in arts, affiliation should be secured in Bengali up to B.A. Honours standard and that civics, which is a very popular subject, should be added to the curriculum. She also asks for an additional lecturer in English. A scheme of library supervision by members of the staff has been introduced.

The Old Girls' Guild, the college magazine, and the debating society have continued to flourish, and one of the hostels has embarked on a course in folk dancing. Miss Webber, who has resigned her appointment as Physical Instructress, did excellent work in organising physical training both in the college and in the attached school.

Classes in music, both vocal and instrumental, were held regularly under the auspices of the Sangit Sangha. The college suffered a great loss from the departure of the Principal, Miss G. M. Wright, and by the retirement of Mr. Narendranath Chakravarti, M.A., Senior Professor of English, who had served for 26 years in the department.

It should be noted with regret that a wave of unrest spread amongst a section of the students of the Bethune College during the civil disobedience movement which rendered disciplinary measures necessary. A few students were compelled to leave the college and others that remained had to give an undertaking for their future good conduct.

(2) Eden Girls' Intermediate College, Dacca.—On the 31st March 1932 the Eden Girls' Intermediate College, Dacca, had 61 students as compared with 31 in 1926-27. The total cost of maintaining the college department amounted in the year under review to Rs. 26,206 of which Rs. 23,222 was met from provincial revenues; and the cost per pupil was Rs. 429 of which Rs. 380 was borne by Government. The corresponding figures during the previous quinquennium were Rs. 17,421, Rs. 16,122, Rs. 566 and Rs. 527, respectively. Out of 26 students who sat for the last I.A. Examination, 22 were successful. The scheme for opening science classes in physics, chemistry and botany has not yet materialised, though it has secured administrative approval. The courses of lectures on home-nursing, hygiene and the League of Nations were continued as usual; lantern lectures on village sanitation, tuberculosis, child-welfare, school hygiene, food values and economic problems were organised by members of the Social Service League. The college continues to occupy rented premises, but the proposal to remove the college and the attached high school to the University area at Ramna, Dacca, has not yet been abandoned.

(3) Diocesan College.—The Diocesan College had 94 students as compared with 76 in 1926-27. The college cost Rs. 18,652, the average cost per pupil being Rs. 205. The corresponding figures in 1926-27 were Rs. 21,663 and Rs. 268, respectively. The financial position of the college is, by no means, secure, in spite of the low cost of maintenance possible for a missionary institution. The results in University examinations were excellent. The lack of sufficient hostel accommodation presents a serious problem. There are only 30 seats in the college hostel and 15 in the attached U. M. S. Hostel.

Lectures were delivered, as before, on subjects such as nursing, the prevention of tuberculosis, the Simon Report and English literature. There are a historical society, a debating society, a games club and a magazine club, as well as an Old Girls' Guild. A committee has recently been at work to investigate the possibilities of the establishment of a united women's Christian college in South Calcutta. This is all the more important in view of the fact that the authorities propose to close the Diocesan College with effect from May 1935.

(4) Loreto House.—There were 62 students on the rolls as against 47 in the previous quinquennium. The expenditure during 1931-32 was Rs. 16,990, as against Rs. 12,360 in 1926-27. Twenty-three students were sent up for the last Intermediate Examination and 11 for the B. A. Examination, of whom 21 and 9, respectively, were successful.

Secondary education.—(1) High schools.—The number of girls' high schools has almost doubled itself during the period, from 19 to 36. They are also a little better distributed, instead of being concentrated in Calcutta and a few centres in East Bengal. Burdwan Division, which had no high schools for girls till 1927, has now three, two of them managed by missions. Many of these new schools have, however, not yet been recognised by the University; outside Calcutta, there was only one recognised high school in all West Bengal. Of the 36 schools, 5 were managed by Government, 29 were aided and only 2 were unaided. The number of Indian girls in all high schools increased from 4,789 to 10,389, but the number in the high stage was still only 3,260. In 1932, 601 girls appeared for the Matriculation and 394 passed.

Although the progress made was considerable, it should be noted that it was trifling compared to the progress of boys. Ninety-one new high schools were started for boys in the period, but only 17 for girls. Of the pupils in a high school for boys nearly half are in the high stage, but in a high school for girls only three in ten.

On the whole, however, largely because nearly all of them are aided and many are managed by missions, the girls' high schools are more or less efficient. The syllabus was revised to include suitable subjects like domestic science, drawing and painting, music and dancing. There are Girl Guide companies in all the Calcutta and some of the mufassal schools. Owing to the keenness of the teachers trained by the Physical Directress of the Y. W. C. A., games and drill have become remarkably popular and many schools take part in the annual inter-drill competition. The handwork, especially in some of the mission schools, is of excellent quality and often original in design. It is to be hoped that a larger number of well-conducted schools, with proper classroom and playing accommodation and adequate financial support, will spring up in the mufassal.

(2) Middle schools.—"Middle schools", writes an Inspectress, "still occupy the most prominent place in girls' education, as the majority of girls do not go beyond this stage". At the end of the period, there were 58 middle English schools for girls with 7,008 pupils, as compared to 48 schools and 5,856 girls at the beginning. The number of middle vernacular schools decreased by 11. There was an increase of 6,871 or 64·5 per cent. in the total number of girls reading in all secondary schools. As far as funds permit, the policy is being followed of establishing middle English schools in district and subdivisional headquarters where there are none at present. Two of the schools are under municipal management.

New subjects have been introduced into the secondary syllabus, such as music, cookery and first aid. As usual, the mission schools are the best. The Duff School in Calcutta has a class for married girls and, apart from the ordinary subjects, gives special attention to practical subjects like first aid, hygiene, advanced needlework and sick-nursing. Another interesting institution is the American Baptist Mission School at Ushagram. Mud houses have been built and each house has accommodation for eight girls and one teacher, who live like a family. The girls do the cleaning, washing and cooking themselves, under the guidance of a head girl who keeps the accounts and submits them once a week to the teacher. The teacher does not interfere unless invited by the girls. There are six cottages for the girls and others for the principal and other teachers and for guests. The school has its own shops, post office, church and play-ground. There is a nursery for babies and a large weaving class. It is a very successful experiment on practical lines.

Primary education.—

LXV.—Primary schools for girls and girls in primary stage.

	1926-27.	1931-32.
Primary schools for Indian girls	14,605	17,125
Girls in girls' primary schools . .	317,270	426,259
Girls in primary stage in all schools	406,137	531,511

Although there has been an increase in the total enrolment of nearly a third, it should be noticed that the girls in the two last years of the primary stage numbered only 14,658 as against 212,156 boys.

The fact is that the girls' primary schools in Bengal are even more inefficient, incredible as it may seem, than the boys' schools. Their number is certainly large, larger than in all the other provinces put together. Out of the 26,682 girls' primary schools in British India in 1926-27, no fewer than 14,612 were in Bengal. But their number is no indication of their usefulness and by every test of efficiency they fail miserably. If we regard class III as the standard of literacy, it takes two schools to make one girl literate in the year, largely because most of them are lower primary schools. No figures are available to show the number of upper primary schools, but in 1922 only one in 62 of the girls' primary schools was of the upper primary stage. There are only 5,183 primary women teachers, less than one for three schools. Nearly all the schools are single-teacher schools; the great majority of them have men teachers. The average enrolment was only 24.5, whereas in boys' schools it was 38.4. The average annual cost of a school was Rs. 82, less than Rs. 7 a month; the annual cost of an unaided school was only Rs. 19! Although in 1931-32 there were 1,990 more aided schools, yet the total Government expenditure increased by only Rs. 6,533, so that the average grant decreased from about Rs. 38 to about Rs. 33 per annum.

These are amazing figures and the only consolation is that, since practically all the expenditure was wasted, more money was not spent. The whole system of girls' primary schools in the province, with a few exceptions, is practically useless.

The truth is that, to an even greater extent than the boys' schools, the girls' schools are under private management. Only 305 of over 17,000 schools were managed by public bodies, less than one in 57. The private schools are, for the most part, not schools, but haphazard collections of children brought together for the purpose of securing an income or an addition to the income of the teacher. In other words, the school often exists for the benefit of the teacher, not for the benefit of the pupils.

Let us consider the problem from a more constructive standpoint. Suppose instead of spreading aid over 13,500 schools, it were concentrated on 500 selected schools. The money now spent from public funds on aided institutions would be sufficient to provide for each of these a grant of Rs. 100 per mensem, a sum ample for a staff of four trained teachers and the necessary equipment. Each of these well-staffed upper primary schools could easily attain and manage an enrolment of 100 pupils, about 20 in each class. There would then be about 20,000 girls in the two top classes; and the contribution of these schools to literacy would be at least 50 per cent. greater than of all the aided schools at present, and their ultimate influence on the progress of women's education would be far more profound. With the same money, far better results can be achieved by a wise policy of concentration and efficiency.

The Inspectresses are unanimous that the best of the private schools of all grades are the mission schools. They have, for the most part, an adequate, trained, keen staff; they aim at something more than mere success in examinations and attempt to give a sound all-round training on modern lines. But the missions have been hit hard by the exchange and the economic depression in the home countries and no fewer than 16 mission schools in West Bengal alone had to be closed during the period owing to the lack of money. It is thus some of the best schools which are disappearing and as an Inspectress remarks, "it is a pity that some of these schools could not be kept alive by departmental grants" during this crisis.

The different types of schools mentioned in the last report still exist. There were 191 board and panchayati union schools, 22 peasant girls' schools, all in the Presidency Division, 4 home girls' schools in East Bengal, a considerable number of schools for the benefit of the backward classes managed by missions, by the Nari Siksha Samiti and by the Society for the Improvement of the Backward Classes and so forth. The last society had 113 schools with 3,488 pupils and is doing good work.

The curriculum is much the same as in boys' schools, with the addition of a few subjects like needlework and domestic economy. These subjects, however, cannot be taught in many rural schools which have no women teachers. The curriculum is probably too literary for the majority of girls who do not proceed to higher studies.

The Inspectresses award a certain number of scholarships to girls. In 1932, they were as follows:—

LXVI.—Scholarships for girls.

Middle English ..	18
Middle Vernacular ..	21
Primary Final ..	70
Primary Preliminary	136

There are not enough scholarships and sometimes scholars have to give up their stipends because they have no schools to go to.

The Uttarpada Hitakari Sava awarded 28 scholarships to girls of middle and primary schools in the Hooghly and Howrah districts in 1931-32.

The public examination at the end of class IV is not held for girls' schools, but their pupils can compete for the special girls' scholarship examination. Girls in boys' schools may sit for the Primary Final Examination and three girls secured general scholarships in competition with boys in 1931-32.

Special subjects.—(1) Needlework.—There has been a marked improvement of late in the quality of the needlework done in girls' schools, except in the villages where "it is left entirely to pandits". The improvement was due partly to the guidance of the peripatetic needlework teachers, who get a salary of Rs. 30 and an allowance of Rs. 16 per month, and partly to the institution of the Lady Carmichael Diploma which "has in the past five years improved the needlework out of all recognition". Even some of the European schools are eager to compete for the diploma. A sewing grant of a rupee a month is given to some schools, but the amount is inadequate.

(2) Music and fine arts.—These are optional subjects, but are gradually becoming more popular. The chief difficulty is the lack of trained teachers. In music, the Sangit Sammilani and the Sangit Sangha are doing very useful work. A tendency to revive Indian designs is noticeable in handwork, especially the alpona design. The price of paints is an obstacle to the teaching of brush-work in primary schools. Mission schools are specially successful in cultivating handwork.

(3) Hygiene, cookery, etc.—There is a Lady Carmichael diploma for hygiene, as well as for arts and crafts and needlework. The hygiene diploma includes first aid, nursing and child welfare, but there is as yet no practical examination. For the three cookery diplomas, however, a practical examination is held. The maktab girls do not yet compete for these diplomas. In many schools, "girls love their cooking classes and look forward to them".

Special schools.—(1) Zenana schools.—At the end of the period, there were 26 zenana governesses who taught 756 pupils. As in previous years, two schemes were in operation for imparting instruction to zenana women who cannot attend the public girls' schools, house to house visits and central classes for purdah women. Both have been condemned by the Inspectresses. The whole system is now an anachronism, for the social barriers that confined women to zenanas are fast falling and many girls now attend school even after marriage. The zenana classes have already been abolished in West Bengal and are in process of abolition in East Bengal. With the closing of the zenana classes, a definite chapter in the history of women's education in Bengal will come to an end.

Some years ago it was thought that the present system of zenana education might be replaced by a scheme based on the Parents' National Union Scheme of Education, which has achieved conspicuous success in England. With this end in view an experimental centre was conducted at Dacca by Dr. West, Principal, Teachers' Training College. The chief features of the scheme have been described fully in previous reports. The net result of the experiment has been the preparation of a few sets of very useful assignments in the I R's and in hygiene which should prove helpful to primary school teachers.

(2) Industrial schools.—In the year under report there were 44 technical, industrial and other special schools for Indian girls with 1,879 girls reading in them; the corresponding figures for the previous period being 48 and 1,613, respectively. Most of the technical schools are under Mission management; they usually teach needle-work of various kinds, lace-making and embroidery, besides giving some general education with the object of helping Indian girls to earn their livelihood. The industrial school at Kalimpong is known practically all over the world. It has seven feeder schools.

(3) Unrecognised schools.—There were 12,296 girls in private or unrecognised institutions against 8,737 girls in 1926-27. In the Burdwan Division, the Bhadrakali Ram Krishna Brahmacharyasram deserves special mention; it combined general and vocational education with the performance of religious rites and domestic work. With it two others, known as Mahakali Pathsalas—one at Mymensingh and the other at Faridpur—may be mentioned.

Co-education.—There is an increasing readiness on the part of girls to attend boys' schools. Some men's colleges, as we have seen, now attract women students in considerable numbers and in the primary stage scarcely any serious objection is raised to the education of little boys and girls together. Girls' schools admit small boys and small girls freely go to boys' schools. The absence of separate schools in many places is also creating a drift of girls to boys' high and middle schools. If this practice becomes common, as it is in provinces like Madras and Bombay, the duplication of schools can be avoided and a considerable saving effected. Out of a total of 554,498 girls under instruction, no fewer than 94,683 were in boys' schools. The figures are given below:—

LXVII.—Girls in boys' schools and boys in girls' schools.

Girls in boys' secondary schools	478	1,524
Boys in girls' secondary schools	365	543

Girls in boys' special schools	377	874
Boys in girls' special schools	23	12

Education of Muhammadan girls.—

LXVIII.—Number and percentage of Muhammadan girls in different stages of education.

Percentage of total	..	78.2	20.9	.8	.07	.03
Corresponding percentage of Hindu girls.	.	63.5	28.8	5.0	1.5	1.2

At the close of the period, there were 303,830 Moslem girls in public institutions, 56·2 per cent. of the whole. Five years before there were only 221,206 or 53·8 per cent. Considerable progress has apparently been made, but it is almost entirely in the lowest stages. There were 283,513 Moslem girls in the two lowest classes, but only 2,607 in classes III and IV. That is, only one in a hundred acquires literacy. But very slowly Moslem girls are coming into the higher stages also. There were 8 in colleges, 92 in the high stage and 225 in the middle stage, which is reason for hope. The raising of the Sakhawat Memorial Girls' School to the status of a high school is an important event, for it is the first Muslim girls' high school in the province. It has not yet been recognised by the University, but presents its pupils as private candidates and two out of three passed in 1931. It receives a grant of Rs. 750 a month from Government and Rs. 225 from the Calcutta Corporation. The Suhrawardy Begum School teaches up to the middle English standard and 12 of its girls won scholarships in the last period. It was the first, and so far the only, Muhammadan girls' school which joined the inter-school drill competition.

It will be some time yet before the social customs of the community allow any considerable number of its women to secure higher education. One of the chief difficulties is the lack of qualified women teachers and there are minor obstacles such as the absence of separate hostel accommodation in high schools and the lack of provision for the teaching of Arabic and Persian. On the other hand, in the primary schools at any rate, the complaint has been made that the ordinary school subjects are neglected in favour of the Koran, Ritual and Dinavat. Above all, what is needed is that more Moslem women should receive higher education and become teachers and exemplars for their sisters.

Financial aspects.—The following tables give the necessary figures:—

LXIX.—Total expenditure on girls' institutions.

	1921-22.	1926-27.	1931-32.

It is to be noted that the percentage of public expenditure is steadily falling.

LXXII.—Average costs per pupil and school in boys' and girls' institutions, 1931-32.

	Cost per pupil.		Cost per school.
	Girls	Boys.	Girls.	Boys.
Primary	3.3	4	81.0	153.1
Middle	40.1	17.7	4,903	1,540
High	72.4	36.6	21,489	8,715

There is one striking feature in these figures. In most provinces, girls' schools are uniformly more expensive than boys' schools—and this for three reasons. In the first place, women teachers are often paid at a higher rate than men teachers of the same grade; their supply is more limited and they can command higher salaries; and it is right that capable women should be attracted to the profession by a scale of pay which gives them freedom from anxiety and some measure of comfort. In the second place, girls' schools have generally a smaller number of pupils than boys' schools and cannot, therefore, be so economically maintained. In the third place, lower fees or no fees at all are charged for girls in order to attract them to school; and this special treatment will be necessary till parents become as anxious for the education of their daughters as of their sons and are prepared to make the same financial sacrifice for both. In Bengal, girls' middle and high schools are, indeed, much more expensive than boys' schools and are, undoubtedly, far more efficient. But, on the other hand, girls' primary schools are much cheaper, partly for the reason that many of them are conducted by the teachers of boys' schools who receive a small remuneration for the additional work. At any rate, this test confirms what we have already seen reason to believe, that the girls' primary schools are generally hopelessly unsatisfactory.

The future.—When we consider the recent history of women's education, there is reason to be disquieted at the haphazard manner in which it is developing. The history of men's education should have been fruitful of warnings at least, but those warnings have been unheeded; and women's education is following the same ill-advised, disordered path. The truth is that it has not yet perhaps received sufficient attention; it has been regarded as of secondary importance, incidental, not vital. In the province which had the largest female population and the largest number of women's institutions, there is no woman as yet on the headquarters staff to plan and control. The women's inspecting agency in Bengal is absurdly small—there are no more than two inspectresses and twelve assistant inspectresses for over 17,000 girls' schools. They could inspect only about 1,000 schools in the year and the rest were either left unsupervised or visited by the already over-burdened sub-inspectors. It is true that Government have given administrative sanction to the appointment of an Assistant Directress. It is true that one of the inspectresses has, at the request of the department, drawn up a scheme for the development of women's education. It is true that in 1928-29 Government gave their general approval to the policy of the establishment of an aided girls' high school in each district headquarters when there should be demand for it. But all these plans have been held up by the lack of money. The number of Government institutions for girls has scarcely increased at all during the period. The new schools that have arisen are the result of private interest and enterprise. The establishment of such schools is a hopeful sign of the times, but unless some large constructive scheme is devised and put into operation, girls' schools may gradually become as inefficient, as narrow in their aim, as ill-adapted to their purpose as boys' schools. At present, if women's education is expanding, it is expanding as the result of impulses from below, not from above. The income from fees in all women's institutions together has risen from Rs. 11½ lakhs to Rs. 14½ lakhs, but the contribution from provincial revenues to this most important and potentially fruitful of all creative public duties has actually decreased a little. It is to be hoped that this apathy and lack of policy will soon be replaced by some wise, well-planned, comprehensive scheme, buttressed by adequate financial support.

CHAPTER VII.

The education of Muhammadans.

Years.	Middle stage.	Percentage.	Primary stage.	Percentage.	Total.	Percentage.
1921-22	16,047	20·9	784,874	49·5	819,251	40·1
1926-27	18,567	19·3	994,855	51·4	1,033,776	47·7
1931-32	30,299	24·7	1,258,503	54·5	1,316,479	50·8

The total number of Moslem pupils in all institutions for Indians rose by nearly 3 lakhs or 26·1 per cent. The proportion of Muhammadan pupils to others is now 51·6 per cent., instead of 48·6 per cent. in 1926-27. Muhammadans form 54·8 per cent. of the population of the province, so that their numbers at school are proportionately almost the same as their total numbers.

But it should be noted that the wastage is much greater among Muhammadan pupils. In the infant class, three children out of five are Moslems, but in class IV only two out of five, in class VII only one in four, in class XI only one in six. Of the Moslem boys in the primary stage, only one in twelve is in the upper primary class, that is, is likely to become permanently literate; of the girls, only one in 120. Literacy is spreading very slowly in the community. By the census of 1921, 9·5 per cent. of Moslem men in the province were literate; by the census of 1931, the percentage is still only 9·8. Among Moslem women, however, the increase has been much more rapid, from ·5 per cent. to 1·5 per cent. Far the greater number of Muhammadan pupils never get beyond the lowest classes.

On the other hand, in certain directions there was definite progress. It was pointed out in the last report that from 1916-17 to 1926-27 the number of Muhammadan pupils in the high and middle stages was relatively declining. This movement has been arrested. During the last period, the pupils in the high stage increased by nearly 50 per cent. and those in the middle stage by over 63 per cent. The percentage of Moslems to all pupils in the high stage has risen from 15·5 to 18·7 and in the middle stage from 19·3 to 24·7. The number in the upper primary classes has nearly doubled. This is gratifying, for it shows that the community is realising the value of higher education and is no longer content to let all its children stagnate in the lowest classes. The number of students in arts and professional colleges has fallen, it is true, but this was true of all communities and was no doubt the result of the economic depression. The following table shows that some hundreds more are now passing the Matriculation Examination:—

LXXVI.—Successful Moslem candidates in Matriculation.

Years.	Number of successful Muham- madans.	Percentage to total number of successful candidates.
1931	1,455	12·8

Causes retarding progress.—The forces that retard the progress of education of the Muhammadans still remain the same. They are the general apathy—not antipathy of the Muhammadans—to that culture which a liberal education, such as is imparted in ordinary schools, gives; the scarcity of Muslim-managed high schools; the inadequate facilities for higher education near the centres of Moslem population; the poverty of the mass of Muhammadans who are, for the most part, farmers and agriculturists of small income and have suffered heavily by the agricultural depression; and, lastly, the preference shown by Moslem guardians for special institutions like maktabs and madrasahs, which combine secular education with the teaching of Islamic ritual and religion.

Special facilities.—(Government attempts to encourage Moslem education by special scholarships for Muhammadans, special grants for denominational schools, e.g., higher grants for maktabas, the reservation of seats in different kinds of ordinary schools, free student-ships to the extent of 15 per cent. of their own enrolment, and in other ways.

Special institutions for Muhammadans.—Moslem children can enter the ordinary schools. But many of them prefer to join the special schools, which are of different grades and offer a continuous course of instruction up to the undergraduate stage.

(a) Primary stage.—(1) Maktabas.—Maktabas are primary schools on an Islamic basis intended for Moslem scholars. These schools are also open to other boys. The ordinary 'primary syllabus is followed and text-books by Muhammadan authors are generally used. In addition, the reading of the holy Quran, Islamic ritual and Urdu are additional compulsory subjects, alternative to drill.' The growth of these maktabas is a proof of their popularity and they may, if properly organised, play an important part when the Bengal (Rural) Primary Education Act is enforced. They should be brought more into line with the ordinary primary schools, with due provision for religious instruction.

LXXVII.—Number of maktabas and pupils.

	Maktabas.		Pupils.
	Number of maktabas for boys.	Number of maktabas for girls.	Number of boys	Number girls
1926-27	13,085	7,638	448,968	179,478
1931-32	16,359	9,472	614,717	244,816
Increase	3,274	1,834	165,749	65,338
Percentage	25	24	36.9	36

The total cost of maktabas during the year 1931-32 amounted to Rs. 22,17,408 of which Rs. 11,07,578 came from public funds. The corresponding figures for 1926-27 were Rs. 17,71,586 and Rs. 8,36,630, respectively.

(2) Quran schools.—These schools are a survival of an indigenous system of education. They teach the recitation of the Quran and the rituals of Islam and Urdu, along with the 3 R's. They are practically primary schools not fully developed.

(3) Muallim-training schools.—The muallim-training schools are of two types, the old and the improved, and are intended to train teachers for maktabas. There are 3 old type schools, and 3 new type schools in the province. The teachers under training get a stipend of Rs. 10 a month each. There is no muallim-training school in Dacca Division, and it has been proposed to convert a guru-training school in Raipura in that division into a muallim-training school. In comparison with the very large number of maktabas the number of muallim-training schools is very inadequate.

(b) Middle stage.—(4) Madrasahs.—There are two types of madrasahs, the old and the new. They are of two grades—junior and senior (high). The old type follows the orthodox madrasah course, which is either the Calcutta Madrasah course or some other unrecognised course.

The reformed type of madrasah combines the elements of secular education with religious education. The total cost of maintaining the madrasahs amounted in the year 1931-32 to Rs. 14,49,486 towards which public funds contributed Rs. 5,30,053. The corresponding figures for 1926-27 were Rs. 10,41,064 and Rs. 4,13,514, respectively. The maintenance charges of madrasahs have increased considerably during the last five years; unfortunately the contribution from public funds has not risen in the same proportion.

LXVIII.—Number of madrasahs and pupils.

Year.	High madrasahs.	Pupils in high madrasahs.	Other madrasahs.	Pupils in other madrasahs.	Total of madrasahs.	Total pupils.
1926-27	17	4,204	521	46,795	538	50,999
1931-32.	27	5,004	716	62,860	743	67,864

(5) Junior madrasahs.—The number of such madrasahs and their enrolment both rose during the period under review; the number was 601 in 1931-32 against 511 in 1926-27; and the scholars 51,852 in 1931-32 against 44,475 in 1926-27. These junior madrasahs are practically middle schools on an Islamic basis.

The course of studies in the junior madrasahs is heavier than that of the corresponding types of ordinary institutions. The middle English curriculum is followed except in drawing and science, but Moslem boys have to learn four languages, English, Bengali, Arabic and Urdu, which is a large order. The course need simplification. The Inspector of Schools, Dacca Division, thinks that compulsory Urdu should be eliminated altogether, that the medium should be the vernacular of the pupils and that Arabic should not be commenced earlier than in class IV. It should be mentioned that, in order to facilitate the migration of madrasah pupils into high schools, a recent circular of the department has raised the standard of secular instruction of class VI of a madrasah to that of class VI of a high English school. Liberal grants contributed to a rapid rise of the reformed madrasahs, but the inadequacy of maintenance grants in recent years and the change of public opinion in favour of secularisation have not only slackened the rate of the increase, but have actually contributed to a decline since 1930.

The number of girls in junior madrasahs is increasing. There is one junior madrasah at Sutiakathi with 50 girls on its rolls. Ten out of 11 girls passed the last Junior Madrasah Examination and 4 got scholarships. A junior madrasah for girls was started at Rajshahi in 1931; it had 121 pupils on its rolls on the 31st of March 1932.

What used to be known as middle madrasahs are now known as Moslem middle English schools; they have provision for teaching Urdu and Arabic.

(c) High stage.—(6) Senior madrasahs (old type).—The Calcutta Madrasah is the most important of this type. These madrasahs follow an orthodox curriculum, but a revised syllabus was introduced in 1928 and the period of study has been reduced from 14 years to 12 years. A governing body for the Calcutta Madrasah was constituted, with the Assistant Director of Public Instruction for Muhammadan Education as President. The introduction of the revised course of studies necessitated the appointment of six additional teachers and the creation of 32 scholarships. A Board was constituted in 1928-29 for conducting the Central Madrasah Examinations of the Calcutta Madrasah and the dozen or more other madrasahs in the province affiliated to it. The Muslim institute attached to the Calcutta Madrasah and the Islamia College continued to promote the physical and moral welfare of younger members of the community. A new building has been provided for the institute at a cost of Rs. 1,50,000. In the Central Madrasah Examination, the Calcutta Madrasah presented 270 students in the year 1931-32, of whom 188 passed.

There were 34 senior madrasahs of the old type with 4,807 scholars in 1931-32. One was managed by Government, 21 were aided and 12 unaided with 498, 2,717 and 1,592 scholars, respectively.

(7) High madrasahs (reformed).—These are practically high schools on an Islamic basis. Their recognition rests with the Board of Intermediate Education at Dacca. The curriculum has been revised from time to time, but it still needs further modification. English, vernacular, mathematics and Arabic should be brought to the same level as in high schools and there should be at least one additional subject. The results of the high madrasahs have not been very satisfactory. A conference was convened by the Board of Intermediate Education in September 1928 to readjust the madrasah course. The Board has set itself to bring the madrasahs within the general educational pale by devising courses which should combine some general training with special Islamic subjects. During the period the Rajshahi Madrasah was raised to the high madrasah status, a step justified by the remarkable increase of pupils from 92 in 1926-27 to 275 in 1931-32. A building with six rooms was erected in 1930-31, but the accommodation is still inadequate, both in the madrasah and in the attached hostel. Lower fees are charged in this Government madrasah than in other madrasahs in the division.

There were 17 high madrasahs of the reformed type in 1926-27 and 27 in 1931-32, of which 4 were managed by Government and the rest were under private management. The enrolment was 4,204 in 1926-27 and 5,004 in 1931-32.

Out of 421 candidates who appeared in the Islamic Matriculation Examination in 1931-32, 159 were successful; the corresponding figures in 1926-27 were 218 and 115, respectively.

(d) Collegiate stage.—(8) Islamic Intermediate colleges.—These are really the Intermediate classes of the reformed madrasah system and directly lead to the course of Islamic studies in the Dacca University. The curriculum includes English and vernacular as in Intermediate colleges and Islamic studies. Additional secular subjects have been introduced during the period under review so as to make it possible for students to take up the general courses of studies in the University. During the period Intermediate classes were opened in the Chittagong High Madrasah and this has removed a long-felt need. There are two Islamic colleges in the province managed by Government. The Islamic Intermediate College at Sirajganj is an aided institution.

Altogether 89 students appeared in the Islamic Intermediate Examination in 1931-32 of whom 62 passed.

Hostel accommodation.—Hostels for Muhammadans are attached to practically all Government and some aided and other high schools.

There are, besides, special hostels for Muhammadans. There is no hostel exclusively reserved for Muhammadan girls, except in connection with the Sakhawat Memorial Girls' School.

A considerable proportion of the accommodation provided in the Moslem hostels, with the solitary exception of the Rajshahi Madrasah, remained unoccupied during the period and a few hostels were also closed owing to the lack of boarders.

In the Dacca University, the Muslim Hall was completed in the year 1931. It had 178 boarders in 1931-32 against 208 in 1926-27. In Calcutta, the Elliot Hostel has accommodation for 134 boarders and is intended chiefly for madrasah pupils. There were 127 boarders in 1931-32. The Baker Hostel has 200 places for Muhammadan students of the Calcutta colleges. It was transferred from the madrasah to the Islamia College during the period. The Taylor Hostel and the Carmichael Hostel are non-collegiate hostels, one under the control of Government and the other under the University.

Muhammadans in the Education Department and the teaching profession.—The following table gives figures showing the proportion of Moslems in all grades of schools for general education:—

LXXIX.—Number and percentage of Moslem teachers and Inspectors by divisions.

Division	Muhammadan teachers	of total number.	Muhammadan inspecting officers	Percent
Presidency (including Calcutta).	6,868	32.6	43	63.2
Burdwan ..	2,367	12.2	22	26.2
Dacca .	18,489	58.6	62	63.2
Chittagong .	11,954	66.6	36	66.6
Rajshahi	10,368	61.1	40	57.1
Total	50,046	46.8	203	54.2

It appears that the Moslems are well represented on the inspecting branch, but the number of teachers in secondary schools and specially in high schools is inadequate. No direct appointment to the general posts of Subdivisional Inspectors, sub-inspectors, assistant head masters of Government schools and normal schools, and English and vernacular teachers, in any division, is ordinarily sanctioned if the strength of the Muhammadan educational officers in the division is below 45 per cent. of the total.

General remarks.—The old type madrasahs are rapidly declining, and there is a corresponding increase in the new reformed madrasahs. This indicates that the Moslem community is beginning to realise the value of secular education. But the old type of madrasahs is still popular with a section of the Moslem public; their extinction is not desirable, but their number must be rigidly limited. A Muhammadan Inspector of Schools thinks that it is better to control and improve them rather than let them continue in their present unsatisfactory condition. One well-conducted madrasah of the old type in each division will probably meet the requirements of the community. Junior and high madrasahs

(new type) appear to have been very useful in spreading education amongst Moslems. But the teaching should be improved and the curriculum simplified.

“Muhammadan boys”, says an Inspector of Schools, “resort to the madrasahs, because they are very cheap and more easy-going than ordinary middle English and high English schools”. The more liberal section of the community send boys to ordinary high schools and provide religious instruction at home.

It has been pointed out that the absence of an Islamic Intermediate college in West Bengal causes much inconvenience, for successful high madrasah students from West Bengal have to go to Dacca, Serajganj, or Chittagong, to join an Islamic Intermediate college.

Advisory committee.—In 1931 Government appointed a committee under the presidency of Khan Bahadur Md. Abdul Momin to give advice about the right policy for advancing Moslem education in Bengal. The committee have elicited much information, by answers to their questionnaire, by visits to different educational centres and by the examination of witnesses. The evidence has been printed and circulated to the members; but the recommendations have not yet been published.

CHAPTER VIII.

Education of Europeans and Anglo-Indians.

Institutions and pupils.—The total number of institutions for the education of Europeans and Anglo-Indians on the 31st March 1932 was 69, as compared with 62 in 1927. Three new girls' secondary schools and 7 girls' primary schools have been opened, whereas 3 boys' primary schools have ceased to exist during the period. There are 4 schools for special instruction and 65 for general education.

The institutions for special instruction are—

- (1) the commercial and technical classes attached to the Young Women's Christian Association, Calcutta;
- (2) Dow Hill Training College, Kurseong;
- (3) the Children's House, Kurseong, and
- (4) the Bengal-Nagpur Railway Apprentices' Night School, Kharagpur.

The classification of the 65 institutions for general education according to the New Code is as follows:—

The total enrolment has increased by 765 pupils. The largest number of Europeans was 9,308 in 1928-29; since then there has been a decline, whereas the non-European scholars show a steady increase, their number being 2,423 in 1931-32 against 1,685 in 1926-27, an increase of 43·8 per cent. This is due to the fact that special permission has been given to some schools to admit an increased percentage of non-Europeans.

The proportion of European and non-European scholars in schools for Europeans was 5·4 : 1 in 1926-27; it is now 3·7 : 1.

More than two-fifths of the non-European pupils were Jews and Armenians and a considerable number were Parsis. The number of Indians has, however, been rapidly growing.

The Anglo-Indians are mainly a non-agricultural people depending mostly on service in industrial concerns and railways. Naturally enough the schools which cater for their educational needs are concentrated in industrial centres like Calcutta and Howrah, in big railway stations like Asansol and Kharagpur and in hill stations with a temperate climate.

Management and the group-unit system.—The following table shows the distribution of the 69 institutions with their pupils under the various agencies:—

(Government directly controlled 3 institutions, viz., Victoria Boys' School and Dow Hill Girls' School, Kurseong, for general education, and Dow Hill Training College for the training of school mistresses. The remaining schools are managed by railway authorities and the various religious denominations.

The Church of Rome is responsible for the largest number of schools, 30, containing 56·4 per cent. of the total number of pupils.

The group-unit system which led to consolidation of schools under the same management has been found to be working satisfactorily, as the schools have developed according to definite plan. It has led to the conservation of educational effort and the co-ordination of educational policy. Questions relative to the welfare of any particular institution within a group have been considered in relation to the realisation of the general policy of that group and not as an isolated case.

Secondary schools and collegiate education.—An increasing tendency is evident among European and Anglo-Indian students to take advantage of University education through the facilities which the Intermediate classes attached to the European schools offer.

"This movement in favour of University education," says the Inspector of European Schools, "is undoubtedly due to the extended recognition granted by the Calcutta University to the Cambridge Certificate Examination; and it has been further stimulated by the demand for a University degree from those who propose entering the Civil Services. There is every indication that a new direction has been given to the higher studies of Anglo-Indians, and that University qualifications will be more largely sought after than was the case in the past. This forward movement deserves every encouragement; and the opportunity afforded by college classes to bring about a better understanding between Indians and Anglo-Indians should be assisted in every possible way." There has been a good deal of discussion about the value of the Cambridge Examinations. On this point, the opinion of the officiating Inspector of Schools may be quoted: "Working to the syllabus of an outside examination necessarily limits the scope and limits the style of teaching in a school, but this is true of all such examinations. The Cambridge Junior Examination is, however, of such a low standard that there is a danger in it being regarded by many students as a school-leaving certificate. This danger is so real that the majority of head teachers consider it very desirable that this examination should be abandoned. On the other hand, some head teachers value the examination as a useful guide in working up to senior examinations and also as a definite goal and a stimulus to both staff and pupils."

"There is one outstanding advantage to European pupils taking the Cambridge Examinations in India and that is, they provide a uniform system of education all over the country, so that a pupil does not lose ground when his or her parents are transferred from one province to another. This is of great advantage to the servants of railways and other services which operate over two or three provinces."

It has been noticed that a boy applying for a post in a European business firm will have a better chance if he holds a Cambridge Senior Certificate than if he possesses the local B.A. degree. This is due to the fact that the heads of such firms have confidence in the Cambridge Examinations and possibly have passed the same test themselves.

The advantages of the Cambridge Examinations are—

- (a) The work is continuous—there are no capricious changes of system
- (b) The controllers of the examinations are experts.
- (c) There is uniformity of standard from year to year.
- (d) There is an army of expert examiners.
- (e) The development of educational practice in England is continually affecting the curricula of the examinations. There is, therefore, every incentive to progress on up-to-date lines apart from the fact that the Cambridge Syndicate's list of examiners is composed of men and women who are generally admitted to be in the van of educational thought and development
- (f) For students desirous of proceeding to England for further education, the Cambridge Examinations are particularly valuable.
- (g) The Cambridge Examinations are typical of an English school education and are held all over the Empire. This imperial aspect undoubtedly has weight—and rightly so—with the domiciled community.
- (h) The revised Cambridge system of examinations has been approved by the English Board of Education.

The following institutions have college classes affiliated to Calcutta University:—

- (1) La Martiniere, Calcutta—Intermediate Arts and Science classes.
- (2) St. James' School, Calcutta—Intermediate Science class.
- (3) St. Joseph's College, Calcutta—Intermediate Arts and Science classes.
- (4) Loreto House, Calcutta—I.A., B.A., L.T. and B.T. classes
- (5) St. Joseph's College, Darjeeling.

The Cambridge Senior Local Examination has been accepted by the Calcutta University as equivalent to the Matriculation Examination, and the Cambridge Higher Certificate Examination as equivalent to the Intermediate Examination, subject to certain conditions.

The number of secondary schools has increased by 3—all girls' schools. In the secondary stage girls' enrolment increased by 599, boys' dropped by 132.

Higher grade schools.—It is a source of great satisfaction that under the new Code great stress has been laid on various forms of practical training in the higher grade schools.

The value of manual work classes for the training of hand and eye, the co-ordination of mind and muscle and for providing an outlet for the creative interest cannot be over-estimated. These classes are called vocational when they are held in higher grade schools, but they are useful for their educational rather than their vocational value.

A question which will shortly arise is that of expense. The Inspector is of opinion that the course prescribed for a higher grade school is more costly than that for a secondary school. It will be almost impossible for each higher grade school to have a manual or technical class or to keep a manual instructor fully occupied. These difficulties may probably be best solved by two schools sharing a workshop or shed and the expense of an instructor or by having peripatetic instructors. Added to all these difficulties, there is the scarcity of properly qualified instructors. The commercial classes at Victoria School, Kurseong, and at Dow Hill School, Kurseong, and the telegraph classes at the St. Andrew's Colonial Homes, Kalimpong, have been closed down simply because a single school cannot feed a vocational class year after year, as there is not a sufficient number of pupils wishing to take up the course. In these days it is imperative that funds and efforts should not be frittered away on schemes which in many cases are doomed to failure.

Examinations.—The following table shows the results of the various examinations for which pupils entered in 1926-27 and in 1931-32:—

*This examination is a competitive test. Only the names of those candidates who are awarded scholarships are published.

The number of candidates bears far too small a proportion to the number of European children at school. Greater efforts should be made by the school authorities to retain the older children at school longer so as to increase the number reading in standards VIII and IX.

It is also interesting to note that the percentage of successful girls in most of the examinations is higher than that of the boys, although some of the examinations are of greater immediate utility to boys than to girls.

The table below gives the number of candidates that appeared and passed at the Apprenticeship Admission Examination conducted by the Board of Control for Apprenticeship Training:—

LXXXVI.—Results of Apprenticeship Admission Examination.

The majority of candidates are Europeans and Anglo-Indians.

Primary schools.—Unless the economic situation rapidly improves, the question of making provision for free and compulsory education will need serious consideration. This should be possible as many of the primary schools are already free schools. It would also relieve the superior grades of schools from a charge on their resources which in these days they can ill-afford, as many of them feel obliged at present to maintain a primary school section.

Teachers.—There were 793 teachers employed in European schools during the year ending 31st March 1932 as compared with 691 during the year ending 31st March 1927. Of the 793 teachers, 134 were graduates and 485 (including 90 graduates) were trained. About 39 per cent. of the teachers are untrained.

Training of men teachers.—There is no separate college in Bengal for the training of European men teachers. The Government of Bengal assist men who wish to proceed to the Chelmsford Training College at Ghora Gali (Punjab) for training as elementary teachers. Six teachers were deputed for such training during the period

Training of women—There is only one special institution, the Dow Hill Training College, Kurseong. The number of students in 1932 was 14 as compared with 20 in 1927

During the past five years 41 women teachers have successfully passed out of the Dow Hill Training College.

The Inspector of European Schools, Bengal, reports that a satisfactory type of pupil teacher is admitted yearly to the Dow Hill Training College. To raise the standard of their general education it is proposed in future to allow the pupil teachers to study for the Cambridge Higher School Certificate during their course of training. To find extended opportunities for the students of the Dow Hill Training College as teachers, Bengali or Urdu has been added to the list of compulsory subjects for the Final Examination.

Government European schools at Kurseong.—The number of Government institutions remained three; they are—

- (1) the Dow Hill Girls' School,
- (2) the Victoria Boys' School, and
- (3) the Dow Hill Training College.

Three scales of fees have now been drawn up for the children reading in the Victoria and Dow Hill Schools. There is a scale for the children of Bengal Government servants, a scale for the children of members of the staff of the schools (which are treated as different institutions in this respect) and a scale for the children of Government servants other than those under the Government of Bengal. Non-Government servants pay fees for their children at certain fixed rates, while special cases are treated according to rules laid down in the prospectus. The admission and other forms of both the schools have been so revised as to ensure the prompt realisation of fees as much as possible. The amalgamation of the governing bodies of the schools has been approved by Government, while the standing committee is still maintained to advise upon current business and to handle matters of detail. The Head Master of the Victoria School intends to improve the standard of the school so that pupils may take the Senior Cambridge Examination one or two years earlier than usual and the introduction of a test examination for admission to the school has been suggested. The central hospital attached to both the schools is being managed efficiently. An expenditure of not more than Rs. 150 a month is permitted, from the ordinary grant of Rs. 3,582, for provision of equipment for the hospital.

The reorganisation of the Dow Hill Training College is being considered and the University has been addressed about the practicability of students being sent up for L.T. and B.T. examinations and of such students being permitted to do the practical portion of the examination sometime in November. Students on admission to the Training College are now required to deposit Rs. 100 as caution money to guard against premature withdrawal. A scheme for compulsory physical education in the college is being held in abeyance pending the decision of the general question of reorganisation.

The average cost of training a mistress was Rs. 1,747 in 1931-32.

Scholarships.—The total sum expended upon scholarships during the year 1931-32 was Rs. 27,824 as compared with Rs. 31,512 during the year 1926-27. These sums represent the amounts actually drawn by the pupils and exclude the amount of the scholarships which were awarded in other provinces but were paid in Bengal in accordance with the revised method of paying scholarships that are transferred from one province to another.

The Inspector of European Schools, Bengal, in his annual report for 1927-28 emphasized the urgent need for the provision of a larger number of collegiate scholarships and stipends, now that more of Anglo-Indian students are seeking University education.

In May 1927 the administrative approval of Government was accorded to the creation of two scholarships of £300 a year each, tenable for three years in the United Kingdom with war bonus at the rate of 15 per cent., one to be awarded triennially to a male student and the other to be awarded triennially to a female student of the domiciled community. In the absence of budget provision no scholarship has yet been awarded.

Expenditure.—The total expenditure upon the education of European and Anglo-Indian children during the year 1931-32 amounted to Rs. 36,73,251 (including boarding charges of Rs. 11,51,154) as compared with Rs. 38,94,104 in 1926-27 (including boarding charges of Rs. 13,14,262). The amount was derived from the following sources.

The net income during the period was thus less than that of the previous quinquennium by Rs. 2,20,853.

The financial position.—During the quinquennium schools and pupils have been most adversely affected by the general economic depression. Practically every school has had its income reduced by a quarter or more. The income of one school alone was Rs. 20,000 less than in previous years.

The parents of the pupils have suffered cuts in salary and many have been axed. Some parents are paying as much as 50 per cent. of their income for the education of their children and others out of employment are paying fees out of savings or capital. To alleviate the hardship a fund was inaugurated by His Excellency the Governor called the Calcutta Schools' Emergency Fund. The members of the various clubs in Calcutta permit their club secretaries to make a monthly levy which is collected in their bills. In this way a sum of Rs. 25,000 has been distributed to pay for school fees in cases where it was absolutely necessary. A sum of nearly Rs. 40,000 would have been required to meet the situation fully.

The schools have made every effort to accommodate parents by reducing boarding fees, tuition fees, and increasing the number of free scholars on their rolls, but, in spite of this, in practically every school arrears of fees are amounting up to alarming figures. Tribute must be paid to the faith and fortitude with which the school authorities and the parents generally are facing the situation.

Buildings.—During the period a new wing was constructed for the Loreto House, Asansol, at an estimated cost of Rs. 1,04,661 towards which Government paid Rs. 41,767. In the year 1928-29 a Kindergarten Department was built for the St. Thomas Girls' School, Kidderpore, at a cost of Rs. 96,303, of which Rs. 45,900 was provided from provincial revenues. The Jewish Girls' School, Calcutta, which was under construction in the previous quinquennium, was completed in the year 1930, but Government could not, owing to financial stringency, contribute anything towards the sum of Rs. 1,00,000 promised for the project.

The new Code of Regulations.—Under the new Code schools have been classified as—

- (1) primary,
- (2) higher grade, and
- (3) secondary.

The old "higher secondary" and "secondary" have been merged under the term "secondary schools".

All the rules of the new Code have been given effect to, with the exception of those relating to the award of maintenance grants to schools. In accordance with the revised Code an additional sum of about Rs. 37,000 per annum is required for maintenance grants, but in the present state of provincial finances it has not been possible to find the money.

The term "salary grant" has been replaced by the term "teaching staff grant", and the term "free boarding grant" has been replaced by the term "fixed grant" and power has been delegated to the Director of Public Instruction to sanction "teaching staff grants" for three years from 1930-31 on certain conditions.

Rules for the award of "fixed grants" have been sanctioned by Government, and power has been delegated to the Director of Public Instruction to sanction "fixed grants" subject to a limit of Rs. 3,000 per month for any particular school.

In accordance with the Code the number of non-Europeans in a European school should not exceed 15 per cent. of the total number of pupils in the school, but Government have the right to relax the rules. The percentage has been raised to 25 in the case of four schools, St. Paul's School, Darjeeling, St. James' School, Calcutta, Pratt Memorial School, Calcutta, and Loreto House, Calcutta.

Vocational training.—Courses for domestic science, manual training, science, etc., which were described as "special subjects" and taught in special classes under the old Code of Regulations for European Schools are regarded under the new Code as an intrinsic part of the school curriculum. Nine secondary schools for boys include science in their ordinary curriculum and three include manual training (woodwork). Eight secondary schools for girls include courses in domestic science, two schools in addition prepare their pupils for the commercial course, while one gives training in industrial subjects. There are still a number of secondary schools which have no practical work in their curricula.

Eighteen higher grade schools take up the courses laid down in Appendix IV of the new Code. Seven higher grade schools train their pupils in the industrial course, five prepare girls in the commercial course, and eleven schools include domestic science in the curriculum of particular classes.

Loreto House, St. Helen's Convent, Dow Hill School and Queen's Hill School, in addition to the ordinary domestic science classes, have a special technical department where selected pupils are trained in specific branches of domestic science. Domestic science subjects were examined as before by the City and Guilds Examination Committee, London.

The St. Thomas' School for Girls arranges annually for needle-work and dress-making to be examined by the City and Guilds Institute, London, and other schools in Calcutta are adopting the same examination. The entries and results of the examinations held in 1931 were as follows:—

XCI.—Results of needle-work examination.

		Entries.	Passed.
Plain needle-work	16	11
Dress-making	2	2

Special arrangements are made for the training of girl probationers in sick-nursing in the school hospital at Loreto Convent, Entally, and St. Andrew's Colonial Homes, Kalimpong. At the latter school selected girls also receive training as children's nurses. Government have authorised the opening of evening continuation classes in connection with the Salesmanship Course for Girls at the Young Women's Christian Association, Calcutta, at a cost of Rs. 450 on an experimental basis. The proposed class could not be held in Calcutta owing to the dearth of candidates.

Education of sub-normal children.—The Children's Home at Kurseong which trains mentally and physically defective European children by special methods had 23 pupils on the rolls on the 31st March 1932 as against 16 on the corresponding date of 1927.

The authorities of the institution used to get a grant of Rs. 150 a month from the department, but have lately decided not to apply for a grant.

Sussex Trust.—The income derived from the Sussex Trust Fund during the year 1931-32 was Rs. 28,720. It was expended on the subjects noted below:—

	Rs. a. p.
1. Scholarships paid to 6 overseas scholars (2 girls and 4 boys)	11,070 3 6
2. Scholarships to local scholars	1,495 0 0
3. Establishment charges paid to 3 Sussex Trust schools ..	2,184 15 9
4. Contingent charges in connection with the Trust ..	900 0 0

Altogether 21 European and Anglo-Indian scholars were awarded scholarships in the year 1931-32. There are two Sussex Trust schools for boys at Digha and Tararat and a girls' school at Dhaniram Chawk.

The Bruce Institution.—The control of the institution is vested in a Board of Governors of whom 7 are appointed by Government and 5 are ex officio. The Director of Public Instruction acts as the honorary secretary. The Administrator was authorised during the period to invest a sum not exceeding Rs. 5,000 in Government securities so that more scholarships may be awarded. The total receipts during the year 1931 including the closing balance of the previous year was Rs. 53,110 and the total amount of expenditure was Rs. 34,645. At the close of the year 1931 there were 93 wards on the rolls as against 104 in 1926-27.

Doveton Trust Fund.—The total amount of receipts during the year 1931-32, inclusive of the total balance on the 31st March 1931 and also the interest accruing on the amount of securities up to the half year ending on the 31st October 1931, was Rs. 12,361-10. The total expenditure during the year was Rs. 7,356-7, leaving a closing balance of Rs. 5,005-3.

Eighteen scholarships at rates varying from Rs. 10 to Rs. 40 a month were renewed and twelve scholarships at rates varying from Rs. 10 to Rs. 40 were awarded. In all thirty scholarships were paid during the year 1931-32.

The Inspector of European Schools, Bengal, acted as the administrator of the Doveton Trust Fund.

Improvement Association.—The association which has been formed in London with the object of promoting the education in British India of children of European or Anglo-Indian descent voted in 1927 a sum of Rs. 40,396 in favour of five European schools in Bengal for purposes of capital expenditure.

CHAPTER IX.

Education of special classes.

Chiefs and nobles.—There is no institution in Bengal for the education of the sons and wards of chiefs and nobles. But there is a hostel attached to the Nawab Bahadur's Institution in Murshidabad reserved for boys of the Nizamat family, under the supervision of the Head Master, assisted by an Ataliq. The number of Nizamat boys under instruction in 1931-32 was 24 against 26 in 1926-27. The upkeep of the hostel cost Government Rs. 5,274 in 1931-32 against Rs. 6,195 in 1926-27.

Backward classes.—Schools for the backward classes are maintained for the most part by missionary societies or philanthropic bodies like the Society for the Improvement of the Backward Classes, the Bengal Social Service League and the Hindu Relief Society. Government gives aid to these institutions and accords special privileges to the pupils. They are often exempted from the payment of fees and a number of scholarships are reserved for them. Hostels are maintained for students of these classes in Calcutta, Dacca and elsewhere, either by Government or with aid from Government.

In 1931-32, 375,554 boys and 64,500 girls of the educationally backward communities were under instruction. The total enrolment shows an increase of 27·8 per cent. over the figures for 1926-27.

KCII.—Number of pupils of backward communities in different stages.

	Boys	Girls	Total	Boys	Girls	Total

Very considerable progress has thus been made, although it is not so startlingly rapid as in the previous period. The growth in the number of girls is particularly satisfactory. Education is spreading faster amongst the backward classes than among other classes. That they will in the near future emerge from their present position and take their legitimate and rightful place in the social and political life of the country alongside the other communities may be confidently anticipated. Amongst the backward classes, the Namasudras, Mahisyas and Pods and the Santals amongst the aboriginal tribes deserve special mention for their eagerness for education and for their spirit of self-help.

The Society for the Improvement of Backward Classes maintained 113 schools in the province and received a grant of Rs. 9,250 in 1931-32. The total amount available for assisting the various societies and boards in advancing education amongst the backward classes was Rs. 1,27,000 in 1931-32.

Namasudras and others.—The total number of Namasudra pupils on the 31st March 1932 was 108,737 against 81,448 in 1926-27, that is, an increase of 33·5 per cent. The percentage of literacy amongst Namasudras is 8·2 by the last census and the percentage of literacy in the province is 11. If this rate of progress is maintained—and there is no reason why it should be otherwise—the Namasudras will soon come up with the advanced Hindus. In the district of Bakarganj, where the Namasudras form a large percentage of the total population, there are high and primary schools under their direct management. Several schools, again, have special hostels for Namasudra children.

The Mahisyas of Midnapore outnumber most communities in the Burdwan Division. They have almost passed out of the class of educationally backward communities and, in fact, no longer desire to be included in that category.

The Pods are found chiefly in the Presidency Division. The number of Pod pupils reading in various grades of schools in the division on 31st March 1932, was reported to be 28,981 (26,099 boys and 2,882 girls).

The Mugs of the Chittagong Division are treated as backward people. There were five departmental primary schools solely intended for them in 1931-32. These schools returned 280 pupils in 1931-32 against 197 in 1926-27. Their total cost was Rs. 3,465 in 1931-32 against Rs. 2,700 in 1926-27; the whole amount was met from provincial revenues. There were also one aided middle English school at Ramu, one aided primary school for boys and two for girls within the Cox's Bazar Municipality chiefly for the benefit of the Mug children.

Jains.—The total number of Jain students receiving instruction in 1931 was 270 against 347 in 1927, viz., 10 in colleges, 188 in secondary schools, and 66 in primary schools. The Jain school at Jamalpur had 28 pupils and received aid from public funds.

Aboriginal tribes.—Of the aboriginal tribes the Santals seem to be the most enterprising and educable. They are found chiefly in Burdwan and Rajshahi Divisions; their numbers are being steadily augmented by immigration or importation as coolies. Special Boards of Santal Education have been formed in the districts of Midnapore, Birbhum, Bankura, Dinajpur, Rangpur and Malda. These Boards are required to advise the departmental inspectorate on the general policy of Santal education, to submit annual reports, to prepare schemes and estimates and to administer all funds available for the education of the Santals.

The number of Santal scholars in the province was 12,477 in 1931-32 against 9,527 in 1926-27. The increase is largely confined to the lowest stage. The chief agencies responsible for educational work amongst the Santals are the American Baptist Mission of Midnapore and the Wesleyan Mission of Bankura. In 1931-32 there were altogether 334 schools exclusively intended for the education of Santals. Of these one was high, two were middle, 327 primary, one guru-training and three industrial schools.

A training school for teachers under one of the missions was closed during the period, as it was no longer considered necessary.

In Rajshahi Division, the number of Santal pupils under instruction showed a drop from 2,911 to 2,811. This drop is more apparent than real as some of the Santals were included among the educationally backward Hindus during the period under review. Absorption into the pale of Hindu society is considered a privilege by many non-Aryan tribes. The total expenditure on Santal education in Burdwan was Rs. 36,336 of which Rs. 29,375 came from provincial revenues in 1931-32 against Rs. 43,170 and Rs. 26,842, respectively, in 1926-27.

The post of the Assistant Sub-Inspector of Schools for Santal Education in Birbhum was abolished, while a Santal Bachelor of Teaching has been posted to Bankura as a sub-inspector of schools and entrusted specially with the duty of promoting Santal education.

Schools exist also for the education of other aboriginal children and hill tribes. In the Chittagong Division the Chittagong Hill Tracts constitute a backward area inhabited by several distinct tribes numbering in all 11,759 according to the census of 1931, of whom 3,250 were under instruction, that is, 27·6 per cent. of the total population.

There were 158 recognised schools in the area for the children of the hill tribes, including the Government High School at Rangamati, four aided middle schools and 153 primary schools, against one high, two middle and 151 primary schools in the previous quinquennium.

Education of factory and colliery children.—The children of mill and factory operatives in the district of 24-Parganas receive instruction in the primary schools and maktabas of the mill areas and the children of miners in the colliery schools of the Burdwan Division. There were 6 primary schools exclusively intended for mill-hands and factory children in 1931-32 against 3 schools in 1926-27. There were 9 colliery schools with 256 scholars in 1931-32, against 10 schools with 230 scholars in 1926-27.

The total cost of maintenance of all these colliery and factory schools was Rs. 5,279 in 1931-32; the Government contribution was Rs. 4,236. Two of these schools were managed by the authorities of the Rifle and Metal and Steel Factories at Ichapur and one by the mill authorities at Titagarh for the education of their mill-hands.

Tea garden schools.—In the Darjeeling and Jalpaiguri districts there were 171 tea garden schools in 1931-32 against 140 schools in 1926-27.

The enrolment was 3,496 in 1931-32 against 2,909 in 1926-27. A drop in enrolment was noticed in 1927-28; and special visits were thereupon made by the sub-inspectors. As a result the number of schools in the Jaipauri district increased from 86 to 99 in one year. This shows how intensive work in a small area arrests retrogression and helps progress; but, as a rule, the inspecting staff is too weak to undertake it. The total cost of these schools was Rs. 24,259, towards which public funds contributed Rs. 10,490. The corresponding figures in the previous quinquennium were Rs. 18,141 and Rs. 9,300, respectively. The day schools were mainly attended by the children of tea garden coolies and the night schools by adults working in the tea garden during the day time.

In the Darjeeling district the schools are for the most part managed and maintained on a grant-in-aid basis by mission authorities, and this is alleged as one of the reasons why the planters of the district take no interest in the education of garden labourers. It has been suggested that the education of tea garden labourers should be the concern of the planters themselves.

Cantonment schools.—The Cantonment area of Barrackpore had 9 schools with 875 scholars in 1931-32, as against 8 schools with 493 pupils in 1926-27. There were 1 high school for boys, 1 middle school for girls, 3 primary schools for boys and 4 primary schools for girls. The total cost was Rs. 29,294 of which Rs. 5,898 came from provincial revenues against Rs. 24,437 and Rs. 6,247 of the previous quinquennium.

There is a lower primary school in the Lebong Cantonment near Darjeeling. The school had 51 pupils on its rolls, and the cost of maintaining it amounted to Rs. 912 the major portion of which was borne by Cantonment funds. The Jalapahar Cantonment Primary School also is an efficient institution.

Education of defectives.—The Calcutta Deaf and Dumb School and the Blind School at Behala in the 24-Parganas are the more important of the schools for defective children. The district boards and a few of the municipalities award scholarships and stipends to deaf, mute and blind children reading in these institutions, and Government have advised municipalities that they will consider favourably applications for grants to the Blind School on condition that it educates blind persons resident in the municipalities concerned. Dacca, Chittagong, Faridpur and Mymensingh have one school each for the deaf and dumb.

The Calcutta Deaf and Dumb School had 199 pupils in 1931-32 against 109 in 1926-27. The pupils in the other schools numbered 69 in 1931-32. The Calcutta School has a Teachers' Training Department which has supplied teachers to deaf and dumb schools in various parts of the country.

The expenditure incurred for the deaf and dumb schools in Bengal was Rs. 46,566 in 1931-32 against Rs. 36,168 in 1926-27. Government contributed Rs. 13,302 in 1931-32 against Rs. 13,836 in 1926-27. The balance was met by a grant from the Calcutta Corporation, donations, fees and sale-proceeds of articles made in the schools. District boards gave Rs. 810 as stipends in 1931-32 tenable at the schools against Rs. 300 in 1926-27.

The Blind School at Behala in the 24-Parganas had 64 boys and 14 girls in 1931-32 against 42 boys and 15 girls in 1926-27. The number of deaf mutes between the ages of 5 and 15 years in Bengal is 11,075 and that of the blind children is 3,527. The existing facilities for the education of such unfortunate children offer relief only to a small percentage. Blind boys trained at the Blind School are now serving as lecturers, running businesses and following other useful occupations.

The Children's Home at Kurseong offers special facilities for the education of defective Anglo-Indian children. It had on its roll 22 children in 1931-32 against 16 children in 1926-27. The total expenditure for the upkeep of the institution was Rs. 5,329.

Education of criminal tribes.—Owing to their nomadic and unsettled mode of life these tribes are not easily susceptible to the influence of education, but some of them are eligible for the scholarships reserved for the backward classes. An industrial settlement for one of these tribes, called the Karwal Nats, exists near Saidpur in the district of Rangpur. The management of this settlement has been placed in the hands of the Salvation Army. Various industries, such as weaving and carpet-making, are taught. It was attended by 69 persons in 1931-32 as against 59 in 1926-27.

Scholarships.—The following scholarships are available for the students of the backward classes:—

- (1) One graduate scholarship of Rs. 30 per month, tenable for 2 years at the University of Calcutta, and another of the same value tenable for one year at the University of Dacca. Besides this, 2 graduate scholarships of Rs. 30 a month each, tenable for 1 year, are awarded to students of backward classes and Moslem students.
- (2) Six senior scholarships of the value of Rs. 15 a month each, tenable for 2 years, are awarded to the students of backward classes by the University of Calcutta and by the Board of Intermediate and Secondary Education, Dacca.
- (3) Six junior scholarships of Rs. 10 a month each, tenable for 2 years, are awarded by the Universities of Calcutta and Dacca, and by the Board of Intermediate and Secondary Education, Dacca.
- (4) Forty middle scholarships of Rs. 4 a month each, tenable for 4 years.
- (5) Sixty-six primary final scholarships of Rs. 3 a month each, tenable for 2 years.
- (6) Thirty-six primary preliminary scholarships of Rs. 2 a month each, tenable for 2 years.
- (7) Six scholarships of Rs. 10 a month for Moslem students and the children of backward classes are also tenable for 2 years at the Ahsanullah School of Engineering, Dacca.

The scholarships mentioned above are reserved exclusively for the children of backward communities, but they are also eligible for general scholarships which are open to students of all classes.

Reformatory and Industrial Schools, Alipore.—The Reformatory and Industrial Schools, Alipore, have been transferred to the administrative control of the Education Department with effect from 1st April 1928. The immediate control of the institutions is vested in the Superintendent and the committee for management and control. The Director of Public Instruction has been appointed Chief Inspector of Reformatory and Industrial Schools, Bengal.

Special curricula of studies for the primary and post-primary classes have been sanctioned. Rules prescribing the powers and duties of the managers of the schools and rules of discipline have been sanctioned.

The staff consists of a Superintendent, a head master, 3 assistant masters, 1 drill master and 5 workshop instructors. A medical officer is also attached to the schools.

The education is conducted in Bengali, Urdu or Hindi up to the standard of primary and post-primary classes. The boys are divided into sets and each set receives theoretical instruction and vocational training each day in the workshop; tailoring, carpentry, blacksmithy, tinsmithy and weaving are taught.

Regular moral instruction is given to the boys every Saturday and the Calcutta Temperance Federation gives lantern lectures.

The boys play football, hockey, basket-ball, volley-ball, badminton and tennis. Gymnastics and drill form a part of the daily routine. The Scout troop of this institution won the Birla Cup in competition with other Calcutta troops.

The school had 215 inmates on the 31st March 1932, as against 51 on the same date of 1926-27. The total number of pupils released was 76 in 1931-32 against 2 in 1926-27. The Bengal After-care Association takes charge of the boys on their release and attempts to find work for them. On holidays selected boys are allowed to go home unattended and see their guardians.

On the 28th May 1931 there was a serious breach of discipline and strong disciplinary measures had to be taken.

The school cost Government Rs. 46,167 in 1931-32.

The Borstal School, Bankura.—This institution had 277 inmates on 31st March 1932, divided into 4 houses, each under a House Master, assisted by student prefects. The boys attended the school in three batches, each getting two hours of schooling daily. They are taught reading, writing in the vernacular and simple arithmetic. English is also taught to the best boys.

The teaching staff of three teachers is regarded by the Inspector-General of Prisons as inadequate. To make the boys self-supporting after release they are taught some industries, such as tailoring, weaving, carpentry, book-binding, smithy, cookery, laundering, compounding, dairy work and care of stock. Due attention was paid to games and physical culture. The Bengal After-care Association continued to do good work. Fifty boys were released on licence in 1931 and transferred to the association for employment. Most of the inmates licensed out have been reclaimed and are reported to be leading sober lives.

A night school for the education of the prisoners of the Jalpaiguri Jail was started during the period under review. It is an unrecognised institution and had 10 pupils on its rolls on the 31st March 1932.

CHAPTER X.

Professional education.

Training of teachers.—A. Men.—There are three different grades of training institutions in Bengal. There are the guru and muallim training schools which train teachers of primary schools and maktabas; there are the normal or vernacular training schools which prepare vernacular teachers for secondary schools; and there are the training colleges leading up to the Degree of Bachelor of Teaching or the Diploma of Licentiate. The department also holds examinations for teachers and inspectors who cannot join a training class.

The departmental examinations are:—

- (a) The Oral Examination in English. Teachers of English in secondary schools who have passed at least the Entrance or Matriculation Examination are eligible to appear at this examination, of which the purpose is to test their knowledge of English idiom and pronunciation.
- (b) The Examination in the Art and Practice of Teaching. This examination, for which both English and Vernacular teachers are eligible, is held by the Inspectors of Schools who grant certificates to those who satisfy the tests prescribed.
- (c) The Urdu Diploma Examination. This is a departmental examination for testing the efficiency in Urdu of maulvis employed in schools and madrasahs.

(1) Guru and muallim-training schools.—These fall into two types. The old type schools are generally being abandoned and partly replaced by schools of the new improved type. The total number of institutions is, therefore, diminishing. There were 102 in 1922, 90 in 1927 and only 86 in 1932; but the new type schools have increased from 28 to 31. The number of pupils, having fallen from 2,047 to 1,749, has again risen, in 1932, to 2,153. Eighty-one of these schools are managed by Government, one by a municipality and four are aided.

The minimum qualification for admission is a pass in the middle vernacular or middle English examination; but an increasing number of candidates come with higher qualifications. This is perhaps due to the hope that the enforcement of the Rural Primary Education Act will open up a better career for the village school-master. One thousand five hundred and thirty-eight gurus passed the training examination in 1932. In Burdwan Division, the successful candidates were placed in two grades; this may improve the quality of the work in the training schools and provide a selection basis for appointments. There has been no change in the curriculum, but agriculture has been introduced as an optional subject in Rajshahi Division.

The total expenditure in 1931-32 was Rs. 3,43,103, as compared with Rs. 2,73,343 in 1926-27. The Government contribution was Rs. 3,24,279. The average cost of a school was Rs. 3,964 and the average cost of a pupil was Rs. 158.

The problem of primary school training is a double problem. In the first place, a sufficient number of men have to be trained, and trained adequately, to provide teachers for all the primary schools in the province. But, in the second place, the conditions of service in the primary schools have to be improved so as to provide trained teachers with a living and a career. Neither problem is at all near a solution. The number of trained teachers in primary schools rose during the period from 15,671 to 21,332, or by 5,661; but the number of untrained teachers increased by 9,157. In other words, out of every three new teachers appointed only one was trained. The schools produce each year about 1,500 teachers and at this rate it will be many decades before all or even a majority of the primary school teachers are trained. Nor do even all those who are trained go into the profession; many of them are attracted by more lucrative—perhaps we should say, less poverty-stricken—employments elsewhere.

The question of providing increased facilities for the training of teachers for primary and secondary schools was carefully examined by a small conference which met in July 1928 at the office of the Director of Public Instruction, Bengal. The recommendations made by the conference formed the basis of the proposals for speeding up the training of primary school teachers that were subsequently embodied in the note submitted to the Legislative Council in connection with the Primary Bill; other important proposals put forward at the conference, such as for increasing the number of trained teachers in secondary schools by means of short courses, are under consideration by the department or awaiting the provision of funds by Government.

(2) Normal schools.—There were 5 normal and first grade training schools in 1932, one in each division. The aided Church Missionary Society's school at Krishnagar was abolished. The total strength was 428 and 138 candidates were successful in 1932.

The total expenditure rose from Rs. 70,970 to Rs. 1,22,651 in 1931-32, almost wholly from provincial revenues. The average cost of a pupil was Rs. 292.

The schools in the two parts of the province work under different rules and have different curricula. A scheme for a unified system is under consideration.

The future of these schools is still uncertain. There are those who say that they have had their day and are no longer necessary. High schools prefer to employ graduates. All inspecting officers regard their reorganisation as an urgent necessity. There was a time when they did very valuable work; their standard was so high and their utility so great that the Education Commission of 1882 ruled the Normal Schools Examination with the University First Arts Examination and regarded them as so many vernacular colleges. They can perhaps be raised again to this status and become vernacular training colleges, supplying vernacular trained teachers for schools of all grades, even high schools. The need for such vernacular teachers will increase in view of the stress that is being rightly laid on the teaching of the vernacular and the teaching of high school subjects through the medium of the vernacular.

The main business of the guru-training school is to train teachers for primary schools; the main business of the training college is to train graduates for the higher posts in secondary schools. But a very large number of teachers remain outside these two categories. Out of 25,157 men teachers in secondary schools, no fewer than 19,472 had no degree. It will be evidently impossible to raise the quality of teaching in secondary schools if no provision exists for training four out of five of the teachers. Normal schools in some form seem to be indispensable.

(3) Training colleges.—The two training colleges at Calcutta and Dacca continued to train secondary school teachers. The number of students has increased, especially in the B.T. classes.

• XCIII.—Students in training colleges.

Year.	Dacca Training College.		David Hare Training College.		Total.
1931-32	81		61		142

The L.T. class in the David Hare Training College has been abolished and there are very few L.T. students at Dacca. Each year five or six Government officers were deputed to each college for training, but this has been suspended since 1932. Moslem students are taken to the number of a third of the total.

In 1926-27, 94 students passed the B.T. Examination and 22 passed the L.T. Examination. In 1931-32, 120 were successful in the B.T. and 4 in the L.T.

When we consider how many schools there are in Bengal and how few trained teachers, the output of the training colleges seems a mere drop in the bucket; 78 per cent. of the high school teachers in Madras are trained, and 81 per cent. of the middle school teachers. In Bengal there are only 13 per cent. trained teachers in high schools and only 27 per cent. in middle schools. At present, there are only about two trained graduates to three high schools, so that the training colleges have not merely to replace the normal wastage of trained teachers, but have gradually to replace the mass of untrained teachers. At the present rate of progress, it will be ten years before each high school can be supplied with one other B.T. and forty years before half the graduates in schools can be trained. There are nearly 5,000 untrained men graduates in secondary schools and less than 800 trained.

And yet proposals are made from time to time that one or both the training colleges should be abolished. Retrenchment Committees, in particular, appear to find these an irresistible target. It cannot be that they regard the trained teachers as no better than the untrained—against the experience of all civilised countries and the conviction of all educational experts. The explanation lies perhaps in two feelings: first, the feeling that any kind of school is good enough for Bengal and that the attempt to improve the quality is a needless waste of time and money; and, secondly, the feeling that in the actual conditions of the province the trained teacher has not proved himself much more useful than the untrained. The first opinion we have already had occasion to combat; that way lies disaster. There is some truth in the second, but it is easy to forget that the trained teacher is at present not doing all one might expect simply because he is isolated—he fights a forlorn battle; he moves in an atmosphere of passive indifference if not of opposition; he has to teach under conditions adverse to good teaching. The remedy is not to train no teachers, but to train them all; the influence will then be cumulative. A single trained teacher in a school may be able to do nothing; but ten of them could do everything. Signs are not wanting that teachers are themselves realising the need of training, partly to become familiar with modern methods of teaching and partly with the object of creating a profession of bona fide teachers.

The David Hare Training College.—The David Hare Training College completed the 24th year of its existence in 1932. During the period under review it trained 264 graduates, of whom 188 were Hindus, 69 Muhammadans and 7 Christians.

The demand for admission showed a steady increase. Both teachers and school authorities realise the value of training and a B.T. degree has been made an indispensable qualification for Government appointments. The college could admit only a fraction of the large number of applicants. The quality of recruits was much higher than before. Accommodation has now been provided for 80 students by a rearrangement of rooms, whereas the previous maximum was 61.

The building scheme has not yet been completed. It is proposed to build residential quarters for the Principal of the college and for the Head Master of the demonstration school on sites which have already been acquired. Schemes for a gymnasium, a science laboratory and a manual work room are awaiting completion.

Mr. Griffith who was the Principal of the college for many years retired in 1930 after a very useful career.

The total direct expenditure on the college in 1931-32 was Rs. 57,459 against Rs. 62,477 in 1926-27.

The results both of the college and of the demonstration school, were good. Ample provision is made for tutorial work, essay-writing and supervised study. Class lectures were supplemented by organised excursions, visits to educational institutions, popular lectures in the college and demonstrations arranged in the natural history and archaeological sections of the Calcutta Museum and the history section of the Victoria Memorial Hall and in the Alipore Meteorological Observatory.

A room has been set free for indoor games and another small room for reading. This contains the periodicals and also an open shelf of books under the charge of a student who acts as the secretary.

Drill was compulsory, and games, though not made compulsory, were well attended. Football and cricket were played as usual. Hockey and several small arena games have been introduced.

The college was largely instrumental in the revision of the old B.T. and L.T. syllabuses of the Calcutta University. The new syllabus prescribes six theoretical papers instead of four under the old syllabus. The college also did some experimental work in developing the implication of the new secondary school syllabus which it had helped to frame. Simple, inexpensive pieces of apparatus for teaching science, nature study, history and geography have been devised. Experiments on the adoption of the Otis Group Tests for Intelligence to Bengal students were continued and it is hoped that in the near future some standard intelligence tests for Bengal will be prepared. Papers have been contributed by members of the staff to the psychological section of the Indian Science Congress.

The college was entirely residential. Hindus, Muhammadans and Christians lived together under the same roof, enjoying the advantages of a healthy corporate life, a feature which is rare in the colleges of Bengal.

The Dacca Teachers' Training College.—The college had 83 students in 1931-32 against 79 students in 1926-27. The demand for admission every year was great and numerous candidates had to be refused admission owing to the want of accommodation.

This college trains students for the province of Assam also and occasionally admits students from other parts of India. No students from Hyderabad have come since 1929-30 as provision has been made for training in the Osmania University. An admission test has been introduced to select the most suitable candidates.

The college prepares students for the B.T. and L.T. Examinations. A scheme for a short course of training with special reference to spoken and idiomatic English has received administrative sanction. The Dacca University held a vacation course for teachers in 1929-30; 16 out of 19 candidates completed the course successfully and were awarded certificates of proficiency in teaching English. The course of studies was revised to suit the present requirements of schools. Elementary phonetics was introduced as well as biology and hygiene. Biology has since been dropped to make room for fuller instruction in hygiene, since hygiene has been made compulsory in high schools. The number of teaching subjects has been reduced from three to two. It was found that very few teachers can teach three subjects efficiently.

Research work in educational methods continued to be done and papers were contributed to the Indian Science Congress. Experiments were made by the Principal on the teaching of English, speech and writing, Sanskrit and arithmetic. The experiment on the lines of the P. N. E. U. system was completed and the results were published in small pamphlets. Mr P. Deb Choudry completed his thesis on the subject of "Word Frequency in Bengali" for the M.T. Degree of the Dacca University.

In 1931-32 the college presented 84 candidates for the B.T. Degree and 3 candidates for the Licentiate in Teaching, of whom 73 and 3, respectively, were successful. Sixty out of 72 candidates passed the B.T. in 1926-27 and 4 out of 7 passed the L.T.

The average cost of training a student in 1931-32 was Rs. 933 per year. The total expenditure on the college was in 1931-32 Rs. 77,509, as against Rs. 93,465 in 1926-27.

B. Women.—(1) Training schools.—The system of training women teachers for primary schools has been thoroughly reorganised during the period. In 1929 a Training Board was established with the Inspectress of West Bengal as Secretary to deal with the whole problem of vernacular training for women teachers in the province. The rules and syllabus were revised. The standard of admission was raised, the Matriculation becoming the qualification for the senior class and class VI (middle vernacular or middle English) for the junior class. The course was extended to two years for junior students and three years for Moslem and backward Hindu students.

Of the 10 schools, 3 were managed by Government, and the others by Christian or Brahmo missions, but aided by Government. Of the Government schools, one was at Dacca and two, the Hindu Female Training School and the Moslem Female Training Institution, in Calcutta. These were housed in not very suitable rented buildings. Perhaps the best of the aided schools is the United Missionary Training Class which has maintained its reputation as a very efficient school and produces a superior type of teachers. The Kalimpong class trains hill girls.

The department awards 89 stipends—48 of the value of Rs. 10 each, tenable in the Government school at Dacca, and 41 of Rs. 15 each, tenable in the institutions in Calcutta. There is now a larger demand for admission, but it is difficult to obtain Moslem students with adequate initial qualifications. There were only 9 Moslem candidates in 1932 although there was room for 15.

It will be noticed that the percentage of passes was very small and of the successful candidates in 1931-32, only 8 were from the Hindu Female Training School, 3 from the Moslem Training Institution and 3 from the Vernacular Training School, Dacca. The average cost of training a woman teacher in these three schools was Rs. 467, Rs. 784 and Rs. 531, respectively. It is doubtful whether the cost per head is commensurate with the results obtained. At this rate of expenditure, it will be difficult to train an adequate number of teachers. It should, however, be remembered that the year 1931-32 was a transitional year in the training system. As the new syllabus had just come into operation, the course was stiffer and the results less satisfactory than usual.

The total number of pupils in 1931-32 was 234 against 201 in 1926-27. The total cost of Rs. 84,052 compared with Rs. 70,907 in the last period. Of this amount, Rs. 65,417 came from provincial revenues.

The following table shows that while there is a considerable proportion of trained women teachers in secondary schools, the proportion is not increasing at all. And, in primary schools, there are very few trained women teachers indeed. The Inspectress of Schools, Dacca, considers that the present curriculum is too advanced for the ordinary village girl and suggests that rural training classes should be attached to middle schools with a simple, practical syllabus. The suggestion is worth considering, as the present system is obviously inadequate to the needs of the province.

(2) Training colleges.—The scheme for the erection of a Women's Training College in Calcutta, to which reference was made in the last report, has received administrative approval. The capital expenditure is estimated at nearly Rs. 7½ lakhs and the recurring cost at about Rs. 81,000 per annum. Meanwhile, the Diocesan College Training Department continues to train girls for the B.T., but the authorities of the college have informed the department that they have decided to close the training class in May 1934. The establishment of the proposed training college can, therefore, no longer be postponed. It is true that the Loreto Training Department has added a B.T. section to the old L.T. section, but it can take only a few students.

Twelve students passed the B.T. from the Diocesan and 8 from the Loreto Training classes in 1931-32 and 7 candidates passed the L.T. from the latter.

The total cost of the Diocesan Training Department was Rs. 6,451 in 1931-32, of which Rs. 5,526 was borne by the department. The average cost of training a teacher was Rs. 460.

Law colleges and classes.—As in previous years, provision for the teaching of law was made by the University Law College, Calcutta, and the Law Departments of the Ripon College and the University of Dacca. The three institutions had altogether 2,527 students on their rolls in 1931-32 as compared with 3,638 in 1926-27. Of these students, 2,061 were Hindus, 444 Muhammadans and the rest belonged to other communities. The upkeep of the Law Departments of the Calcutta University and the Ripon College in 1931-32 cost Rs. 2,72,060 against Rs. 3,03,846 in 1926-27. The cost of maintaining the Law classes attached to Dacca University has been included in the general University returns. Out of 1,368 candidates, 584 passed the final B.L. Examination in 1931-32; the corresponding figures in 1926-27 were 1,732 and 786. The B.L. degree alone does not now entitle its holder to practise in the courts. In 1928 the High Court of Calcutta made certain rules relating to the training of legal practitioners, the most important of which enforces one year's probation work with a practising lawyer as a part of a student's course of law studies. These rules came into force on the 1st of January 1930.

Medical colleges and schools.—Three institutions in Bengal give advanced medical education, viz., the Calcutta Medical College, the Carmichael Medical College, Belgachia, and the School of Tropical Medicine and Hygiene. These institutions had 1,318 students (including 15 women) on the rolls on the 31st March 1932 as against 1,616 students (with 22 women) in 1927. Of the students 1,153 were Hindus, 104 Muhammadans, 56 Christians and 5 belonged to other creeds. The total cost of maintaining the three institutions amounted during the year under report to Rs. 9,48,723 against Rs. 9,23,337 in the previous quinquennium. Out of 527 candidates who appeared in the final examination, 236 were declared to have passed, as compared with 597 and 263, respectively, in 1926-27.

In 1932 there were 9 medical schools in Bengal with 2,418 pupils (including 26 women) on their rolls. Of the 9 schools, two, the Jackson Medical School at Jalpaiguri and the Chittagong Medical School, were started during the period under review. The scheme for starting a medical school at Chinsura has been dropped for the present, owing to financial stringency. The cost of these medical schools was Rs. 4,91,355 of which Rs. 1,77,390 came from provincial revenues. The medical schools presented 819 candidates at the final examination and of these 399 were successful. The corresponding figures during the previous quinquennium being 170 and 256, respectively.

Veterinary College, Belgachia.—On 31st March 1932 the Veterinary College, Belgachia, had an enrolment of 169 pupils, against 125 in 1927. Of these students, 120 were Hindus, 28 Muhammadans and 21 from other communities. The cost of maintaining the college amounted in the year 1931-32 to Rs. 1,88,394, which was met entirely from the provincial revenues. Of the 168 students who sat for the annual examination in 1931-32, 124 were successful. The course extends over three years.

Bengal Engineering College.—Higher training in Engineering is imparted in the Bengal Engineering College, Sibpur. It is divided into two sections, (1) the Engineering Department, containing the Civil, Mechanical and Electrical Engineering classes, and (2) the Industrial or Artisan Department. In Civil Engineering the four-year degree course is followed by a year of practical training; in Mechanical and Electrical Engineering the full college course covers at present about six years (four at the college followed by two of practical training, for the Associateship; or three years at the college and three years of practical training, for the Diploma). In July 1930 administrative approval was accorded by Government to the proposal for the presentation of students of the Bengal Engineering College for the B.E. Degree in Mechanical Engineering of the Calcutta University. Owing to financial stringency the degree course in Electrical Engineering has not up to the present matured. The Industrial Department is intended for training boys (preferably the sons of workmen) in any of the following trades: carpentry, fitting, pattern-making, blacksmithy, turning and foundry (brass and iron).

An engineering college cannot maintain fully-equipped workshops nor would training under such conditions be nearly as useful as training in an actual engineering business. Co-operation between educational and workshop authorities is, therefore, necessary. Many private workshops have expressed their willingness to take the successful candidates of the Mechanical Engineering Department for practical training. It is, however, practically impossible nowadays for the students of the college to get training in the great railway workshops at Kanchrapara, Lillooah, Jamalpur and Kharagpur. In 1931 Government directed that student engineers under practical training should undergo practical training for one full year under the Chief Engineer, Public Health Department, instead of four months' training under the Calcutta Corporation and eight months under the Chief Engineer, Public Health Department, in terms of the orders issued in 1901.

The revision of the B.E. mathematics syllabus has become necessary in order to bring it into line with the syllabus of the all-India examination for the recruitment of engineers. Arrangements are also being made whereby the study of physics and chemistry may be completed by Civil Engineering students before they begin their third year course. Expert engineers and specialists acted as visiting lecturers on subjects such as water-works, drainage, and sewage disposal, structural engineering, railway engineering, irrigation and accounting. The opening of the Indian School of Mines at Dhanbad led to the closing of the mining classes at the college, no fresh admissions have been made since 1927. Owing to the abolition of these classes a readjustment of scholarships was made in 1928.

No appointments are at present guaranteed to students of this college. The old arrangement whereby one post in the senior branches of the Engineering Service (Railways and Public Works Department) was guaranteed in alternate years to a student of this college has been replaced by a system of competitive examinations. From 1928 all such appointments made in India have been filled by a competitive examination. The renewal of the award of University Sibley Scholarships of Rs. 80 a month each, tenable for one year, which had been held in abeyance for a long time, was largely due to the initiative taken by the Director of Public Instruction. In pursuance of the orders of Government the fee rates of the students reading for the Degree course in Mechanical Engineering at the Bengal Engineering College have been fixed with effect from November 1930 at the same scale as those for Civil Engineering students. The fees for those students who take the Diploma and Associateship courses remained unchanged. Many changes were made during the quinquennium in the senior staff of the college, which naturally had a rather disturbing effect on the continuity of the work. It is hoped that in the next few years there will be better opportunities for more co-ordinated service in the technical departments of the college. The appointment of a games master has been administratively approved by Government.

On the 31st March 1932 the college had an enrolment of 307 pupils (170 in the Civil Engineering classes, 73 in the Mechanical and Electrical Engineering classes and 64 in the Industrial classes), against 265 pupils (excluding 26 pupils for the Mining classes no longer in existence) on the corresponding date of 1927. Of the 307 pupils, 259 were Hindus, 12 Europeans and Anglo-Indians, 1 Indian Christian, 1 Sikh and 34 Muhammadans. The number of Muhammadan students has increased from 29 to 34 during the quinquennium.

The cost of maintaining the college during 1931-32 amounted to Rs. 3,98,599, of which Rs. 1,39,310 came from provincial revenues, Rs. 51,631 from fees and Rs. 7,658 from other sources. The total cost in 1926-27 was Rs. 3,38,692. The annual cost per pupil worked out at Rs. 1,647, of which Rs. 1,402 was borne by Government.

The results of the college in the various examinations held in 1932 were as follows:—

XCVII.—Results of Bengal Engineering College in engineering examinations.

Examinations.	Candidates	Passed
B. E	42	32
I. E	66	45
Associateship in Mechanical Engineering	7	7
Diploma in Mechanical and Electrical Engineering	20	11

The college detachment of the 1st Battalion, E. I. R. Regiment, A.F.I., was disbanded in 1930, as the authorities found it more and more difficult to send an instructor and equipment. The college platoons of the University Training Corps have, on the whole, been efficient.

The Secretaryship of the Board of Control for Apprenticeship Training was transferred from the Principal, Bengal Engineering College, to the Principal, Calcutta Technical School, in 1930.

Ahsanullah School of Engineering.—On 31st March 1932, the Ahsanullah School of Engineering, Dacca, had a total enrolment of 493 pupils against 440 in 1927; 419 of these were Hindus and 69 Muhammadans. Besides this number, 62 passed students were receiving practical training under the Public Works and Public Health Departments, railway authorities, local bodies and engineering firms. The first practical examination of passed Overseer students, in accordance with the scheme sanctioned by the Public Works Department in 1921, was held at Dacca in December 1930 and 11 students appeared; it is gratifying to note that 6 of these students have been appointed to the Subordinate Engineering Service of Bengal. The artisan students received, as usual, the benefit of half the amount representing the cost of their labour. The four-year Overseer course, which had been replaced in 1922 by a three-year course, was reintroduced in 1926.

The cost of maintaining the school amounted in 1931-32 to Rs. 1,25,376, of which Rs. 87,354 was met by provincial revenues, as against Rs. 1,19,868 and Rs. 91,821, respectively, in 1926-27. The Survey Training Class for pleaders was again held for six weeks under canvas at Gandaria. The school passed 97 out of 112 students in the Overseer Examination held during the year 1931-32. The Nawab of Dacca has generously offered to pay a sum of Rs. 300 annually for three years from 1928-29 to the student standing first in the Overseer Examination. The new hostel for 204 students was occupied from July 1930, and two bungalows with suitable additions and alterations have been converted into subsidiary hostels for the school. Some tents and survey instruments were purchased during the period.

Bengal Survey School.—This is a small institution at Mainamati in quiet and beautiful surroundings. It has been doing a very useful work in a practical way since its foundation. During the period under review, 237 candidates were admitted to the first year class, all of whom except 36 were either Matriculates or had received higher education. From the year 1928 the admission to the second year class was restricted to those of the passed amins who had at least passed the Matriculation

Examination also. Two hundred and ten candidates passed the amin course during the period, of whom 50 left the school with the amin certificates and 160 joined the second year course; of the latter 127 passed. Owing to general trade depression there was a perceptible fall in the demand for surveyors during the closing years of the period. From 1928 the second year students have carried out actual demarcation of boundaries in reformed areas entrusted to the school by the Collectors of different districts. The school had 68 pupils on 31st March 1932 against 78 in 1927. Forty-three out of 47 students passed the Survey Final Examination and 16 out of 26 the Amin Examination in 1931-32.

To improve the standard of draftsmanship more time was allotted to drawing during the first year course. During the last five years, 3 special students and 9 candidates for appointment as district kanungos were trained in surveying at the school. The upkeep of this institution cost Rs. 19,766 towards which Government contributed Rs. 15,620 as compared with Rs. 15,850 and Rs. 11,790, respectively, in 1926-27.

It has been noticed that during the two years' stay at Mainamati the students invariably improve in physique. The medical supervision of the students rests with a resident assistant surgeon. The school encourages a variety of outdoor games.

The students are all resident in the hostels, of which there are two, one for Hindus and one for Moslems.

During the quinquennium permanent buildings were constructed for the dispensary and the residential quarters of the staff and the Principal; but the hostels are still housed in kutchha buildings.

CHAPTER XI.

Industrial and commercial education.

Higher technical training and scholarships.—No new schemes of technical training have been developed during the last five years in the Universities.

As before two State Technical Scholarships, usually tenable for two years, were awarded from time to time to Bengal students who went abroad for higher technological study; but they have not been awarded since 1931-32 as a measure of economy. For higher technical courses not available in Bengal other scholarships of the value of Rs. 40 and Rs. 60 a month, tenable usually for three years, were occasionally awarded to Bengal students pursuing their studies at the Government Technological Institute, Cawnpore, and the Indian School of Mines and Geology, Dhanbad. Scholarships of smaller values, tenable for one year, were also awarded to the best apprentices at the Evening Technical School, Jamshedpur, who were either natives of or domiciled in Bengal.

Technical education in general schools.—Many secondary and primary schools provided technical instruction of an elementary kind in various crafts. The teaching of such subjects in general schools should, however, be seen in its proper perspective. It cannot perhaps be called vocational. Its chief utility in a general school lies in breaking down the prejudice against manual labour, in developing hobbies for school boys, in relieving the monotony of ordinary routine work and discovering the special aptitudes of boys. Effective vocational training can be given in special industrial and technical schools alone.

Amongst schools which have combined, with some degree of success, general education with technical training, special mention may be made of the following:—

The Maharaja Cossimbazar Polytechnic Institute.—This school has a separate technical branch for the vocational education of pupils in basket-making, carpentry, smithy, clay-modelling and rudimentary electrical knowledge. This department gets a monthly grant of Rs. 100 from the Director of Industries.

Sriram High English School, Sultanpur, Birbhum district.—This school provides cultural and physical education combined with technical training of a practical character in weaving, including dyeing and block-printing, carpentry, smithy, umbrella-making, washing, soap-making, manufacture of bellmetal articles on a small scale and agriculture. Agriculture and one technical subject are compulsory for all students. The school owes its success to the able guidance and inspiration of its founder Rai A. C. Banerji Bahadur, M.A. The school has two hostels, one for Hindus containing 96 seats, and another for Muhammadans containing 36 seats. Quarters for the Head Master and a few other teachers are provided. The school is mainly residential and fulfils the conditions of a truly residential school in the quiet country-side. The hostels were practically full in 1931-32. The cost to a student approximates Rs. 10 monthly, including all charges for tuition, board and lodging. Some students succeed in earning something even while they are at school. Matriculates also are admitted to the technical branch. The school receives a grant of Rs. 100 per month for the technical side from the Industries Department.

The St. Paul's High English School in Calcutta continued to receive a special grant of Rs. 50 per mensem for teaching carpentry.

The Saroj Nalini Industrial School for Women.—The school was founded in December 1925 by the Saroj Nalini Dutt Memorial Association. About eight hundred women underwent training in this institution during the last seven years. The number of pupils on the rolls in 1932 was 150, of whom nearly half were widows and married women. There is a hostel attached to the school.

The following subjects are taught along with general education in English and Bengali up to the middle English standard: sewing, and cutting out, embroidery, drawing, dyeing, knitting by machine, Jaipur ornamental brass work, toy-making, wood-cut, leather-embossing, cane work, music (vocal and instrumental) and nursing.

The school received a grant of Rs. 650 from the Government through the Department of Industries.

The association has also started about 400 mahila samities in different parts of Bengal for the general and vocational training of adult women. For these mufassal branches a sum of Rs. 450 per month is received from Govern

Special industrial and technical schools.—Government has continued to develop this class of institutions. They are gradually growing in popularity and may in time contribute to the solution of the problem of middle class unemployment.

These schools are so graded as to allow a boy to take to some form of technical training at intermediate stages of the cultural scheme. They are roughly classified as:—

- (1) Artisan classes for the illiterate or primary school boy.
- (2) Special junior technical schools for boys who have passed the middle stage.
- (3) Senior technical schools for matriculates and graduates.

The artisan classes teach boys particular trades or crafts under conditions superior to those of the boy who learns his trade from the ordinary village or town mistry. The following crafts amongst others are taught: carpentry, weaving, embroidery, lace-making, carpet-making, soap-making, tailoring, chutney-making and umbrella-making. There are some schools which prepare apprentices for railway workshops, and others which train telegraph signallers, sub-overseers and amins.

The number of technical schools, including weaving schools, was 144 in 1931-32, with 6,315 pupils, as against 153 schools with 6,234 pupils in 1926-27. The Inspector of Schools, Burdwan Division, reports that in place of many weak and inefficient schools that have been closed some new schools have been started with an ambitious and expensive programme.

Junior technical schools.—A brief account is given of the more important junior technical schools

(1) The Burdwan Technical School.—This is managed by the district board. It has four departments—the sub-overseer class, the amin class, the junior technical classes and the improved artisan class. Practical training is combined with instruction in English, vernacular, mathematics, elementary drawing and surveying. The school had 99 pupils in 1931-32 against 48 in 1926-27. The cost to Government was Rs. 3,952 in 1931-32 against Rs. 2,618 in 1926-27.

(2) Sriniketan Sikhasatra, Surul, with 29 pupils cost Rs. 2,932.

(3) The Kalimpong schools, under the Kalimpong Industries Mission Association, are well-known. There were 13 schools in 1931-32 in Kalimpong and the surrounding district as against 16 in 1926-27. These schools teach with success various crafts like weaving, carpentry, lace-making and gardening. The enrolment was 415 in 1931-32 against 517 in 1926-27. The total cost was Rs. 27,409 in 1931-32 as against Rs. 37,498 in 1926-27. The Government grant was Rs. 6,000.

(4) The Piasbari Sericultural School in Rajshahi had 11 pupils against the same number in 1926-27. The cost to Government was Rs. 2,683 in 1931-32 against Rs. 5,204 in 1926-27.

(5) The Khulna Coronation School, under the district board, spent Rs. 5,022 in 1931-32 against Rs. 8,817 in 1926-27, and provides free instruction extending over three years in blacksmithy, tinsmithy and brass-moulding.

(6) The Rangpur Technical School is managed by Government. It had 55 pupils in 1931-32 in its artisan classes against 73 pupils in 1926-27. Twenty-five pupils passed the different examinations. The total cost in 1931-32 was Rs. 14,346 (Government Rs. 11,387 and fees and other sources Rs. 2,959). The corresponding figures for 1926-27 were Rs. 14,699, Rs. 11,324 and Rs. 3,375, respectively.

(7) The Pabna Elliot Banamali Technical Institute, which is a Government school, has sub-overseer, survey, amin and button-making classes. It had 77 pupils, of whom 35 lived in the attached hostels. The total cost was Rs. 18,043 (Rs. 11,402 from provincial revenues) against Rs. 18,218 (Rs. 12,101 from provincial revenues) in 1926-27.

(8) The Rajshahi Jubilee Technical School had sub-overseer and amin classes and also provision for cane-work, smithy, weaving and carpentry. The enrolment was 101 in 1931-32 as against 103 in 1926-27. The total expenditure was Rs. 13,327 including Rs. 1,200 from Government in 1931-32 against Rs. 15,479 including Rs. 1,200 from Government in 1926-27.

(9) The Barisal Technical School was managed by Government. It had 49 pupils in its artisan classes against 32 of 1926-27. The total cost was Rs. 11,089, of which Rs. 10,198 came from Government funds.

(10) The Elliot Technical School, Comilla, had 129 pupils in 1931-32 against 62 of 1926-27. The expenditure in 1931-32 was Rs. 20,413 against Rs. 16,969 of 1926-27. The Government contribution to the school is Rs. 3,500. The district board's contribution was Rs. 11,401 and the sale of manufactured articles fetched Rs. 5,512. Instruction is provided in brass-moulding, smithy, carpentry, weaving and elementary mechanical engineering.

(11) The Kashi Kishore Technical School, Mymensingh, managed by the district board, trains artisans on a three years' course. No fee is charged and Rs. 2,495 was spent on scholarships against Rs. 2,000 in 1926-27. The total cost was Rs. 18,934 against Rs. 19,328 of 1926-27. The pupils numbered 86 in 1931-32 against 103 in 1926-27.

(12) The Edward Industrial School, Bogra, is a Government institution providing practical instruction in smithy and carpentry and theoretical instruction in elementary mathematics, estimating and drawing. Twenty-five Government and ten district board stipends are available in this institution.

(13) Pahartali Vernacular Industrial School under the Loco-Superintendent, Assam-Bengal Railway.

(14) Asansol Technical School.—With the active co-operation of the Indian Iron and Steel Works, a technical school has been started at Asansol to which apprentices from the various engineering concerns in the neighbourhood will be admitted.

(15) The Bengal Tanning Institute maintained the high tradition of its research educational and propaganda work. Many students of the institute have started small tanneries and have achieved success. Demonstration parties were sent round the province and rendered useful service. Instruction in boot and shoe-making has been added.

Senior technical schools.—There were three senior technical schools against the same number in 1926-27. The schools are affiliated to the Board of Control for Apprenticeship Training.

(1) Calcutta Technical School.—This school has considerably extended its courses of instruction. To the mechanical and electrical engineering course extending over five years, with which the school was started in 1926, have been added a special electrical wiremen's course for one year and a plumbing and sanitary fitting course. Other schemes—for printing and electric arc welding classes—have been prepared, but cannot be put into operation for lack of funds.

It is noteworthy that the Calcutta Technical School has, within a short period, been successful in inspiring such confidence among employing firms that some of them are now insisting on candidates for apprenticeship passing the Entrance Examination of the school.

The school had 183 students on its rolls in 1931-32; 59 students appeared at the Board of Control's Technical School Annual Examination and 44 passed in 1931-32.

All the students are workshop apprentices, except a few who are admitted on the condition that they will get themselves apprenticed to a firm within the first year of their admission. The tuition fees are generally paid by the workshop authorities on whose recommendations the apprentices are admitted.

The teachers do not belong to any Educational services. Owing to financial reasons, two lecturers were discharged in the year 1930-31 and their places filled by others on a lower salary. Besides the regular staff, there are part-time lecturers who are responsible officers of local firms, many of whom hold degrees or equivalent qualifications.

The Secretaryship of the Board of Control for Apprenticeship Training was transferred from the Principal, Bengal Engineering College, to the Principal, Technical School, in 1930-31.

A Government grant of Rs. 70,489 was given to the institute in 1931-32 as against Rs. 47,500 in 1926-27. The fee income of the institute decreased from nearly Rs. 20,000 in 1926-27 to Rs. 14,368 in 1931-32.

(2) Kanchrapara Technical School.—This was the outcome of the recommendations of the Mukherji Committee appointed by the Government of Bengal in 1919 to formulate a scheme of training which should co-ordinate the work of the Bengal Engineering College with the system of apprenticeship that obtained in railways and manufacturing firms in and around Calcutta. The object is to train the majority of apprentices to qualify for positions of intermediate responsibility in workshops and at the same time to provide facilities for selected apprentices to take advantage of the higher courses in mechanical and electrical engineering at the Bengal Engineering College and qualify for positions for which a higher scientific training is necessary.

The Bengal Government's share of the expenditure is limited to the provision and maintenance of the Technical School and the provision of new hostels, while the railway is responsible for the pay of the apprentices, the hostel establishment charges and the capital cost of the quarters of the school staff.

The Board of Apprenticeship Training is vested with the general control of the technical education of the apprentices.

The passing of the Board's Admission Examination is compulsory for all candidates seeking admission to the workshops and the school at Kanchrapara.

The Technical School building provided by the Bengal Government was completed in 1927 and was formally opened by His Excellency Sir Stanley Jackson, the Governor of Bengal.

The Anglo-Indian hostel which had accommodation for only 19 apprentices was extended in 1927-28 to provide accommodation for 8 more youths, the Government of Bengal meeting the cost of the extension according to the agreed allocation of expenditure.

During the five years from April 1927 to March 1932, 76 apprentices were admitted to the workshops and the school; 12 proceeded to the Bengal Engineering College and 38 completed their apprenticeship at Kanchrapara.

The average annual expenditure during the last five years amounted approximately to Rs. 36,000 to the share of the Government of Bengal and Rs. 45,000 to the share of Eastern Bengal Railway.

(3) The Bengal-Nagpur Railway Technical School, Kharagpur.—In this school the course of technical instruction prescribed by the Board of Apprenticeship Training has hitherto been only partially followed. Until 1931 only about 35 Anglo-Indian apprentices used to be trained, but it has been now agreed that the number of apprentices under training should be raised to 70 (35 Anglo-Indians and 35 Indians) in the near future. The question of providing a permanent building for the Kharagpur School is being held in abeyance.

Commercial education.—In universities.—The Universities can point to no new development in commercial education. The Dacca University reports that the demand for the pass commerce course has not been very marked.

Classes in shorthand, typewriting and book-keeping have been opened since 1928-29 at the Narasingha Dutt College, Howrah, which the students are allowed to join free of payment. On the other hand, the commerce department attached to the Krishnath College, Berhampore, was abolished in 1929-30 owing to the lack of pupils. Students reading the I.A. course at the Jagannath Intermediate College may take up, as before, commerce as a special subject.

A proposal is now under consideration which involves a general delegation of control over commercial education in the province from Government to the governing body of the Commercial Institute in Calcutta.

The institute already exercises some control over the commercial schools affiliated to it; but effective control is possible only by regular periodical inspection for which more funds are required than are now available.

Commercial schools.—The Government Commercial Institute is the chief among the 24 commercial schools, which now exist in Bengal; of these 12 with 957 pupils are in Calcutta and the rest (12 with 217 pupils) are outside Calcutta; most of them are affiliated to the Commercial Institute. There were 26 schools in 1926-27, but two of the mufassal schools have ceased to exist. The total number of pupils has fallen from 1,585 to 1,174; the trade depression is probably responsible for the drop. The scheme for the reorganisation of the Government Commercial Institute—the outcome of the labours of the Commercial Education Committee of 1925-27—received administrative sanction in 1929.

The need for more accommodation has been partly solved by removing the institute to new premises in Hastings Street. As before, the evening classes attracted a larger number of students than the day classes.

During the period, the institute gained considerably in status by the recognition of its Final Commercial Course Examination as equivalent to the I.A. Examination, for the purposes of the admission of students to the B.A. and B.Com. classes. The step has had a marked effect on the admissions to the day classes. Many more candidates sought admission than there was room for. The Calcutta University has declared that it would be prepared to give up direct B.Com. teaching if adequate arrangements could be made in the institute to impart commercial education up to the degree standard. The Commercial Institute Board has, accordingly, recommended the establishment of degree classes in the institute. If the recommendation is accepted by Government, Bengal will have in the near future a full first grade commercial college. It is hoped that the practical character of the teaching now imparted at the institute will not be impaired in the process of raising it to the degree standard.

The complete course at present extends over two years at the end of which students are allowed to sit for examinations conducted by the Government Commercial Institute Board. A diploma, signed by the Principal and countersigned by the Secretary, Bengal Chamber of Commerce, and the Director is granted to each student who passes these examinations.

The institute had 365 students on the rolls on the 31st March 1932 against 225 in 1927. The institute presented 51 students at the final examination, of whom 34 passed, and 77 students at special examinations, of whom 51 passed. The affiliated institutions presented 146 students, of whom 73 passed. Out of 26 private candidates 14 passed. Altogether 172 candidates passed commercial examinations in various subjects in 1931-32 against 137 in 1926-27. The expenditure in 1931-32 was Rs. 71,690, of which Rs. 46,824 came from provincial revenue and the balance of Rs. 24,866 from fees; the corresponding figures for the year 1926-27 were Rs. 61,523, Rs. 48,141 and Rs. 13,382, respectively. The cost per pupil thus fell from Rs. 273 to Rs. 196, of which Rs. 128 was borne by Government.

Rai Sahib G. K. Sen, who had ably managed the institution for about 18 years, retired from service and Mr. M. K. Ghosh, M.A., B.COM. (Lond.), was appointed as Principal.

Schools of art.—In 1931-32 the province had five art schools as against six schools in 1926-27. One (the Government School of Art) is managed by Government, three others are aided and one received no aid. The number of students had increased from 424 in 1922 to 567 in 1927 but fell to 519 in 1932. There was a decrease in the total expenditure also from Rs. 1,01,936 to Rs. 81,976. In 1927 Government contributed Rs. 71,149, but only Rs. 48,520 in 1932.

The Government School of Art.—The Government School of Art is the most important of the art schools. The institution has had interesting developments in the last five years.

The students are now admitted after a preliminary test, which was instituted three years ago. The course extends from five to six years.

and is divided into an elementary and an advanced section. There are eight departments: Indian painting, fine art (art taught on European models), commercial art, wood engraving, lithography, draftsmanship, clay-modelling and teachership.

Each department has an elementary and an advanced section, but different departments sometimes have their elementary sessions in common.

The school curriculum has been reorganised during the period under review. The commercial art section, which has not yet been made permanent, continued to attract students, and probably has a future.

The teaching in the lithography department has been made practical, each student being required to print his own work.

A school magazine has been started which contains reproductions of work done by the staff and the students.

Eleven exhibitions of the drawings and paintings of the staff and students of the school and also of well-known artists and of old Indian designs, engravings, etc., were held during the period. These exhibitions attracted a large number of visitors and served as an inspiration to the students. Several lantern lectures were also organised. Members of the staff did some original work. A collection of wood-cuts by Mr. Chakravarty, the head assistant teacher, has been highly praised in artistic circles.

The Principal complains that he is obliged to devote to administrative work a considerable part of his time which could be better employed in artistic work and teaching. A Registrar or Bursar, to look after the administrative side and relieve the Principal of some of his routine duties of clerk and record-keeper, would be a useful addition. The crafts department might be strengthened, as there are indications that artistic crafts are slowly passing from the hands of traditional artisans to those of trained artists.

The Principal suggests that the value of the diploma would be enhanced if the holders were allowed to use the title of A.G.S.A. (Associate of the Government School of Art) after their names.

The enrolment in the school in 1931-32 was 237 (Hindus 225, Muhammadans 9 and others 3) against 337 in 1926-27. The maximum number of students for the school has been limited to 300. In 1931-32, 27 candidates appeared and 14 qualified for a certificate. The Principal reports that the demand among girls for art education is growing, but there is no institution for them in the province. The University of Calcutta have proposed drawing, painting and other fine arts as optional subjects for girls and it will be necessary to train teachers for these subjects. He suggests that provision should be made for girls in the School of Art.

The total expenditure on the school was Rs. 44,880, of which Rs. 11,480 came from fees.

Weaving schools.—Weaving is taught in a few general secondary schools, but for the most part in special weaving schools, some of which are peripatetic, and through demonstration parties. It was observed in the last Review that there was reason to doubt if the weaving schools had not multiplied beyond the needs of the moment. The drop in the number of schools and their enrolment during the last five years shows the truth of the remark. Chittagong was particularly mentioned as having had 27 schools (4 old and 23 new) in the previous quinquennium. The number of schools in the division has now fallen to 14. The Burdwan Division had 32 schools in 1926-27, of which only 20 were found to exist in 1931-32. The Inspector of Schools, Burdwan, reports that many weak weaving schools lost public sympathy and support and naturally disappeared. The number of schools and pupils have, however, increased in the Rajshahi Division.

The Government Weaving Institute, Serampore.—The institute has kept up its record of good work and provides the following courses of instruction: (1) a three-year course for young men to qualify themselves for responsible positions in handloom factories. The Matriculation is the minimum qualification for admission to the class; (2) a two-year course for artisans—this is meant for handloom weavers by caste or profession; (3) a two-year female training industrial class for teaching women plain and fancy needle-work, spinning and weaving, carpet-making, dyeing and calico-printing.

The female training class had originally a higher section corresponding to the men's three years' course. It had to be abolished, because there was no demand.

The institute reported 138 pupils (including 26 women) in the year 1931-32 against 75 pupils (including 6 women) in 1926-27. Of these students, 105 were Hindus, 22 Muhammadans and 11 Indian Christians. The upkeep of the school cost Rs. 41,033 during the year under report, of which Rs. 39,867 came from provincial revenues. The institute had cost Rs. 72,540 in 1926-27. The cost per pupil was Rs. 297, of which Rs. 288 was borne by Government. The permanent school building has been occupied since July 1930 and a new workshop has been completed. The administration (with staff) of the outlying weaving schools and demonstration parties was transferred from the control of the Principal to that of the Director of Industries with effect from 1st April 1928 and at the same time the Assistant Principal of the institute was transferred to the Directorate as Assistant Inspector of Weaving Schools. The Principal of the Weaving Institute, being relieved from outside duties, can now pay undivided attention to the institute itself. The constitution of a managing committee of 14 members with the District Magistrate as President was sanctioned towards the close of the session 1928-29. Mr. Hoogewerf who was the Principal of the institute since 1909 has retired.

During the five years from 1927 to 1932, 34 students passed the Final Diploma Examination of the institute and 76 students passed the City and Guilds Examination of the London Institute. Thirty-four women completed their training in the female industrial classes, and 114 men in the artisan class.

The Silk Weaving and Dyeing Institute at Berhampore started its first session with about 60 students in 1927-28.

Besides the Berhampore Government Institute, there are 9 district weaving schools and 25 peripatetic weaving centres. There are also five demonstration parties (against three of the previous quinquennium) which visit mufassal centres to demonstrate modern methods and appliances. As a consequence home industries in jute, waste silk and coir, spinning and weaving have received an impetus. A large number of persons of the aboriginal tribes in Bankura district are maintaining their families by the weaving which they learnt at the Weaving Institute or from the demonstration parties.

Music schools.—The number of music schools in 1931-32 was 8 with 300 pupils as against 8 with 168 pupils in 1926-27; 4 are aided. The cost to provincial revenues was Rs. 5,160. It is reported that 4 ex-students of the Bankura and 15 of the Vishnupur music schools have taken to teaching music as a profession and that the demand for music teachers is on the increase. As reported elsewhere, a representative conference was held under the presidency of the Director of Public Instruction, Bengal, in 1928 to discuss the question of the introduction of music in secondary schools.

The Sangit Sammilani and the Sangit Sangha of Calcutta are two well-known institutions for teaching vocal and instrumental music. They have maintained their tradition as efficient centres of instruction in music for girls. Both received aid from Government.

Agricultural education.—The Royal Commission on Agriculture have recommended a scheme for an agricultural institute at Dacca—which is still far from full realisation, owing to the want of funds. A proof of the desire for agricultural education is furnished by the generosity of Babu Jogendra Narayan Saha Roy of Lalgarh in Midnapore, who gave an endowment of Rs. 30,000 towards the introduction of agricultural teaching in the local middle English school. A grant from the Imperial Council of Agricultural Research has enabled the Dacca University to found an Agricultural Research Fellowship. Grants have also been sanctioned by the Imperial Council to the University of Calcutta towards schemes of agricultural research.

It is hoped that the closer association of the two Universities in the work of agricultural research will have valuable results. Both of them are strongly represented on the Provincial Agricultural Research Committee which has been constituted in accordance with the recommendations of the Royal Commission. The scheme for an agricultural department at Rajshahi College, in accordance with the wishes of the late Kumar Basanta Kumar Roy Raj Dighapatia, has not yet materialised; but intermediate classes in botany were opened in the Rajshahi College in 1930-31.

Of agricultural education in secondary schools some account has already been given in Chapter IV. The agricultural classes attached to Amarpur Bimala High School and Bara Bainan Middle English School in the district of Burdwan, and Durgapur High School, Chittagong, continued to work well.

The Agricultural School at Manipur, Dacca, which is a Government school, had 38 pupils on 31st March 1932. The upkeep of the school cost Rs. 25,286, the whole of which was borne by Government. The school provides a two-year practical course, comprising the elements of physics, chemistry, agriculture, botany and allied subjects. There is hostel accommodation for both Hindu and Muhammadan students.

The Agricultural Department of King Edward Middle English School, Hatchapra, reported 57 pupils on 31st March 1932. The total maintenance charges amounted to Rs. 7,200, of which Rs. 1,200 was met from provincial revenues and Rs. 264 from district board funds.

CHAPTER XII.

Physical and moral training.

The new scheme of physical training.—Definite advance was made during the period in the organisation and development of physical education. The reports of the Students' Welfare Committee since 1920 had made clear the wide prevalence of physical defects and diseases among students. By 1926 public opinion was ready for the resolution of the Bengal Legislative Council that physical education should be compulsory for all students between 12 and 18 years of age. But ways and means were lacking. There was no definite scheme, expert advice was not available, money was scarce.

The resolution, however, led to the preparation of a comprehensive plan by the department, which was submitted to Government in August 1926. This was followed by detailed proposals in 1927 about the measures necessary for the gradual introduction of physical education in schools and its financial implications. Among the suggestions were the appointment of a Physical Director and Assistant Physical Director, the appointment of qualified physical instructors in Government institutions, the deputation of teachers for physical training and the grant of money to schools.

In 1928 physical exercise was made compulsory in all grades of schools. In November of the same year, the new Physical Director joined his post. After spending some months in a survey of the situation, he presented a report in May 1929 reviewing the whole field and making specific recommendations. In particular he urged the establishment of a nine months' course to train qualified physical instructors and the preparation of careful syllabuses of physical education containing definite programmes of work for the guidance of instructors. These proposals, with the suggestions of the Director of Public Instruction already accepted by Government, completed the scheme for the extension of physical culture in schools and colleges.

Physical instructors.—The success of any large scheme of this nature must obviously depend partly on the headquarters staff which has to make the general plans and watch the progress from time to time and partly on the men in the institutions who have to carry out the plans. During the period, there was a Physical Director and an Assistant Director at headquarters, but the latter held only a temporary post, renewed for a few months at a time, and the post of the former was created for five years in the first instance. Equally necessary for the proper execution of the scheme are capable instructors. This was recognised in 1927 when it was decided to appoint graduates with a diploma in physical education as physical instructors on the scale of Rs. 75–200. The old type of drill and drawing master was practically useless—indeed it is difficult to understand why drill and drawing were entrusted to the same person unless it was that each was a part-time job. The association of art and muscle is, to say the least, unusual. The new physical instructors are quite a different type. But only 7 of them were appointed to Government institutions during the period. To raise the general standard, however, short physical training courses were started in 1927; and altogether 200 teachers of middle English schools and junior madrasahs, 107 guru-training school teachers and 57 sub-inspectors attended them and obtained certificates.

These courses were, of course, only a temporary expedient and a scheme, costing Rs. 15,000, was prepared for a proper training centre in Calcutta. It was opened after the quinquennium with 16 students; and Bengal may now be able to train its own physical instructors.

Physical culture in schools.—Boys' schools.—Schools needed both guidance and money to arrange for compulsory exercise. The syllabuses prepared by the Physical Director for secondary schools were published before the end of the period and those for primary schools were ready for publication. Government also provided a considerable sum of money for grants to secondary schools and madrasahs for apparatus, medical inspection and the organisation of games. The condition was that each school should contribute from games fees and other sources at least double the amount of the grant. Many schools were unable to satisfy this condition and of the Rs. 80,500 available between 1929 and 1932 only Rs. 48,712 was actually distributed.

Physical exercise competitions were organised, especially in Calcutta between high schools. In February 1932, no fewer than 22 schools took part, each sending a team of 32 boys. The competition was followed by an impressive demonstration of mass exercises, of small area games and gymnastics. A high level was reached in these performances and the competitions have aroused a keen spirit of emulation.

One of the chief obstacles to compulsory exercise or games is the problem of food. Many boys spend the whole school day from 10 to 4 or so without a meal; and they are naturally reluctant to stay on after school hours to play games—food then seems more desirable than even play. Few schools have, however, yet made satisfactory arrangements for a mid-day or afternoon tiffin. That it can be done is shown by the Keshab Academy, Calcutta, which provides tiffin at the cost of a pice a day per boy. The Rampurhat Union School gives a free tiffin to its pupils. But these are exceptions rather than the rule. And, generally, it is only institutions which are largely or wholly residential that are able to insist on compulsory physical exercise.

Part of the difficulty is the compulsion itself. Drill is compulsory in all primary and secondary schools and, by a strange perversity of human nature, what is compulsory becomes distasteful. Besides, there is little in drill itself that is attractive to the driller—its spirit is the spirit of combination and discipline rather than the spirit of self-expression. And finally, many of the drill masters are men whose lack of imagination and initiative would make even exciting things dull and make dull things intolerable. It is not surprising that boys turn with relief to games. Cricket, hockey, tennis and football are becoming increasingly popular—especially football, which may almost be called the national game of Bengal. It is comparatively inexpensive in equipment, but it is expensive in space. And the space is often very limited, most of all in Calcutta and the larger towns. Hence, attention is being more and more directed to small-space games like basket-ball, volleyball and badminton, which are within the spatial and financial resources of almost all institutions. They encourage the team spirit almost as much as the larger games and possess great advantages in cheapness and ease of organisation. The general diffusion of these games is helping to solve the problems of physical exercise for the masses of schoolboys.

A great impetus has been given to hockey by the visit of the victorious All-India Hockey Team to Calcutta and to tennis by the visits of the French, Japanese and, later, Italian teams. There are other forms of exercise which are also becoming more popular. Swimming and rowing are favourite games of sport in the riverain districts of East Bengal, but they need to be better organised to yield the maximum results. Many swimming clubs exist in Calcutta and educational institutions may be more closely linked with them. The variety of games and sports and the enthusiasm with which they are pursued afford proof of the growing consciousness that physical fitness is the first principle in a sound educational system.

But all this is only a beginning. A great number of boys still go through school wan and unplayful. Too many parents still regard games as a temptation and a snare. But we may feel that the foundations have been laid and proper plans sketched out for the superstructure.

An attempt has also been made to create a central sports organisation for Indian schools, especially those in or near Calcutta. The Indian Schools' Sports Association have, for many years, organised an annual meeting; and steps have been taken to make it representative of all schools so that it might become a central controlling authority and to extend the range of its activities to games as well as to athletics.

Mention should also be made of the private gymnastic clubs, akhras, which are recruited largely from schools and colleges. They were a private and spontaneous growth, but they spread quickly and have now about 10,000 members. As the clubs suffered from lack of direction and of knowledge of the best methods, an attempt has been made to get up a co-ordinating central organisation. Another interesting form of exercise is dancing. The credit for the revival of the ancient village dances of Bengal belongs entirely to Mr. G. S. Dutt, I.C.S., whose efforts have met with a great measure of success, especially in Birbhum. Mr. Dutt, in co-operation with the Physical Director, organised in February 1932 a three weeks' training course for school teachers at Suri. Forty-six teachers attended.

Girls' schools.—The regulations, circulars and schemes drawn up for the development of physical education applied to girls' and boys' schools equally.

Throughout the period, work in girls' schools was carried on by the Physical Directress to the Young Women's Christian Association, in Calcutta, which received a Government grant of Rs. 275 per mensem on condition that a Physical Directress was maintained for the purpose.

Training classes for women teachers from both Indian and European schools were organised each cold weather, tours were undertaken to mufassal schools for inspection and demonstration of methods, and annual demonstrations of work by about four to five hundred girls from Calcutta schools were organised. The demonstrations in particular were noteworthy as an evidence not only of the excellence of the work of girls and teachers, but also of the rapidity with which prejudice against organised physical activities for girls is being overcome.

• Scouting and guiding.—The period began with a total number of 6,293 scouts and closed with 7,730 scouts in the province. There was a rapid growth in numbers during the first three years and in 1930 there were 8,338 scouts. Since then, the expansion of the movement has been affected by the active propaganda carried on against it by the Congress. Definite and systematic attempts were made to wean boys from it by the misrepresentation that it was run by Government for its own benefit. Nevertheless, the steady growth of the movement has been well maintained and some solid work has been done. There have been very few cases of any breach of discipline by scouts.

Scouting made considerable progress amongst the poor and afflicted boys. Troops or packs were started at the Borstal School, Bankura, the Raniganj Leper Home, the Blind School, Behala, the Deaf and Dumb School, Mymensingh, and the Reformatory and Industrial Schools, Alipore. The Club section has shown remarkable growth and has spread amongst primary schools. The Rover section is also growing. Four hundred and thirty-nine scout masters gave voluntary short lessons in scouting outside school hours.

An All-Bengal Jamboree was held from the 30th December 1928 to 2nd January 1929 in Calcutta, attended by more than 1,400 scouts from all the districts of Bengal. There were displays of scouting activities and exhibitions of handicrafts. The Jamboree was attended both by His Excellency the Viceroy, Chief Scout for India, and by His Excellency the Governor, Chief Scout for Bengal.

The Provincial Association has now arranged an annual All-Bengal Competition. The first of these competitions was held in February 1932, was attended by 1,200 scouts and was presided over by His Excellency the Governor. Great credit is due to Mr. N. N. Bhose, the Provincial Organising Secretary, to whose tact, energy, enthusiasm and faith in the face of difficulties scouting in Bengal owes so much.

Girl guides are now found in almost all the girls' high schools and some of the middle schools in Calcutta. The movement is spreading to the mufassal.

The following grants were given during the period for the development of scouting :—

	Rs.
Boy Scout headquarters	30,000
Scout troops in Indian schools	19,750
Scout troops in European schools	10,262
Guide companies in European schools	2,884
Total	62,896

In 1931-32 it was found necessary, because of financial stringency, to stop the grants to scout troops and guide companies in European schools, but it speaks much for the firm grip of the movement on its members that this made no appreciable difference to the efficiency of the troops.

Physical training in colleges.—If the progress of physical training in schools was of a very definite nature, we cannot say as much of colleges. In schools it is a comparatively easy matter to introduce physical exercise; in colleges it is more difficult.

The University authorities decided that it was not desirable "to make physical education compulsory in colleges. But in some colleges it has been made compulsory for first year students.

Some financial assistance was given to colleges until 1930, when the grants were suspended. Between 1927 and 1930 part of the Imperial grant was earmarked each year for distribution to non-Government colleges for games and gymnastics; and during this time, Rs. 68,400 was distributed for the purpose. As a result, many of the colleges had facilities for the organisation of physical activities. But, unfortunately, the importance of qualified specialists in physical education was not sufficiently realised and full advantage was not taken of the facilities provided. Only two non-Government colleges appointed trained physical instructors, most of the others being content to carry on with untrained drill masters. Some had no instructors at all, but depended entirely on the willingness of members of the staff and of students in organising games and sports.

There were, however, indications that the urgency of schemes for improving the physique of students was being generally recognised and that the Calcutta University, faced with the findings of the Students' Welfare Committee, contemplate definite action in the near future. The University of Dacca has made physical exercise and games compulsory for all its students and has made adequate arrangements for supervision.

University Training Corps.—The Calcutta University Training Corps carried on its work and the 12th Company Dacca University Training Corps was started in 1928. The strength of the Calcutta University Corps was 389 in 1931-32 as against 597 in 1927-28. In March 1931 Lt.-Col. Sir Hasan Suhrawardy was appointed to command the unit.

There are 3 senior grade officers and 9 junior officers in the battalion. Platoons are organised by colleges. Training is continuous except during the long vacation and part of the Puja holidays. The delay in approving the applications of recruits has, unfortunately, reduced the strength of the platoons; and work has been hampered by the delay in issuing kits and by the absence of d.p. rifles. The Principal of the Bengal Engineering College suggests that, as all the members from the college are engineering students, an Engineering or Sapper platoon would be popular. The annual camp is held for 15 days during the cold weather. The attendance at the camp has not been very satisfactory owing to sickness and the proximity of the University examinations.

Personal health and medical care.—School children were medically examined in various places, at Asansol, in Dacca, particularly within the jurisdiction of Narayanganj Municipality, and in Calcutta, on the initiative of the Public Health Department. Altogether 16,700 boys and 524 girls were medically inspected. Excluding girls, the result of the inspection was as follows: 23 per cent. were well nourished, 53 per cent. fairly nourished and 21 per cent. ill-nourished. While the average height at different ages compared favourably with the anthropometric standard, the average weight was comparatively far less favourable. Of the total number of students examined 67 per cent. were found to be suffering from bodily defects, and 14·7 per cent. were found to have eye troubles, chiefly defective vision. These figures are for boys in secondary schools, but the latest report on the health of boys of primary schools is no more satisfactory. The inspection in primary schools within the newly started rural health circles was done by competent medical officers under the supervision of the District Health Officers. They visited about 1,439 schools and examined 26,292 pupils, of whom 59 per cent. were found defective. The majority of them had enlarged spleen and others were suffering from malnutrition and vermin infection.

The latest available report of the Students' Welfare Committee of the Calcutta University discloses the same alarming facts and records no marked improvement in the general health of students in colleges. The system of sending reports to individual colleges on the health examination of their students was continued. Special arrangements were made to follow up students suffering from defects; 762 defect cards were issued and 176 students were kept under special observation in 1931.

The committee examined 2,171 students, of whom 729 belonged to schools. A chart has been made of the various defects. The Senate has granted permission to the school authorities to levy a fee not exceeding annas eight per head per annum for annual medical inspection.

It may be mentioned here that the Senate appointed a committee to consider the future policy and scheme of work of the Students' Welfare Committee. Its recommendations will be found in Chapter V.

Hygiene.—Hygiene is a compulsory subject in the primary school curriculum and also in the secondary curriculum except for the two top classes. It is, however, only an optional subject for the Matriculation Examination.

Schools generally have conformed to the regulations with regard to the teaching of hygiene, and many of them have been provided with diagrams and charts suitable to the subject. An elementary knowledge of the laws of hygiene, the causes of preventible diseases, preventive measures and sanitation is imparted to the boys. But hygiene lessons are often given in surroundings in which all laws of hygiene are violated. It is no wonder, then, that they have not much practical effect. It is most desirable that teachers should take every opportunity of correcting boys who show a tendency to habits detrimental to their own health or to that of others.

The greatest impediment to the successful teaching of hygiene in schools lies in the dearth of properly qualified teachers of hygiene, which may be removed by making better provision for the teaching of the subject in training colleges and schools. A course of instruction in hygiene, first aid and home nursing is given to women students under training, who have to pass this course before they can secure a certificate of training. A few girls' schools which had a hygiene teacher were given a special grant of Rs. 15 a month each. The Scottish Church College has started a nursing class for its women students, and first aid classes were conducted in the Bankura and Ripon Colleges.

Popular lectures on hygiene and sanitation illustrated by lantern slides were delivered at the more important centres by the health officers of local bodies and the Bengal Social Service League. All this is probably having some effect.

Moral and religious education.—Religious instruction of an orthodox character is imparted in tols, makhtabs, madrasahs and mission schools, and also in a few colleges. The Saraswati Puja is generally celebrated in Hindu hostels, and Milad Sharif in Muhammadan hostels. Muhammadan students are also expected to join in the Jumma prayers on Fridays. In some schools the day's work begins with a silent prayer. But by far the larger number of high schools and colleges offer no religious instruction. The new Primary Education Act provides, subject to certain conditions, for religious instruction during school hours at least once a week of every child according to the religion of its guardian. The Director of Public Instruction invited opinions on the subject of religious instruction in primary schools and remarked that "the aim should be to inculcate implicit faith in the wise providence of God as well as service to one's fellow-beings. Though the actual performance of religious ceremonies is not at all desirable in a school composed of boys professing different religions, it seems quite probable that some sort of a common introductory prayer or suitable hymns could be used in which every pupil should join." "A Book of Stories" for religious instruction has also been proposed. The divergence of opinion on the subject of a common form of religious instruction is considerable, but some common formula can probably be found. Whatever instruction is given should be at once simple and practical and a great deal must evidently depend on the sincerity and personality of the teacher.

Hostels.—(1) For college students.—The total number of hostels attached to arts colleges was 112 with 3,959 inmates in 1931-32 as against 104 with 5,267 boarders in 1926-27. The number of boarders declined by 1,308 or 24·7 per cent. This fall was mainly due to economic depression. The authorities of colleges are now keenly alive to the necessity of providing hostels for the proper development of corporate life and most colleges have now well-equipped hostels. In Government colleges, during the period, fresh accommodation was provided at Krishnagar for 65 students and at Chittagong for students of the college section of the Chittagong Madrasah. The Ahsanullah School of Engineering replaced its rented buildings by a commodious hostel which cost Rs. 3,60,000 and has accommodation for 200 students. The Hindu hostel attached to the Jalpaiguri Zilla School has been completed. The administrative approval of the Government was also accorded to a hostel for the students of the Sanskrit College, to the construction of quarters for the superintendent of the Hemanta Kumari Hostel attached to the Rajshahi College, and to a new hostel for the accommodation of 30 students of the Anglo-Persian department of Calcutta Madrasah. In 1929-30, the construction of quarters for three superintendents of hostels attached to the Rangamati High English School was also administratively approved. Some non-Government colleges also provided additional hostel accommodation for students. The authorities of the Wesleyan College, Bankura, added a new block to their Ronaldshay Hostel which has accommodation for more than 60 boarders. Rooms for accommodating 30 additional boarders have also been added to the hostel attached to Nara Sinha Dutt College, Howrah. Every hostel or mess must be under the immediate control of a superintendent. The general duty of the superintendent is to act as guardian of the boys entrusted to his care, to live with and control them, to supervise the boarding arrangements. In hostels attached to Government colleges the selection of superintendents is generally made with care, but it is not always possible to select a senior member of the staff on account of the lack of family quarters. The superintendence of hostels attached to mission institutions is generally satisfactory; in several non-Government colleges there is much room for improvement.

The messes under the control of the University of Calcutta continued to be administered by the Students' Residence Committee through the Inspector of Messes. There were altogether 24 messes recognised by the University (excluding collegiate and 27 non-collegiate hostels). Of these messes, 23 were attached and 1 unattached, with a total number of 1,305 inmates in 1926-27. The increase both in the number of messes and of boarders indicates their popularity. The majority of students prefer messes to hostels on account of their cheapness and the absence of strict supervision. The total expenditure on these messes was Rs. 25,561, which was partly met by the seat-rent realised from students and from the Government grant of Rs. 13,128. Besides this, there are several non-collegiate hostels both for men and women under the management of the Students' Residence Committee.

During the quinquennium orders were issued by Government, enhancing the rates of seat-rent in hostels attached to Government institutions in order to make them more self-supporting. It must be said that some of the rules seem to have discouraged rather than attracted boarders. It is much more important to draw students to hostels than to make them self-supporting; and a revision of the rules seems desirable.

(2) For schools.—The total number of hostels for schools of all kinds was 735 with 19,215 inmates. Of these 69 were for women, with accommodation for 3,074 boarders.

The supervision of hostels is generally entrusted to the members of the teaching staff. In hostels attached to Government schools superintendents get the benefit of the hostel allowance, the scale of which has now been reduced as a measure of retrenchment. In hostels of aided schools the cost of superintendence is shared between Government and the school committees; superintendents receive a small allowance. In hostels attached to unaided schools teachers on the staff generally render gratuitous service, though in some cases they get either free board or lodging. The result is that the system of superintendence has not improved much during the quinquennium. The remuneration is not sufficient to attract the better type of teacher and disciplinary rules are not strictly enforced for fear of scaring away the inmates.

A scheme for the medical examination and supervision of pupils in Government high schools and high madrasahs outside Calcutta, and in hostels attached to them, was administratively approved by Government; but the scheme had to be postponed on account of financial stringency. The old arrangement for the medical supervision of the hostels attached to the Government high schools and the normal schools continued. The medical officer in charge of hostels received consolidated or capitation allowances or sometimes both. The boarders of hostels of guru-training schools in the Dacca Division were given the privilege of medical attendance.

During the year 1928-29 Government considered the question of grants to aided hostels for secondary and special schools. They decided that, while the principle of making hostels ultimately self-supporting should be adhered to, for the present no alteration in grants or fees should be insisted on in respect of school hostels. With the general fall in the cost of living the hostels proved much less expensive during the period under review. The monthly cost for a boarder in the Burdwan Division ranged from Rs. 4 to Rs. 6 in a mufassal hostel and from Rs. 9 to Rs. 12 in a town hostel. The total expenditure on school hostels was Rs. 1,49,196, of which Rs. 97,913 came from provincial revenues.

The students' messes in the town of Dacca were under the control of the Board of Intermediate and Secondary Education, Dacca, and were managed through the Assistant Inspector of Students' Residence. There were 12 messes for Hindu students, of which 4 are for the depressed classes and 1 for girls; and there were 10 messes for Muhammadan students. Owing to economic distress the number of messes fell during the period from 25 to 22, though the monthly cost of living fell approximately from Rs. 14-8 to Rs. 12 in the case of Hindus and from Rs. 11 to Rs. 8 in the case of Muhammadans. Forty per cent. of the house-rent and 50 per cent. of the superintendent's allowance are paid by Government, except in the case of some depressed class messes for which Government bears the whole cost. Five officers were in medical charge of the messes. The average annual cost to Government was Rs. 15,878.

Discipline.—The period under review was a very difficult one for educational authorities. The schools and colleges had not fully recovered from the effects of the non-co-operation movement, when they were again disturbed by a series of hartals since 1928 and a violent and aggressive form of "civil disobedience" since 1930. Picketing and hartals became common, the attendance in classes fell, work was dislocated. Several colleges had to suspend classes; but the University decided against a general suspension and ordered that classes should remain open and the rolls called even if no students attended. Although towards the closing years of the quinquennium things appeared to have improved a little and students returned to their normal work, their pre-occupation with politics remained an outstanding factor. An atmosphere of unrest, sullenness and suspicion often prevails. The situation requires very careful handling, and the greatest tact, sympathy and firmness will be required to win over the student population to the side of law and order.

In 1927-28, no serious breach of discipline was noticed except in the City College over the Saraswati Puja. In 1928-29 the only disturbance was in the Calcutta Madrasah, where there was considerable friction between the students of the Anglo-Persian and the Arabic Departments. The situation was, however, soon brought under control. In 1929-30 the civil disobedience movement was launched. The resultant strikes and hartals made it very difficult for school and college authorities to control their students. With the civil disobedience movement may be connected the Youth movement which was not definitely political in its earlier stages, but the political leaders utilised it to further their own objects. A large number of students' associations were formed, which supplied volunteers for the civil disobedience movement. As a result of the activities of these organisations several colleges had closed for some time during the working months of the year. The year 1930-31, specially the beginning of it, was remarkable for unrest among students; picketing, persuasion and agitation were employed to induce or compel students to absent themselves from their classes. But no Government school or college and very few aided institutions had to be closed in consequence of the agitation. It is estimated that about 460 students of Government colleges and 1,900 students of aided colleges absented themselves for about a month. About 900 boys in Government and 9,800 boys in aided high schools also temporarily struck work, and about 650 girls. Towards the end of the year, however, attendance became normal, but the roll strength was definitely lower than that of the preceding year. The respect for authority and the cheerful spirit of obedience which characterised students in bygone days gave way to impatience of discipline and disregard of academic authority. Some of the youth organisations soon degenerated into revolutionary societies, of which certain members, including even girls, were responsible for terrible political crimes. The measures taken by Government have restored quiet, at any rate outwardly; but it will be some time before that spirit of quiet, co-operation and discipline is restored without which educational work can never be efficiently done.

CHAPTER XIII.

Miscellaneous.

(1) Unrecognised schools.—The name “unrecognised schools” includes different types of educational institutions which do not follow the courses prescribed by the University or the department. Most of them are small indigenous schools, tols, or Koran schools, or Kyangs or Buddhist monastic schools, or newly started primary schools. A few, however, aim higher and provide advanced courses of instruction. The condition of most of the unrecognised schools is reported to be unsatisfactory. They are inferior to recognised schools in buildings, staff, equipment, discipline, finance and organisation. There were 1,630 unrecognised schools attended by 63,164 pupils in Bengal in 1931-32, as compared with 1,610 schools with 53,504 pupils in 1926-27. The number varies considerably from year to year. Many of them obtain recognition on reaching a certain standard; on the other hand, primary schools which fail to satisfy certain conditions may revert to the type of unrecognised schools.

A few of them, however, stand in a class apart. They are (1) the group of schools founded by Dr. Rabiindra Nath Tagore at Bolpur and Surul, district Birbhum; (2) the Rabindra College, Gayla, district Bakarganj, and (3) the Mahakali Pathshala at Mymensingh. In the first group an attempt is being made to combine the oldest Indian traditions with the best features of modern education. Especially noteworthy is their artistic side and the practical work done in village reconstruction. Pupils of Santiniketan may, if they so desire, appear at the examinations conducted by the Calcutta University. The Rabindra College, Gayla, continues to be a seat of higher Sanskrit culture. The Mahakali Pathshala for Girls at Mymensingh gives religious instruction, besides teaching the ordinary curriculum. The school receives aid from the local municipality.

Sanskrit tols of the old type, which are not under the control of the Calcutta Sanskrit Association, are included among unrecognised schools. In these tols the “adhyapak” (teacher) himself holds examinations and confers titles.

(2) National schools.—The national schools are disappearing gradually. There were altogether 19 national schools with 1,647 pupils in 1931 against 45 with 3,208 pupils in 1927. Thus, the number both of national schools and their pupils is steadily declining. The lack of organisation, the absence of clearly defined aims and courses of instruction, the failure to enforce discipline amongst the students who in some cases took the law into their own hands, and dissensions amongst the organisers are amongst the chief causes of the collapse of the majority of the national schools. The most important national school in the presidency is the Bengal Technical Institute at Jadavpur (24-Parganas). It will probably survive, because it offers useful courses of instruction in different branches of engineering and in surveying. Most of the national schools impart general education combined with a certain amount of vocational training, such as spinning, weaving, carpentry and tailoring.

(3) Text-book Committee.—During the first two years of the quinquennium under report, the two Text-book Committees—one at Calcutta and the other at Dacca—did not function, because the secondary school syllabuses were being revised and the committees themselves in process of reorganisation. No books were, therefore, accepted for examination by the committee. A sub-committee of the Calcutta Text-book Committee met, however, once a year to judge essays for the Braja Mohan Dutta Prize for Indian women.

The revised syllabuses of studies for secondary schools came into operation from 1st January 1931. To select suitable text-books, the formation of a Provincial Text-book Committee was sanctioned with effect from the 1st September 1929, with the Director of Public Instruction, Bengal, as ex-officio President.

The rules for the committee provided for the appointment of a whole-time Reader and Secretary and for remuneration to ordinary and co-opted members for reviewing books. Owing to the lack of funds these recommendations could not be carried out immediately and the Assistant Director of Public Instruction for Muhammadan Education, Bengal, acted as the Secretary. Under the new rules, only a certain number of books are allowed to be on the list in each subject; and any book approved for use in schools normally remains on the list for three years.

The new Text-book Committee first took up the revision of the lists of text-books for primary schools and maktabs. No attempt was made here to introduce new or better books; the committee's aim was merely to prune the long lists of approved books by retaining only the best. Accordingly, text-books in those subjects in which the limit prescribed in the new rules had been exceeded were called for re-examination.

Then, the committee was engaged in considering text-books written in accordance with the revised syllabuses for secondary schools. Those which were obviously unsuitable were summarily rejected and the rest were carefully examined, each by a group of three members. A list of library and prize books was also prepared and published.

During the period, out of a total of 5,692 books received by the Provincial Text-book Committee, 3,608 were considered and 1,176 approved.

(4) Oriental education.—Both the Universities provide instruction and facilities for research in higher Islamic and Sanskrit studies. The Calcutta University has chairs for Arabic, Sanskrit and Bengali and the Dacca University has departments of Arabic and Islamic studies, of Persian and Urdu, and of Sanskrit.

Apart from the Universities, oriental studies are pursued in the tols and madrasahs.

Sanskrit studies.—Sanskrit studies continued to be managed by the Executive Council of the Calcutta Sanskrit Association, consisting of 20 members. There is a larger body of 500, the Convocation, but it seldom meets. The Principal of the Sanskrit College acts as ex-officio Secretary.

The Council discharged its responsibilities as before in connexion with the Sanskrit examinations, the granting of titles and certificates, the distribution of stipends and rewards and grant-in-aid to tols and similar matters.

There are two kinds of recognised Sanskrit institutions:—

- (1) The tols which prepare candidates for the first, second and degree (Title) examinations.
- (2) Sanskrit pathshalas which teach Sanskrit in addition to the departmental vernacular curriculum in reading writing and arithmetic.

The more important tols affiliated to the Calcutta Association or the Saraswat Samaj, Dacca, are either aided or maintained by Government. Tols all over India are affiliated to the Calcutta Sanskrit Association. The most important is the Oriental Department of the Sanskrit College, Calcutta. This teaches the following branches of Sanskrit learning; the Vedas, Vedanta, Smriti and Vyakaran; it is looked upon as a model tol. The students in the Tol Department pay no tuition fees and appear at the Title examinations of the Sanskrit Association. The enrolment has increased greatly, from 45 pupils in 1921-22 to 83 in 1926-27 and 105 in 1931-32.

XCVIII.—Results of Sanskrit examinations.

Years	Sanskrit Title Examination.		Second Examination		First Examination
	Appeared.	Passed.	Appeared.	Passed.	Appeared.	Passed.
1926-27	21	11	10	6	15	9
1931-32	12	12	4	3	15	13

The number of affiliated tols in 1931-32 was 761 with 11,728 pupils, as against 750 with 10,395 pupils in 1926-27. Each of those tols is under an adhyapak who gives instruction in one or two branches of studies and presents candidates for the examinations of the Sanskrit Association.

There are other local associations of Sanskrit studies independent of the Calcutta Association. The Dacca Swaraswat Samaj—established in 1878—is the most important of them. It conducts its own examinations. The annual convocation of the Samaj, at which titles, certificates and rewards are awarded is generally presided over by His Excellency the Governor and is a very interesting event in Dacca. The Samaj has been responsible for keeping alive and extending the scope of Sanskrit studies in Eastern Bengal.

A large number of stipends is awarded to pupils and teachers in tols. They are tenable from 1st September and are as follows:—

(1) On the results of the first examination—

Fifty-seven stipends of Rs. 2 a month, tenable for two years, are awarded to 57 pupils.

Forty-five stipends (21 of Rs. 6 a month and 24 of Rs. 8 a month), tenable for one year, are awarded to the teachers of successful pupils.

(2) On the results of the second examination—

Thirty-six stipends (17 of Rs. 3 a month, 15 of Rs. 4 a month and 4 of Rs. 3 a month for Nyaya pupils) are awarded to pupils. The stipends for Nyaya pupils are tenable for 3 years, and in the others for two years.

Twenty-nine stipends (14 of Rs. 10 a month and 15 of Rs. 12 a month), tenable for one year, are awarded to the teachers of successful pupils.

On the results of the Sanskrit Title Examination, fifteen Government prizes—two of Rs. 100, two of Rs. 50, six of Rs. 25, and five of Rs. 20 each—are awarded to pupils in order of merit. Pupils are also eligible for 25 private rewards. Ten Government prizes—two of Rs. 200, two of Rs. 100, and six of Rs. 50 each—are awarded to the teachers of pupils successful in the Sanskrit Title Examination. Teachers are also eligible for 6 primary rewards.

Islamic studies.—Facilities for advanced studies in Islamic culture are afforded in the madrasahs—especially in the Calcutta Madrasah which is the most important of the old type of madrasahs. It was the first educational institution established in India by the British Government and was founded in 1781, at the request of several Muhammadans, by Warren Hastings.

Reference has already been made to the Board that has been constituted for conducting the Central Madrasah Examinations. In the Central Madrasah Examination of 1931-32, 632 students passed out of 1,013 candidates. Of these 397 passed the Alim Examination, 211 the Fazil Examination and 24 the Title Examination.

(5) Public libraries and societies.—The number of literary societies in Bengal in the year 1931-32 was 203. They generally possess public libraries intended for the development of culture and literature.

In the Presidency Division, there are 77 such societies, of which 23 belong to Calcutta. The most prominent and influential is the Asiatic Society of Bengal founded in 1784 by Sir William Jones. The society is well known in scientific circles throughout Asia and Europe and has done most important work. Its objects are best described in the words of the founder: "The bounds of its investigations will be the geographical limits of Asia and within those limits its enquiries will be extended to whatever is performed by man or produced by nature. It will flourish if naturalists, chemists, antiquarians, philologists and men of science in different parts of Asia will commit their observations to writing and send them to the Asiatic Society at Calcutta. It will languish if such communications shall be long intermitted; and it will die away if they shall entirely cease." Other societies worthy of mention are—

- (1) The Bangiya Sahitya Parishad, founded in 1894 for the promotion of literary, scientific and educational work. Government subscribe a large amount annually for the periodicals issued by the society.
- (2) The Indian Association for the Cultivation of Science, founded in 1876 by Dr. Sarkar for the advancement of original scientific research.
- (3) The Calcutta University Institute, founded in 1891 for the moral, mental and physical improvement of young men in Bengal and specially college students. The institute is now housed in a splendid building in College Square, constructed in 1915-16 at a cost of Rs. 3,50,000. The Maharajadhiraja of Burdwan and others have generously contributed to the furniture fund. It offers prizes for recitation, essay-writing, etc.
- (4) The Association for the Advancement of Scientific and Industrial Education of Indians, established in 1904, which provides scholarships for young men desirous of acquiring technical education abroad, particularly in Japan and America.
- (5) The Young Men's Christian Association, founded in 1903 with the object of supplementing the work of schools, and of realising among students the ideal of mens sana in corpore sano.
- (6) The Ram Mohan Library and Free Reading Room, founded in 1905 for the promotion of intellectual and moral culture.

The following are the most important libraries and literary societies in the Burdwan Division:—

- (1) The Hitakari Sabha at Uttarpara, founded for the furtherance of female education by the award of scholarships to successful girls on the results of the examination held under its auspices.
- (2) The Bolepur Santiniketan Brahmacharja Asram Library, founded by Dr. Rabindranath Tagore for the advancement of learning and the extension of knowledge.
- (3) The Uttarpara Public Library, founded in 1859 by Babu Joy Kissen Mukherjee with the object of disseminating the benefits of western and eastern culture among all sections of the community. The institution is free, maintained from the income of an endowment made by the founder, and is managed by a body of curators.

The following public libraries also deserve mention—the Burdwan Raj Public Library, the Midnapore Public Library, the Duke Library, Howrah, and the East Indian Railway Institute at Asansol.

Fifty-four societies are reported to exist in the Dacca Division. The East Bengal Saraswat Samaj promotes Sanskrit learning in this and other divisions. His Excellency the Governor of Bengal was pleased to make a donation of Rs. 750 last year to this society. The Sahitya Parishads at Dacca and Faridpur aim at the development of literary culture. The Anjuman Hemaitul Islam, Barisal, and the Faridpur Anjuman Islam are concerned chiefly with the interests, political, educational and religious, of the Muhammadan community, but they also assist deserving Muhammadan students to meet the expenses of their education. The Northbrook Hall Library at Dacca and the Madaripur Public Library are well-equipped and popular institutions; as is also the Dacca Museum.

There are 28 in the Rajshahi Division, the most important being the Varendra Research Society, Rajshahi, and the Sahitya Parishad, Rangpur. The former aims at the collection of ancient relics including old manuscripts and the publication of work relating thereto, while the latter undertakes archaeological and literary research in North Bengal.

There are only six public libraries of any importance in the Chittagong Division, of which the Buckland (that Public Library and the Reading Room started at Chittagong in 1904, the Cox's Bazar Public Library established in 1906, the Victoria Islam Library, Chittagong, and the Birchandra Public Library founded in Comilla in 1885 deserve mention. The Cox's Bazar Islamic Association was started in 1923 with a view to safeguard the general interests of the Muhammadan community.

(6) Conferences and meetings.—The year 1927 was conspicuous for the meeting of the third Imperial Conference, which was formally opened at Whitehall in London by His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales on 21st June. Delegates from the Governments of 45 countries within the Empire attended the conference, in addition to representatives of the departments of the Home Government. Bengal was represented at the conference by Mr. H. E. Stapleton, M.A., then Principal, Presidency College, Calcutta, now Director of Public Instruction, Bengal, and Dr. M. P. West, Principal, Teachers' Training College, Dacca. The conference, which lasted until 8th July, discussed, among other things, problems specially affecting tropical countries.

In July 1928 a conference of higher educational officers was held at the office of the Director of Public Instruction to consider the provision of greater facilities for the training of teachers of primary and secondary schools, particularly in connexion with the requirements of the primary Bill. Another conference met in February 1929 to discuss the question of a revised scheme for grant-in-aid to high schools in Bengal so as to secure the financial stability of schools for which there is a proved necessity. In October 1929 a conference was held in connection with the question of the teaching of music in secondary schools and of the establishment of training centres for teachers in music.

The conference made the following recommendations:—

- (1) that there should be a musical Advisory Board to advise the Director of Public Instruction in regard to the teaching of Indian music in secondary schools and to take steps for the encouragement and improvement of musical education in Bengal;

- (2) that the course of study for Indian music should be according to the syllabus recommended by the sub-committee, which should include both Bengali and Hindusthani songs;
- (3) that a series of books should be prepared containing śrara exercises;
- (4) that, in order to train teachers, the two chief institutions in Calcutta, the Sangeeta Sangha and the Sangeeta Sammilani, should be utilised; and
- (5) that provision should be made for the teaching of instrumental music.

The recommendations made by the conference were submitted to Government in due course, but have been held in abeyance on account of the financial condition of the country.

During the year 1930-31 the Government of Bengal appointed a committee to advise Government as to the policy which should be pursued to advance Moslem education in Bengal. Reference has been made to the work of the committee in the Chapter on Muhammadan Education.

Conferences of superior inspecting officers were also held at headquarters in which matters regarding the curriculum of primary schools, the inspection of guru-training schools, the restoration of the public examination at the end of standard VI, the shortening of school hours and the utility of the double-shift system in primary schools, etc., were discussed. The district inspecting staff met at some centres and discussed questions of local interest.

During the period under review the All-Bengal Non-Government School Teachers' Association held several sessions at different centres. In these meetings resolutions were passed about secondary education and dealing specially with the improvement of the status of teachers, the condition of secondary education in the presidency and the provisions of the School Code.

Conferences of Government school teachers also met and discussed the question of the deprovincialisation of Government schools.

The Bengal Women's Education League held several sessions. The resolutions passed at the conference emphasise the importance of girls' education to the country and urge that the danger of its becoming stereotyped and unrelated to present-day conditions should be avoided. Experiment, the liberty to adventure on broad lines, creative activity, these are to be welcomed rather than the attempt to fit all schools into the same mould.

An educational exhibition was held at Midnapore in 1931-32, and a stall was reserved for educational exhibits every year in the Suri Agricultural and Industrial Exhibition.

(7) Experiments in education.—Interest in modern methods of teaching and psychological tests bearing on educational problems may be traced to the activities of the David Hare Training College established in Calcutta in 1908 and the Teachers' Training College established two years later in Dacca. Experiments have been conducted at the two training colleges on individual and group tests of intelligence and the adaptation of various western tests to local conditions in the province. It was also realised that the immediate need was to acquaint teachers with the most elementary principles of child psychology and the up-to-date western methods of teaching the common subjects of the curriculum. So, while the theoretical portion of the work required under the University regulations was not neglected, attention was focussed more and more on the practical side which consisted mainly in the adaptation of western methods to the usual school room conditions of the country.

(1) Otis Group Intelligence Tests.—These were adapted to conditions in Bengal and the modified tests along with a manual for their use in schools was published by the college. A brochure entitled “Manasviter Map” (measurement for intelligence) was also published for use by teachers.

(2) Medium of instruction.—Classes were taught in history in 1928 in the vernacular; there was a higher percentage of passes in the First Terminal than in the second when a foreign medium of instruction was used.

(3) Geography.—Models, charts and climatic graphs have been prepared by students-in-training.

(4) History.—Models, lines of times, and maps especially designed for class use have been made by students-in-training as a result of group activity. A Sketching Club has been started under the history section and pictures on Indian History (especially designed for use in the class room) are drawn by artists among students-in-training with a view to historical accuracy as regards appearance, costumes, ornament, setting, etc. Experiments in the source method of teaching history conducted at the Training College and the Ballygunge Government High School yielded very satisfactory results and the students-in-training compile their own source book of Indian History. The work is entirely of a novel character and has proved very stimulating. The results of these and other experiments have been published in two articles in Macnee's Instruction in Indian Secondary Schools published by the Oxford University Press.

(5) The use of Linguaphone for teaching English pronunciation has yielded satisfactory results.

(6) Science.—Inexpensive apparatus have been devised to illustrate such topics as heat, electricity and magnetism.

A brief account is given of tests conducted at the Dacca Teachers' Training College.

(1) The Stanford Binet Simon Scale was adapted to Bengalis. It was published by the Oxford University Press as a bulletin of Dacca University.

(2) Columbia College Entrance Test was adapted to Bengalis. This test was applied to students of the Teachers' College. The correlation coefficients with the University results ranged from .50 to .72 in various years.

(3) Bengali Group Test.—This test is a vernacular test on the lines of the College Entrance Test.

(4) Northumberland Test.—This test was adapted for English-speaking children living in India.

(5) Absurdity Test.—This was adapted from Ballard's Test.

(6) The Non-Language Test.—This test was devised in response to a desire expressed by the Forest Department, Kurseong. The test was used for selecting candidates for admission to the Forest Rangers Training School.

(7) The experiment on the P.N.E.U. system of teaching already referred to led to the preparation of useful assignments in the 3R's and hygiene.

(8) A handwriting scale has been prepared.

(9) A system of elementary phonetics for teaching English pronunciation has been devised.

(10) Determinants of success in the Teachers' College.—Attempts were made to determine what factors tend to contribute to success in the Teachers' College course.

The following correlations were obtained:

Factor.	Correlations with college success
1. General intelligence	.. .7
2. Studiousness6
3. Teaching experience	.. .1
4. Academic career (po.	.. .6
5. General activity	.. .4
6. Sporting habits	.. .1

(11) Dr. West's researches in modern language teaching follow by the construction of a series of books on definite principles of starting with known words and introducing new words regularly at a definite rate of increase.—His theory on the relative importance of reading and speaking has attracted considerable attention.

Educational measurement is included in the course of studies pursued by the Teachers' Training College at Dacca, and to enable students-in-training to realise that this is a preliminary basis for research work they are required to submit a small "research" of an objective or semi-objective character. These investigations are to be regarded more as suggestive essays than solid contributions to real research.

A brief summary is given of the tests carried out by the students under training at the Dacca Training College.

Selection of stories.—Eight stories from the best story-writers were compiled into a booklet and a large number of boys of the high schools of the city of Dacca were tested. They were asked to read the stories carefully and grade them according to their liking and arrange them in order of preference.

Results obtained.—Ages 7-10—Preference for fairy tale. Ages 11-14—Preference for tale of heroism. Ages 15-16—Preference for biography.

The vocabulary of non-English-knowing Bengali boys.—The aim of this investigation was to find the number of English words that are known to Bengali children (ages 6-10) who had not yet begun to study English at all.

The English vocabulary of non-English-knowing Bengali adults.—The aim of this investigation was to find the number of English words that are known to non-English-knowing Bengali adults free from those

The experiments conducted by Khan Bahadur Moula Bux, Inspector of Schools, deserve mention. He has examined several thousand boys with the help of teachers to discover norms of attainments of boys of different classes in different subjects. The results will soon be published and might encourage others in conducting similar experiments. The norms may be used in appraising the progress of a class in a subject and also in selecting boys for admission. The general conclusions arrived at as a result of the above experiments are the following:—

All English and American tests require a good deal of adaptation for use in India, so much so that in most cases the results of the tests applied to Indian children would not be comparable with English or American results. Intelligence tests for children are not much needed in India, and are very difficult to use owing to the difficulty of discovering the true age of children in schools. Adult tests are likely to be useful as a means of selecting candidates for admission to technical or professional colleges. Such tests will naturally tend to be of a partially vocational character. Since 1928 the admissions into the Dacca Training College have been largely regulated by an admission test of this type held every year.

But in spite of all the attempts made by the training colleges and the inspecting staff, it was difficult to dislodge the old methods of teaching in schools which had their roots in mere memory work and purely literary forms of training. Indigenous systems of education had determined the character of western education in India. It was evident that it would be a long time before the new ideas inculcated at the Training College could spread to the several thousand schools through the few teachers who had an opportunity of undergoing training.

So, in accordance with a suggestion of Lord Lytton in 1925—the then Governor of Bengal, it was proposed to hold an annual conference of teachers and inspecting officers and others engaged in educational work. The objects of the conference were to encourage teachers to depart from the ordinary rut, to break away from the grooves in which they are apt to move and to improve their teaching by learning of the successful experiments in the new methods. There was unanimity in welcoming the proposal but with that a general vagueness as to what can be done in the way of improving methods of teaching. However, teachers in certain schools started experiments on the Dalton plan, supervised study, Project Method and Silent Reading.

It was subsequently found that without definite guidance for conducting experiments sufficient reliable materials would not be available which would furnish data for drawing conclusions therefrom. The results of investigations into educational methods were embodied under the guidance of Dr. West in a pamphlet on experiments in education and it was circulated through the Director of Public Instruction to schools in Bengal. The following topics were suggested as fit subjects for experiments and the method of experimentation was shortly described in the pamphlet:—

- (a) The Dalton Plan.
- (b) The new method of teaching English as devised by Dr. West, Principal, Dacca Training College.
- (c) The teaching of English Pronunciation.
- (d) The short daily practice (in handwriting and arithmetic).

- (e) Oral retranslation for teaching English idiom in upper classes.
- (f) The encouragement of reading.
- (g) Composition as self-expression (in vernacular or English).
- (h) Monthly orders.
- (i) Organised outdoor occupation.
- (j) Free manual work for lower classes
- (k) "Clubs" as factor in education.

The publication of this pamphlet furnished an impetus to the experiments that had been started and new lines of work were also attempted. But it must be confessed that the number of workers has not been very large nor the results obtained very encouraging. But the general level of teaching has improved, especially in the schools which contain trained teachers on their staff. But unfortunately the percentage of trained teachers, as has been already marked, is too insignificant to effect a radical change within a short compass of time.

We want more trained teachers and more facilities for the trained teacher for applying his knowledge. Many a trained teacher finds himself in an atmosphere of indifference if not hostility.

We also want a small experimental school in charge of an alert open-minded person who should be given a free hand. Mistakes may be made, but it is necessary, in all new adventures, to stand by without issuing warnings and reprimands. "It may be said," to quote Mr. Barrow, "that this function of experimental schools is already fulfilled by the practising schools attached to training colleges, but the presence of the teachers under training, who have to be constantly looked after, to undergo a definite course, and to sit for an examination, must make it difficult for the staff to enjoy much real freedom of method."

The conference referred to before did not materialise in the quinquennium, but sufficient data may be gathered and a conference of selected people only who have performed some experiments may be held in the near future.

DISTRICT REPORTS ON WEATHER AND CROPS.

For the week ending on the 25th October 1933.

Summary.—Excepting heavy showers in places the rainfall was generally light to moderate. It has improved the prospects of standing crops. Preparation of lands for and sowings of spring crops are proceeding. At the Nabagram and Sagardighi centres of the distressed area of Murshidabad, the number of persons receiving gratuitous relief was 28 and 67, respectively, on Saturday, the 21st October 1933. The average price of common rice for the province has risen by about 0.52 per cent. as compared with that of the previous week.

The token shall be fitted on the vehicle in such a position that it shall be clearly visible in daylight to a person standing beside the vehicle in front of, or level with, the driver's seat.

Their particular attention is called to the provisions of rule 15 which make it illegal to use an illegible token.

18. If an original token that has been reported lost is found after the duplicate has been issued, the owner of the vehicle shall take all reasonable steps to regain the original and surrender it to the Taxing Officer. No refund shall be made of the fee paid under rule 17.

19. Every token shall be returned to the Taxing Officer either on its expiry or at the time of payment of the tax for the subsequent year or quarter, when it shall be attached to the declaration in Form A (Bengal Form No. 330C) relating thereto. It shall be defaced by him and filed in his office with the declaration, if any.

20. Tokens for vehicles exempt from tax.—Owners or officers in charge of motor vehicles who claim exemption from tax under the provisions of rule 30 shall fill in a declaration form in Form A (Bengal Form No. 330C) and forward it to the Taxing Officer together with satisfactory proof that they are entitled to exemption.

On receipt of such proof the Taxing Officer shall issue, for not more than a year, a tax-free token on which shall be entered under the heading "class" the word "free."

(3) If the tax so assessed is paid in court the trying Magistrate shall issue a separate receipt for it in the following form, note the payment in Form I under the appropriate heading, attesting it by his seal, and make the form over to the accused with instructions to present it to the Taxing Officer. The Taxing Officer shall then issue a token if the payment covers a period that has not yet expired.

Bengal Form No. 3581.

High Court Civil Miscellaneous Form No. (M.) 128.

High Court Criminal Miscellaneous Form No. (M.) 21.

(4) If the tax is not paid in court, the Magistrate shall take all possible steps to realise it. When it is realised he shall proceed as directed in sub-rule (3).

26. Such unladen weight shall be determined in such manner as the Local Government may direct.

27. Whenever an owner pays a tax in respect of a trailer under clause (h) of Part IV of the First Schedule to the Act, the Taxing Officer shall issue a token on which under the heading "vehicle" the word "trailer" shall be entered. Such token shall be exhibited on the trailer when it is in use.

Note 1.—This order is to be valid for ten days after date without a renewal endorsement by the court and it ab-ol-ute-ly in-ef-fec-tive to have effect on the 31st March next.
Note 2.—No useful check can be exercised over refunds or revenue in the account office except in cases where full details of the collections of such revenue are received in that office either in the treasury accounts or other documents, e.g. the statements. It is therefore essential that every refund should be noted against the original credit in the departmental accounts where all sums are entered in detail. This voucher certificate provides for a certificate of such note having been made. The officer who received the amount should fill in columns 1 to 5 of the form and sign the certificate in column 6 while the Treasury Officer or the Sub-Treasury Officer should verify the refund by means of the particulars on columns 4 and 5 and add his signature in column 7 in token of his having done so. The sanction for the refund may either be given on the voucher itself or quoted in it, a certified copy being attached when such orders are not separately communicated to the audit officer.

The 3rd November 1933.

No. 25585-G.—The following rules framed by the High Court of Judicature at Fort William in Bengal in the exercise of the powers vested in it by section 122 of the Code of Civil Procedure with the sanction of the Governor General in Council under section 126 of the Code are published for general information.

The rules will come into force from the 1st January 1934:—

Rules.

I. Order 21, Rule 43, shall read as follows:—

Where the property to be attached is moveable property, other than agricultural produce, in the possession of the judgment-debtor, the attachment shall be made by actual seizure, and, save as otherwise prescribed, the attaching officer shall keep the property in his own custody or in the custody of one of his subordinates, and shall be responsible for the due custody thereof:

Provided that when the property seized does not, in the opinion of the attaching officer, exceed twenty rupees in value or is subject to speedy and natural decay, or when the expense of keeping it in custody is likely to exceed its value, the attaching officer may sell it at once.

II. Add the following as Rule 63A, Order 21:—

When an attachment of moveable property ceases the Court may order the restoration of the attached property to the person in whose possession it was before the attachment.

III. Insert the following as Order XXIA:—

1. Every person applying to a Civil Court to attach moveable property shall, in addition to the process-fee, deposit such reasonable sum as the Court may direct, if it think necessary, for the cost of its removal to the court-house, for its custody, and, if such property is livestock, for its maintenance according to the rates prescribed in Rule 2 of this Order. If the deposit, when ordered, be not made, the attachment shall not issue. The Court may, from time to time, order the deposit of such further fees as may be necessary. In default of due payment the property shall be released from attachment.

2. The following daily rates shall be chargeable for the custody and maintenance of livestock under attachment:—

- Goat and pig—Annas 2 to annas 4.
- Sheep—Annas 2 to annas 3.
- Cow and bullock—Annas 6 to annas 10.
- Calf—Annas 3 to annas 6.
- Buffalo—Annas 8 to annas 12.
- Horse—Annas 8 to annas 12.
- Ass—Annas 3 to annas 5.
- Poultry—Annas 2 to annas 3 pies 6.

Explanation.—Although the rates indicated above are regarded as reasonable, the Courts could consider individual circumstances and the local conditions and permit deposit at reduced rates where the actual expenses are likely to fall short of the minima or maxima. If any specimen of special value in any of the above classes is seized a special rate may be fixed by the Court. If any animal not specified is attached, the Court may fix the cost as a special case.

3. When the property attached consists of agricultural implements or other articles which cannot conveniently be removed and the attaching officer does not act under the proviso to Rule 43, Order 21, he may, unless the Court has otherwise directed, leave it in the village or place where it has been attached—

- (a) in the charge of the judgment-debtor or decree-holder or of some other person, provided that the judgment-debtor, decree-holder or other person enters into a bond in Form No. 15A of Appendix E to this schedule with one or more sureties for the production of the property when called for, or,
- (b) in the charge of an officer of the Court, if a suitable place for its safe custody be provided and the remuneration of the officer for a period of fifteen days paid in advance.

4. If attached property (other than livestock) is not sold under the proviso to Rule 43, Order 21, or retained in the village or place where it is attached, it shall be brought to the court-house at the decree-holder's expense and delivered to the proper officer of the Court. In the event of the decree-holder failing to make his own arrangement for the removal of the property with safety, or paying the cost thereof in advance to the attaching officer, then, unless such payment has previously been made into Court, the attachment shall at once be deemed to be withdrawn and the property shall be made over to the person in whose possession it was before attachment.

5. When livestock is attached it shall not, without the special order of the Court, be brought to the Court or its compound or vicinity, but shall be left at the village or place where it was attached in the manner and on the conditions set forth in Rule 3 of this Order:

Provided that livestock shall not be left in the charge of any person under clause (a) of the said rule unless he enters into a bond for the proper care and maintenance thereof as well as for its production when called for, and that it shall not be left in charge of an officer of the Court under clause (b) of the said rule unless in addition to the requirements of the said clause provision be made for its care and maintenance.

6. When for any reason the attaching officer shall find it impossible to obtain compliance with the requirements of the preceding rule so as to entitle him to leave the attached livestock in the village or place where it was attached and no order has been made by the Court for its removal to the Court, the attaching officer shall not proceed with the attachment and no attachment shall be deemed to have been effected.

7. Whenever it shall appear to the Court that livestock under attachment are not being properly tended or maintained, the Court shall make such orders as are necessary for their care and maintenance and may if necessary direct the attachment to cease and the livestock to be returned to the person in whose possession they were when attached. The Court may order the decree-holder to pay any expenses so incurred in providing for the care and maintenance of the livestock, and may direct that any sum so paid shall be refunded to the decree-holder by any other party to the proceedings.

8. If under a special order of the Court livestock is to be conveyed to the Court, the decree-holder shall make his own arrangement for such removal, and if he fails to do so the attachment shall be withdrawn and the property made over to the person in whose possession it was before attachment.

9. Nothing in these rules shall prevent the judgment-debtor or any person claiming to be interested in attached livestock from making such arrangements for feeding, watering and tending the same as may not be inconsistent with its safe custody, or contrary to any order of the Court.

10. The Court may direct that any sums which have been legitimately expended by the attaching officer or are payable to him, if not duly deposited or paid, be recovered from the sale-proceeds of the attached property, if sold, or be paid by the person declared entitled to delivery before he receives the same. The Court may also order that any sums deposited or paid under these rules be recovered as costs of the attachment from any party to the proceedings.

11. In the event of the custodian of attached property failing, after due notice, to produce such property at the place named to the officer deputed for the purpose, or to restore it to its owner if so ordered or failing in the case of livestock to maintain and take proper care thereof, he shall be liable to be proceeded against for the enforcement of his bond in the execution proceedings.

12. When property other than livestock is brought to the Court, it shall immediately be made over to the Nazir, who shall keep it on his sole responsibility in such place as may be approved by the Court. If the property cannot from its nature or bulk be conveniently stored, or kept on the Court premises or in the personal custody of the Nazir, he may, subject to the approval of the Court, make such arrangements for its safe custody under his own supervision as may be most convenient and economical. If any premises are to be hired and persons are to be engaged for watching the property the Court shall fix the charges for the premises and the remuneration to be allowed to the persons (not being officers of the Court) in whose custody the property is kept. All such costs shall be paid into Court by the decree-holder in advance for such period as the Court may from time to time direct.

13. When attached livestock is brought to Court under special order as aforesaid it shall be immediately made over to the Nazir, who shall be responsible for its due preservation and safe custody until he delivers it up under the orders of the Court.

14. If there be a pound maintained by Government or local authority in or near the place where the Court is held, the Nazir shall, subject to the approval of the Court, be at liberty to place in it such livestock as can be properly kept there, in which case the pound keeper will be responsible for the property to the Nazir and shall receive from the Nazir the same rates for accommodation and maintenance thereof as are paid in respect of impounded cattle of the same description.

15. If there be no pound available, or, if in the opinion of the Court, it be inconvenient to lodge the attached livestock in the pound, the Nazir may keep them in his own premises, or he may entrust them to any person selected by himself and approved by the Court.

16. All costs for the keeping and maintenance of the livestock shall be paid into Court by the decree-holder in advance for not less than fifteen days at a time as often as the Court may from time to time direct. In the event of failure to pay the costs within the time fixed by the Court, the attachment shall be withdrawn and the livestock shall be at the disposal of the person in whose possession it was at the time of attachment.

17. So much of any sum deposited or paid into Court under these rules as may not be expended shall be refunded to the depositor.

A note on the Pupil's materials in the Drawing Class.

It appears (though it is not very clearly put in the syllabus) that work in classes 3 and 4 is in pencil and pastel. In class 4 water colour is introduced.

Pencil work requires a drawing book containing white drawing paper, a decent pencil, a piece of good India rubber, and two or three sharp knives in the class. At present a great deal of the drawing is done in ordinary khata, with cheap pencils having blunt points, and a wet finger is used as a substitute for India rubber.

Pastel work requires a book of coloured paper, one box of about 10 colours for each child, and a stock of the deeper colours in dur or demi-dur crayons for general use. These deeper colours are rather more expensive than the usual, costing from 1d. to 6d. a stick; they are unobtainable in India; they have to be obtained from London or direct from Le Franc in Paris. Without these colours it is impossible to give a correct representation of many objects, e.g., the shadows on a leaf or fruit require a deep blue-green which is not contained in the standard boxes of the pupils.

To get good work in water colour it is absolutely necessary that the pupils should use good colours—and the right colours. It is usually considered best for the teacher to have the colours in tubes and to press out small dabs of the colours needed on to the pupil's palette. The ordinary paint boxes sold in stationery shops contain more colours than the child should use, and those of a very bad quality.

In short the pencils, pastels and colours must be supplied by the school; not by the individual. This is not only cheaper for the parent, but is also an essential condition of good work.

 Construction of perpendiculars to straight lines.

 Construction of parallels to a given straight line.

Theorems.

If two sides of a triangle are unequal the greater side has the greater angle opposite to it; and the converse.

Any two sides of a triangle are together greater than the third.

Of all straight lines that can be drawn to a given straight line from a given point outside it, the perpendicular is the shortest.

When a straight line cuts two other straight lines, if —

- (1) a pair of alternate angles are equal, or
- (2) a pair of corresponding angles are equal, or
- (3) a pair of interior angles on the same side of the cutting line are together equal to two right angles, then the straight lines are parallel; and the converse.

Straight lines which are parallel to the same straight line are parallel to one another.

Construction of a triangle equal in area to a given quadrilateral.

Theorems.

The sum of the angles of a triangle is equal to two right angles; and the two corollaries thereto.

If two triangles have two angles of the one equal to two angles of the other, each to each, and also one side of the one equal to the corresponding side of the other, the triangles are congruent.

If two right-angled triangles have their hypotenuses equal and one other side of the one equal to one other side of the other, the triangles are congruent.

The opposite sides and angles of a parallelogram are equal, each diagonal bisects the parallelogram; and the diagonals bisect one another.

If there are three or more parallel straight lines and the intercepts made by them on any straight line that cuts them are equal, then the corresponding intercepts on any other straight line that cuts them are also equal.

Resolution on the Report on the Police Administration in the town of Calcutta and its suburbs for the year 1932.

Police Department.

CALCUTTA, THE 3RD NOVEMBER 1933.

RESOLUTION—No. 5791 Pl.

Read—

The Report on the Police Administration in the town of Calcutta and its suburbs for the year 1932.

The office of the Commissioner of Police was held throughout the year by Mr. L. H. Colson, I.P.

2. Strength.—The sanctioned strength of the Calcutta Police at the end of 1932 was the same as at the end of the preceding year. The number of resignations during the year also equalled the figure in the previous year. There was a decrease of four in the number of vacancies at the end of the year while the average daily percentage of the sick showed a slight increase from 1.52 to 1.58.

It is gratifying to note that recruits with better educational qualifications now come forward for enlistment in the constabulary.

3. Discipline.—His Excellency in Council notes with pleasure the appreciable decrease in the number of punishments inflicted on members of the force judicially and departmentally as compared with the figures of the previous years.

4. Crime Statistics.—There was an increase in the total number of cognizable cases reported to the Police. It is, however, noteworthy that this increase related to offences other than offences under the Indian Penal Code, the number of cases under the Calcutta and Suburban Police Acts and those under the Motor Vehicles and Hackney-carriage Acts having risen by nearly 9,000, 4,500 and 2,900, respectively.

In spite of the fact that for the most part of the year 2 Inspectors and 3 Sub-Inspectors of the General Investigation staff had to be deputed to assist the Press and the Civil Disobedience Sections, the work of the Detective Department was satisfactory. It assisted the local Police in 92 cases against 96 in the previous year and made independent investigations in 161 cases against 142.

His Excellency in Council is pleased to note that the Special Detective staff of the Port Police continued to do valuable work and achieved good results from efforts chiefly directed against terrorists and their agents on the look out for smuggled firearms.

5. Revolutionary crime, seditious speeches and meetings.—The year under review saw no respite from terrorist activities. Ten cases were reported and investigated in connection with terrorist conspiracies, outrages and the seizure of explosives and firearms. These cases which represent only part of the fight against terrorism and revolutionary crime, threw upon the Calcutta Police a heavy and trying burden. The efficiency and courage with which they met this demand upon their resources and personnel deserve the highest praise. All sections of the force took part in this campaign and a higher standard of efficiency in detective and preventive work combined with the arrest of many dangerous terrorist criminals has strengthened the position of Government against this deep-rooted menace.

Of the reported cases of terrorist crime already mentioned one was an attempt by a lady graduate on the life of His Excellency Sir Stanley Jackson, late Governor of Bengal, while he was delivering an address at the annual convocation in the Senate Hall, and two were murderous attempts on the life of Sir Alfred Watson, the then Editor of the Statesman. It is significant that in the majority of these cases the culprits were either students or clerks of the Hindu bhadrolog class.

There were a number of prosecutions for seditious speeches delivered at public meetings and several publications were proscribed.

6. Public order.—A satisfactory feature of the year's administration was the absence of any serious communal friction. The action taken under the Emergency Powers Ordinance to combat the Civil Disobedience Movement was effective.

7. Traffic.—The success with which the Bengal Motor Vehicles Tax Act was administered is worthy of special notice. Trade depression was responsible for a further decrease in the receipts under the Motor Vehicles Act in respect of both the registration of vehicles and licensing of drivers. It is satisfactory that the efforts made to educate motorists in the courtesies of the road and in the observance of the laws were reflected in a decrease in the number of fatal and non-fatal accidents caused by motor vehicles. The attention paid to the instruction of candidates for professional licences in approved training schools and the rigid tests to which all licensees and applicants were subjected were also important factors which contributed to the reduction in the number of accidents.

8. Commendation of officers.—His Excellency in Council has been pleased to read the tributes paid by Mr. Colson to his Deputy Commissioners, Assistant Commissioners and other subordinate officers and desires to take this opportunity of placing on record his appreciation of the services rendered by all ranks of the force. Thanks are specially due to Mr. Colson for maintaining a high standard of discipline and efficiency.

Order.—Ordered that a copy of this resolution be forwarded to the Commissioner of Police, Calcutta, the Chief Presidency Magistrate, Calcutta, and the Commissioner of the Presidency Division for information.

Ordered also that a copy of the report be submitted to the Government of India in the Home Department.

Ordered also that the resolution be published in the Calcutta Gazette.

By order of the Governor in Council,

G. P. HOGG,

Chief Secy. to the Govt. of Bengal

Rules.

1 These rules may be called the Calcutta Port Haj Committee Rules, 1933.

2 In these rules unless there is anything repugnant to the subject or context—

- (i) 'The Act' means the Port Haj Committees Act, 1932
- (ii) 'Candidate' means any person who has been duly proposed and seconded for a seat on the Committee
- (iii) 'Committee' means the Port Haj Committee of Calcutta constituted under the Act.

Part I—Rules under section 7.

1 Electoral roll for the Calcutta Corporation constituency under clause (b) of sub-section (i) of section 4 of the Act shall be prepared and maintained by the Chief Executive Officer, Calcutta Corporation, who shall also act as the returning officer of this constituency.

Electoral roll for the general constituency under clause (c) of the said sub-section of the Act shall be prepared and maintained by the Registrar, Political Department who shall also act as the returning officer of this constituency.

2. Any person may be nominated as a candidate for election subject to rules made under clause (a) of section 10 of the Act.

3 The Local Government shall appoint for each constituency a date for the nomination of candidates and shall publish such date in the Calcutta Gazette.

4. On or before the date so appointed for the nomination of candidates, each candidate shall either in person or by his proposer and seconder together, between the hours of 11 o'clock in the forenoon and 3 o'clock in the afternoon deliver to the returning officer a nomination paper completed in the form annexed to these rules and subscribed by two persons as proposer and seconder whose names are registered on the electoral roll of the constituency.

5. The Local Government shall appoint a date for the scrutiny of nomination and on such date the returning officer shall give to the candidates or their representatives all reasonable facilities for examining the nomination papers of all candidates. The returning officer shall then examine the nomination papers and shall decide all objections which may be made to any nomination and prepare a list of valid nominations.

6. (1) If the number of duly nominated candidates is not greater than the number of vacancies, all such candidates shall be declared to be duly elected.

(2) If the number of duly nominated candidates is greater than the number of vacancies, a poll shall be taken and the returning officer shall, on or before the date fixed in this behalf by the Local Government, send by registered post to each elector a ballot paper, in the form annexed to these rules, together with an intimation of the date appointed by him for the counting of votes and shall enter on the counterfoil of each ballot paper the name of the elector to whom the ballot paper is sent.

(b) count the votes given to each candidate, and declare the candidate or candidates with the largest number of valid votes to be elected.

9. Where on the counting of votes under rule 8, an equality of votes is found to exist between any candidates and the addition of one vote will entitle any of the candidates to be declared elected, the determination of the person to whom such one additional vote shall be deemed to have been given shall be made by lot to be drawn in the presence of the returning officer and in such manner as he may determine.

10. Upon the completion of the counting of votes, the returning officer shall prepare and certify a return setting forth—

(i) the number of valid votes given for each candidate;

(ii) the number of votes declared invalid and rejected;

(iii) the names of the persons declared elected.

11. (2) When any choice for any constituency has been made, his election by the other constituency shall become void and the returning officer of this latter constituency shall then in the place of such candidate declare duly elected the candidate who has secured the largest number of valid votes among the candidates who has failed to secure the election and if there be no such candidate to be declared elected, the Local Government shall call the constituency to elect another person.

(3) If the candidate does not make the choice referred to in sub-rule (1) of this rule, the election of such person shall be void and the returning officer of each of those constituencies shall in the place of such candidate declare duly elected the candidate who has secured the largest number of valid votes among the candidates who has failed to secure the election and if there be no such candidate or candidates to be declared elected, the Local Government shall call upon the constituency or constituencies concerned to elect another person or persons.

The application shall be accompanied by notices (in said Form 7A) and copies of the statement shall be served on the other co-sharers.

The Collector shall verify the statement of shares as far as possible from the documents produced by the applicant and if it appears to be in order and provided that, if the landlord is a proprietor of a revenue-paying estate or revenue-free property, his name is duly recorded in the land registration registers of the collectorate, the notices with copies of the statement of shares shall be served on the remaining co-sharer landlords.

Such application shall state the reasons therefor and shall be verified as if it were a plaint under the Code of Civil Procedure, 1908. The following book is recommended for the use of teachers in connection with the teaching of "Sand Modelling" in the lower classes of schools:—

A. F. Fyfe. The Child and Nature.

A. B. I. Every school that intends to undertake instruction in Geography for the Matriculation Examination is required to possess the apparatus mentioned in the following list:—

- (1) A measuring tape and metre scale and foot-rule.
- (2) A magnetic compass.
- (3) Squared paper and tracing paper.
- (4) Clay, dry sand, paper pulp for modelling
- (5) A globe not less than 14 inches in diameter, with writing surface, and with line of latitude and longitude and outlines only of the land masses marked upon it.
- (6) A map of the school locality on a scale of 4" or 6"—1 mile.
- (7) A map of the district in which the school is situated, 1"=1 mile.
- (8) A coloured map of the province.
- (9) A coloured political map of India.
- (10) A physical map of India.

- (11) A relief map of India.
- (12) A map of the world on Mollweide's equal-area projection and a map of Asia.
- (13) A practical Atlas of Modern Geography (George Gill & Sons).

It is essential that the student should be provided with atlases, or with the necessary hand-map, and with a drawing instrument box. Maps for school work should not contain too much detail or be crowded with names.

II. The following additional equipment is recommended when it can be provided, but the lack of it is not to be considered as a bar to the recognition of the school in Geography:—

- (1) A thermometer.
- (2) A mercury barometer.
- (3) A rain-gauge.
- (4) A small collection of typical rocks, in particular, those of the Province and India.
- (5) A small museum of typical products.
- (6) A good standard atlas.
- (7) Geographical pictures.
- (8) Magic lantern and slides.

III. (1) The attention of teachers is invited to the raised maps of Bengal and Eastern Bengal and Assam made of paper pulp prepared by Babu Kailaschandra Dutt, Head Pandit, Habiganj Government Girls' School, Sylhet and sold for Rs. 7 and Rs. 5, respectively.

(2) Globes of all kinds are made by George Phillip & Son, London, W. and A. K. Johnston, London, and Messrs. Ruddiman, London. Small hand-globes of German make can be obtained through the Indian School Supply Depot for about a rupee each.

(3) The "Comparative" Series of large wall maps of the continents published by George Phillip & Son is good and up-to-date; as also are the geographical wall maps published by Edward Stanford. Messrs. Ruddiman Johnston publish a series of smaller wall maps which include maps of India illustrating various distributions.

Messrs. Nelson's wall atlases are good. Mr. S. B. Chatterjee publishes District Maps, also ordinary and relief maps of the province.

Babu L. M. Basu, the Drawing Master of the Dacca Collegiate School, has published good relief maps of Eastern Bengal and Assam and of India.

The Vidal-Lablache French wall maps on strong card-board, name on one side, and the same map without names on the reverse, published by Arman Collin, Paris, are good and cheap. They measure 46 inches by 39 inches and can be delivered in Calcutta for Rs. 4-14 each.

(4) The hand maps coloured to indicate relief, published by the Diagram Company, West Barnes Lane, New Malden, Surrey, at one penny each, are the best of their kind.

The uncoloured half-penny maps showing river system and a few towns published by the same Company, are excellent for class use.

The autograph hand-maps, with hill shading in brown, published by Messrs. Edward Stanford, London, at one penny each, are very good, and are larger than the Diagram Company's hand-maps. The 15" map of the world of Mollweide's equal-area projection is specially to be commended.

(5) Wall pictures of considerable artistic merit are published by Messrs. Edward Arnold of Leeds, Horns Hachett of Paris, Messrs. Holzcl of Vienna, and Messrs. Longmans, Green & Company. They cost, delivered in India, from two or three rupees each.

Map lantern slides and view slides specially prepared for Geography teaching are sold by the Diagram Company for two or three shillings each. Mr. Sain of Darjeeling also sells good picture slides of the Himalayas at Rs. 15 per dozen.

Rules.

1. These rules may be called the Calcutta Port Haj Committee Rules, 1933.

- (i) "The Act" means the Port Haj Committees Act, 1932.
- (ii) "Candidate" means any person who has been duly proposed and seconded for a seat on the Committee.
- (iii) "Committee" means the Port Haj Committee of Calcutta constituted under the Act.

Part I—Rules under section 7.

2. Any person may be nominated as a candidate for election subject to rules made under clause (a) of section 10 of the Act.

3. The Local Government shall appoint for each constituency a date for the nomination of candidates and shall publish such date in the Calcutta Gazette.

4. On or before the date so appointed for the nomination of candidates, each candidate shall either in person or by his proposer and seconder together, between the hours of 11 o'clock in the forenoon and 3 o'clock in the afternoon deliver to the returning officer a nomination paper completed in the form annexed to these rules and subscribed by two persons as proposer and seconder whose names are registered on the electoral roll of the constituency.

5. The Local Government shall appoint a date for the scrutiny of nomination and on such date the returning officer shall give to the candidates or their representatives all reasonable facilities for examining the nomination papers of all candidates. The returning officer shall then examine the nomination papers and shall decide all objections which may be made to any nomination and prepare a list of valid nominations.

6. (1) If the number of duly nominated candidates is not greater than the number of vacancies, all such candidates shall be declared to be duly elected.

(2) If the number of duly nominated candidates is greater than the number of vacancies, a poll shall be taken and the returning officer shall, on or before the date fixed in this behalf by the Local Government, send by registered post to each elector a ballot paper, in the form annexed to these rules, together with an intimation of the date appointed by him for the counting of votes and shall enter on the counterfoil of each ballot paper the name of the elector to whom the ballot paper is sent.

10. Upon the completion of the counting of votes, the returning officer shall prepare and certify a return setting forth—

(2) When any choice for any constituency has been made, his election by the other constituency shall become void and the returning officer of this latter constituency shall then in the place of such candidate declare duly elected the candidate who has secured the largest number of valid votes among the candidates who has failed to secure the election and if there be no such candidate to be declared elected, the Local Government shall call the constituency to elect another person.

(3) If the candidate does not make the choice referred to in sub-rule (1) of this rule, the election of such person shall be void and the returning officer of each of those constituencies shall in the place of such candidate declare duly elected the candidate who has secured the largest number of valid votes among the candidates who has failed to secure the election and if there be no such candidate or candidates to be declared elected, the Local Government shall call upon the constituency or constituencies concerned to elect another person or persons.

N. B.—I. Every school that intends to undertake instruction in Geography for the Matriculation Examination is required to possess the apparatus mentioned in the following list:—

- (1) A measuring tape and metre scale and foot-rule.
- (2) A magnetic compass.
- (3) Squared paper and tracing paper.
- (4) Clay, dry sand, paper pulp for modelling.
- (5) A globe not less than 14 inches in diameter, with writing surface, and with line of latitude and longitude and outlines only of the land masses marked upon it.
- (6) A map of the school locality on a scale of 4" or 6" = 1 mile.
- (7) A map of the district in which the school is situated, 1" = 1 mile.
- (8) A coloured map of the province.
- (9) A coloured political map of India.
- (10) A physical map of India.

- (11) A relief map of India.
- (12) A map of the world on Mollweide's equal-area projection and a map of Asia.
- (13) A practical Atlas of Modern Geography (George Gill & Sons).

It is essential that the student should be provided with atlases, or with the necessary hand-map, and with a drawing instrument box. Maps for school work should not contain too much detail or be crowded with names.

II. The following additional equipment is recommended when it can be provided, but the lack of it is not to be considered as a bar to the recognition of the school in Geography:—

- (1) A thermometer.
- (2) A mercury barometer.
- (3) A rain-gauge.
- (4) A small collection of typical rocks, in particular, those of the Province and India.
- (5) A small museum of typical products.
- (6) A good standard atlas.
- (7) Geographical pictures.
- (8) Magic lantern and slides.

III. (1) The attention of teachers is invited to the raised maps of Bengal and Eastern Bengal and Assam made of paper pulp prepared by Babu Kailaschandra Dutt, Head Pandit, Habiganj Government Girls' School, Sylhet and sold for Rs. 7 and Rs. 5, respectively.

(2) Globes of all kinds are made by George Phillip & Son, London, W. and A. K. Johnston, London, and Messrs. Ruddiman, London. Small hand-globes of German make can be obtained through the Indian School Supply Depot for about a rupee each.

(3) The "Comparative" Series of large wall maps of the continents published by George Phillip & Son is good and up-to-date; as also are the geographical wall maps published by Edward Stanford. Messrs. Ruddiman Johnston publish a series of smaller wall maps which include maps of India illustrating various distributions.

Messrs. Nelson's wall atlases are good. Mr. S. B. Chatterjee publishes District Maps, also ordinary and relief maps of the province.

Babu L. M. Basu, the Drawing Master of the Dacca Collegiate School, has published good relief maps of Eastern Bengal and Assam and of India.

The Vidal-Lablache French wall maps on strong card-board, name on one side, and the same map without names on the reverse, published by Arman Collin, Paris, are good and cheap. They measure 46 inches by 39 inches and can be delivered in Calcutta for Rs. 4-14 each.

(4) The hand maps coloured to indicate relief, published by the Diagram Company, West Baines Lane, New Malden, Surrey, at one penny each, are the best of their kind.

The uncoloured half-penny maps showing river system and a few towns published by the same Company, are excellent for class use.

The autograph hand-maps, with hill shading in brown, published by Messrs. Edward Stanford, London, at one penny each, are very good, and are larger than the Diagram Company's hand-maps. The 15" map of the world of Mollweide's equal-area projection is specially to be commended.

(5) Wall pictures of considerable artistic merit are published by Messrs. Edward Arnold of Leeds, Horns Hachett of Paris, Messrs. Holzner of Vienna, and Messrs. Longmans, Green & Company. They cost, delivered in India, from two or three rupees each.

Map lantern slides and view slides specially prepared for Geography teaching are sold by the Diagram Company for two or three shillings each. Mr. Sain of Darjeeling also sells good picture slides of the Himalayas at Rs. 15 per dozen.

of proficiency required from candidates at any examination held for the purpose of granting such qualification are not such as to secure to persons holding such qualification the knowledge and skill requisite for the efficient practice of medicine, the Council shall make a representation to that effect to the Governor-General in Council.

(2) After considering such representation, the Governor-General in Council may send it to the Local Government of the province in which the medical institution is situated, and the Local Government shall forward it, along with such remarks as it may choose to make, to the medical institution, with an intimation of the period within which the medical institution may submit its explanation to the Local Government.

(3) On the receipt of the explanation or, where no explanation is submitted within the period fixed, then on the expiry of that period, the Local Government shall make its recommendations to the Governor-General in Council.

(4) The Governor-General in Council, after making such further inquiry, if any, as he may think fit, may, by notification in the Gazette of India, direct that an entry shall be made in the First Schedule against the said medical qualification declaring that it shall be a recognised medical qualification only when granted before a specified date.

(2) The Governor General in Council may require the Council to adopt the remedies so recommended within such time as, having regard to the report of the Commission, he may think fit; and if the Council fails to comply with any such requirement, the Governor General in Council may amend the Regulations of the Council, or make such provision or order or take such other steps as may seem necessary to give effect to the recommendations of the Commission.

Provided that adult workers in a non-seasonal factory engaged in work which for technical reasons must be continuous throughout the day may work for fifty-six hours in any week.

- (a) he has had or will have a holiday for a whole day on one of the three days immediately before or after that Sunday, and
- (b) the manager of the factory has, a week before that Sunday or the substituted day, whichever is earlier,—
 - (i) delivered a notice to the Inspector of his intention to ask the worker to work on the Sunday and of the day which is to be substituted, and

(ii) displayed a notice to that effect in the factory.

Provided that no substitution shall be made which will result in any worker working for more than ten days consecutively without a holiday for a whole day.

(2) Notices given under sub-section (1) may be cancelled by a notice delivered to the Inspector and a notice displayed in the factory at least one day before the Sunday or the holiday to be cancelled, whichever is earlier.

(2) A copy of the Notice shall be sent in duplicate to the Inspector within fourteen days after the commencement of this Act, or, if the factory begins work after the commencement of this Act, within three days of the day on which it begins work.

(3) Any proposed change in the system of work in a factory which will necessitate a change in the Notice shall be notified to the Inspector in duplicate before the change is made, and, except with the previous sanction of the Inspector, no such change shall be made until one week has elapsed since the last change or, in the first instance, since notice was given under sub-section (2).

- (c) of workers engaged in work which is necessarily so intermittent that the intervals during which they do not work while on duty ordinarily amount to more than the intervals for rest required under section 38—from the provisions of sections 35, 37, 38 and 39;
- (d) of workers engaged in any work which for technical reasons must be carried on continuously throughout the day—from the provisions of sections 36, 37, 38 and 39;

Power to make orders exempting from restrictions.

44. (1) Where the Local Government is satisfied that, owing to the nature of the work carried on or to other circumstances, it is unreasonable to require that the periods of work of any adult workers in any factory or class of factories should be fixed beforehand, it may, by written order, relax or modify the provisions of sections 40 and 41 in respect of such workers to such extent and in such manner as it may think fit, and subject to such conditions as it may deem expedient to ensure control over periods of work.

(2) Subject to the control of the Local Government, the Chief Inspector of Factories may, by written order, exempt, on such conditions as he may deem expedient, any or all of the adult workers in any factory, or group or class of factories, from any or all of the provisions of sections 35, 36, 37, 38, 39, 40 and 41, on the ground that the exemption is required to enable the factory or factories to deal with an exceptional press of work.

(3) Any exemption given under sub-section (2) in respect of daily hours or weekly hours of work shall be subject to the maximum limits prescribed under sub-section (4) of section 43.

(4) An order under sub-section (2) shall remain in force for such period as it may specify, but in no case for more than three months from the date on which notice thereof is given to the manager of the factory.

- (a) no exemption from the provisions of section 37 may be granted in respect of any woman; and
- (b) a woman may work in a factory only between 6 a.m.* and 7 p.m.:

Provided that the Local Government may, by notification in the local official Gazette, in respect of any class or classes of factories and for the whole year or any part of it, vary the limits laid down in clause (b) to any span of thirteen hours between 5 a.m. and 7.30 p.m.:

Provided further that, in respect of any seasonal factory or class of seasonal factories in a specified area, the Local Government may, by notification in the local official Gazette, impose a further restriction by defining the period or periods of the day within which women may be allowed to work, such that the period or periods so defined shall lie within the span fixed by clause (b) or under the above proviso and shall not be less than ten hours in the aggregate.

(2) The Local Government may make rules providing for the exemption from the above restrictions, to such extent and subject to such conditions as it may prescribe, of women working in fish-curing or fish-canning factories where the employment of women beyond the said hours is necessary to prevent damage to or deterioration in any raw material.

(3) Rules made under sub-section (2) shall remain in force for not more than three years from the date of their publication.

Special provision

46. Where a worker works on a shift which extends over midnight, the ensuing day for him shall be deemed to be the period of twenty-four hours beginning when the night-shift ends, and the hours he has worked after midnight shall be counted towards the previous day.

Extra pay for
work on Sundays.

47. (1) Where a worker in a seasonal factory works for more than sixty hours in any week, or where a worker in a factory other than a seasonal factory works for more than ten hours in any day, he shall be entitled in respect of the overtime worked to pay at the rate of one-and-a-half times his ordinary rate of pay.

(2) Where a worker in a factory other than a seasonal factory works for more than fifty-four hours in any week, he shall be entitled, in respect of the overtime worked less any overtime in respect of which he is entitled to extra pay under sub-section (1), to pay at the rate of one-and-a-quarter times his ordinary rate of pay.

(3) Where a worker in a factory works on a Sunday, or on any day substituted for a Sunday under the provisions of section 36, he shall be entitled, in respect of the time so worked, to pay at the rate of one-and-a-half times his ordinary rate of pay.

Restrictions on
employment.

48. No adult worker shall work in any factory on any day on which he has already been working in any other factory, save in such circumstances as may be prescribed by rules made in this behalf by the Local Government.

Control of
shifts.

49. The Local Government may make rules providing that in any specified class or classes of factories work shall not be carried on by a system of shifts so arranged that more than one relay of workers is engaged in work of the same kind at the same time, save with the permission of the Local Government and subject to such conditions as it may impose, either generally in such rules or in the case of any particular factory.

(2) The provisions of sub-sections (2) and (3) of section 41 shall apply also to the Notice of Periods of Work for Children.

(3) The manager of every factory in which children are employed shall maintain a Register of Child Workers showing—

- (c) the group, if any, in which he is included,

- (d) where his group works on shifts, the relay to which he is allotted,
- (e) the number of his certificate of fitness granted under section 52, and
- (f) such other particulars as may be prescribed.

(4) The Local Government may make rules prescribing forms for the Notice of Periods of Work for Children and of the Register of Child Workers, the manner in which they shall be maintained, and the period for which the Register shall be preserved.

Power to require medical examination regarding age.

57. Where an Inspector is of opinion that any person working in a factory without a certificate of fitness is a child or an adolescent, he may serve on the manager of the factory a notice requiring that such person shall be examined by a certifying surgeon, and such person shall not be allowed to work in the factory until he has been so examined and has been granted a certificate of fitness.

Power to require fresh medical examination regarding health.

58. Where an Inspector is of opinion that a child or adolescent working in a factory with a certificate of fitness is no longer fit to work in the capacity stated therein, he may serve on the manager of the factory a notice requiring that such child or adolescent shall be examined by a certifying surgeon, and such child or adolescent shall not be allowed to work again in the factory until he has been so examined and has been granted a fresh certificate of fitness.

Power to make rules.

59. The Local Government may make rules—

(a) prescribing the forms of certificates of fitness to be granted under section 52, providing for the grant of duplicates in the event of loss of the original certificate, and the fee which may be charged for such duplicate;

(b) prescribing the standards of physical fitness to be attained by children and adolescents applying for certificates of fitness;

(c) regulating the procedure of certifying surgeons under this Chapter, specifying other duties which they may be required to perform in connection with the employment of children in factories; and

STATEMENT OF OBJECTS AND REASONS.

The Royal Commission on Labour in India made a number of recommendations for the amendment of the Factories Act. These were published with their Report in July 1931. After examining these in detail, the Government of India drafted a Bill to replace the present Factories Act which embodied the great majority of the proposals and included some further alterations that experience had shown to be desirable. This Bill was circulated with a covering letter and a series of explanatory notes to Local Governments in June 1932 and the Governments were asked to forward the papers to associations of employers and employed and to other organizations or individuals who might be interested. In reply, a series of opinions were received discussing the Bill and the original Act in great detail, and after considering the numerous suggestions offered, the Government of India have framed the present Bill.

The substantial changes made in the existing law are discussed in the Notes on Clauses. Nearly all the more important alterations are based on the Labour Commission's recommendations. At the same time the opportunity has been taken to rearrange the law and to revise its expression where necessary. The present Act dates from 1911, but since that date large changes have been made by amending Acts and the consolidation of the law in a clearer and more logical form is in itself a desirable reform.

NOTES ON CLAUSES.

Clause 2.—The definitions have been generally revised and supplemented and those defining the manufacturing process and determining when a person is employed have been simplified. The definition of "factory" has been modified so as to cover those establishments which, although they employ more than 20 persons in the day, do not employ that number simultaneously.

Clause 3.—The general acceptance of standard time has rendered a modification of section 51 (1) desirable.

Clause 4.—The Labour Commission recommended differential treatment for seasonal and non-seasonal factories in the matter of adult hours and in other respects. This clause is based on their recommendation.

Clause 5.—This clause reproduces the provision contained in section 2 (3) empowering Local Governments to bring workshops not using power and the smaller power-factories within the scope of the Act: but certain changes have been made. On the recommendation of the Labour Commission it is proposed that Local Governments should be empowered to apply the Act to workshops in full or in part; at present they have no choice between applying the whole of the Act or none in such cases. Provision has been made in sub-section (2) for the notification of classes of premises, where necessary; and sub-section (3) is designed to ensure that a notification of the Local Government does not remain in force after the conditions justifying its issue have ceased to apply.

Clause 6 reproduces in substance section 53; but it is proposed that notifications should be limited to specified factories as there is no occasion for notifications applicable to classes of factories.

Clause 7.—This is a new clause designed to enable the Local Government to exempt from the Act premises which by reason of a change in their use should no longer be treated as factories.

Clause 8.—Section 57 confers on the Government of India the powers which may be exercised by Local Governments under the Act, while section 56 enables the Local Government to exempt any factory in case of public emergency. Section 57 has never been invoked and it is proposed to omit it. On the other hand, section 56 is intended only for a serious general emergency such as might be caused by a war, and it is proposed to transfer this exceptional power to the Government of India.

Clause 9.—Cf. section 33.

Clauses 10 and 11.—Cf. sections 4 and 5.

Clause 12.—This is a new clause.

Clause 13.—Sub-clause (1) reproduces section 6; sub-clause (2) extends to certifying surgeons the principle applying to Inspectors in clause 10 (2) [Section 4 (2)].

Clause 14.—Cf. section 8.

Clause 15.—This combines the provisions of sections 9 (a) and 37 (2) (e).

Clause 16.—Sub-clauses (1) and (2) are based on section 9 (c) and section 37 (2) (g), while sub-clause (3) is based on section 10. Sub-clause (4) is designed to enable Local Governments to do by rules for classes of factories what Inspectors under sub-clause (3) can do by orders for single factories.

Clause 17, sub-clause (1).—Section 9 (d) at present requires that the atmosphere shall not be rendered so humid by artificial means as to be injurious to the health of the workers, and section 37 (2) (g) gives the Local Government power to prescribe standards of artificial humidification and the methods to be adopted to secure their observance. It is now established that humidity, by itself, affords no measure of the degree of danger or discomfort; the cooling power, a factor dependent on the temperature, the humidity and the movement of the air, is a much more reliable criterion. Moreover, the Labour Commission has called attention to the fact that the existing Act gives inadequate power to protect the worker from acute discomfort. It is therefore proposed to omit the prohibition of excessive humidity and, in sub-clause (1), to enable the Local Government to prescribe standards of cooling power, in place of standards of humidification, and to regulate the methods used for artificial humidification. Sub-clauses (2) and (3) reproduce the substance of section 12.

Clause 18.—This is based on a recommendation of the Labour Commission who give in their report the previous history of the legislative proposals for protecting workers against the effects of excessive heat.

Clause 19. This combines the provisions of section 9 (b) and section 37 (2) (f) with an addition enabling the Local Government to prescribe standards of floor space.

Clause 20.—Sub-clauses (1) and (2) reproduce the substance of section 11. In sub-clause (3) it is proposed to enable the Local Governments to prescribe standards of lighting by rule for particular classes of factories.

Clause 21.—Sub-clause (1) combines sections 14 and 37 (2) (i). Sub-clause (2) is new and is based on a recommendation of the Labour Commission.

Clause 22.—This combines sections 13 and 37 (2) (h). The proviso to the former section has been omitted in accordance with a recommendation of the Labour Commission.

Clause 23.—Cf. section 15. The maximum number of person who may occupy a room in which the doors open inwards has been reduced to 20 and the saving in favour of factories erected before 1912 has been omitted.

Clause 24.—This combines sections 16 and 37 (2) (i).

Clause 25. Cf. section 18.

Clauses 26 and 27. Inspectors have already power under section 18A, which is substantially reproduced in clause 27, to issue orders requiring action to be taken where the machinery or plant has become dangerous and prohibiting the use of dangerous machinery or plant pending repairs in cases of necessity. But an Inspector may have reason to fear that the use of certain machinery or plant involves danger without having sufficient evidence to warrant him in issuing definite orders requiring its alteration or repair. Clause 26, embodying a recommendation of the Labour Commission, has therefore been added to enable Inspectors to secure the requisite information when necessary. See also clause 34 (4).

Clause 28.—This is based on section 19; but it is proposed to extend to the oiling of machinery the prohibition which at present applies to the cleaning of machinery, and to extend it to work done between moving parts as well as between fixed and moving parts.

Clause 29.—Sub-clause (2) reproduces the substance of section 19A. In sub-clause (1) it is proposed to give the Local Governments general powers to exclude non-working children with a view to their protection.

Clause 30 reproduces section 20.

Clause 31.—This reproduces section 34 with a small amendment to secure that notices are given of all accidents resulting in death or serious injury, including those in which injury is caused to persons not employed in the factory.

Clause 32.—This is based on section 50. A minor modification has been made in the conclusion of the last sub-section, and provision is made for appeals in all cases in which an order in writing is issued by an Inspector.

Clause 33.—Sub-clauses (b), (c) and (d) are new provisions and are all based on recommendations of the Labour Commission.

Clause 34.—The Labour Commission recommended that Local Governments should be empowered in general terms to pass orders applicable to particular classes or groups of factories relating to welfare. In addressing Local Governments the Government of India suggested that such a wide extension of rule-making powers was undesirable and that it would be more in consonance with the principles underlying the Act that fresh requirements of this kind should have the approval of the Legislature. This view has been generally accepted and the Government of India have therefore included no general rule-making power relating to "welfare" in the Act. They propose [cf. clauses 21 (2), 33 (b) and sub-clauses (1) and (2) of this clause] to empower Local Governments to make provision only for those matters to which the Labour Commission specifically directed attention.

Sub-clause (3) is designed to enable Local Governments to secure the protection of the worker against special hazards arising from the use of particular processes. The present Act already contains in section 19B and the Schedule provisions designed to protect women and young persons against dangers from lead poisoning, and section 38A confers on the Government of India power to make rules for the disinfection of wool which may be infected with anthrax spores. But with the constant elaboration of factory processes the existing Act has already proved inadequate; and the steady accumulation of knowledge of the best methods for protection against dangers due to special processes render it desirable that Government should be able to make and to modify from time to time the necessary regulations.

Sub-clause (4) is based on a recommendation of the Labour Commission, and is designed, along with the provisions of clauses 26 and 27, to protect workers against dangers arising from the use for factory purposes of unstable buildings. It is limited to new factories and extensions.

Clause 35.—The main part of the clause embodies the recommendation of the majority of the Labour Commission for the reduction of weekly adult hours in non-seasonal factories to 54. The limit for seasonal factories is retained at 60 hours. In the proviso a special exception is made in favour of factories where the processes must go on throughout the day, such as factories providing electric power and light, waterworks, etc. This is also based on a recommendation of the majority of the Labour Commission, but it has not been coupled, as they suggested, with a provision ensuring an average of 54 hours weekly. Such a provision would introduce a serious complication, and it is common in these factories for work to be of such an intermittent character that the hours normally worked in a week are less than 54. The proviso has not been extended, as the Labour Commission suggested, to factories producing articles of prime necessity which must be supplied or made every day as special treatment is not warranted on this account.

Clause 36.—Cf. section 22. Sub-clause (2) providing for the cancellation of notices on the part of the employer is new.

Clause 37.—The majority of the Labour Commission proposed to reduce the hours for adult work in non-seasonal factories from 11 to 10. This has been embodied in the clause and it is proposed to apply a similar reduction to women workers in seasonal factories.

Clause 38.—This is based on section 21, but certain changes have been made. That section is defective in that, where two intervals of half an hour are given, a manager who closes his factory before the second interval is due infringes the law. In addition, the present law makes the request of the employees concerned necessary before the rest interval can be split up into two half hours, and places two additional limitations on the reduction of the interval to half-an-hour where the working day is 8½ hours or less, viz., the sanction of the Local Government must be obtained, and this reduction can only be permitted in the case of male workers. It is proposed to remove all these restrictions. With a short working day it is better that the extra half hour should be spent in the worker's home than in the precincts of the factory, and this applies with, if anything, more force to women than to men. Section 52 which allowed in certain circumstances unexpected interruptions of work to count as intervals has been omitted.

The Labour Commission recommended that it should also be possible to split up the intervals into periods of less than half-an-hour. But as there is virtually no demand for this refinement, and its introduction would add appreciably to administrative difficulties, it has not been included.

Clause 39.—This is based on a recommendation of the Labour Commission and is designed to prevent the hours of work being so arranged that the worker does not get a reasonably long period away from the factory on each day.

Clause 40.—This embodies the principle of section 26, but the opportunity has been taken, by inserting separate sub-sections relating to the various methods by which factory hours are arranged, to make it clear that hours need not be fixed separately for each individual worker.

Clause 41.—This is based on section 3. The period within which the notice must be sent has been reduced to 3 days; and in order to prevent the evasion of the Act, it is proposed to provide that changes should be notified to the Inspector before they are made, and that his previous sanction should be required if a change has to be made within a week of the previous change.

Clause 42.—Sub-clause (1) is based on section 35. But the main part of the clause has been remodelled and the first proviso to the existing section has been omitted, on the ground that it is desirable that at least a record of the workers should be maintained in all factories. Sub-clause (2) is based on section 37 (2) (d); the addition relating to the preservation of the register is new.

Clause 43.—Sub-clause (1) is based on section 29. Sub-clause (2) is based on sections 30 (1) and 30 (3), 32 and 32A (a). The main change proposed is that these exemptions should in future be made by rules under the Act and not merely by notification. In addition it is proposed that exemptions should not be granted from the weekly holiday in the case of workers engaged in intermittent work, and the definition of such work has been made more specific.

The remaining sub-clauses are new. Sub-clause (3) has been found to be necessary in order to enable the factory management to avail itself of other exemptions that may be given. Sub-clause (4) provides for the fixing of absolute limits to overtime, a matter now covered by rules under the Act. Sub-clause (5) embodies a recommendation of the Labour Commission and is designed to ensure that exemptions and the conditions upon which they are granted are reviewed at intervals of not less than 3 years.

Clause 44.—This provides for certain exemptions which cannot suitably be made by rules. Sub-clause (1) is designed to meet the case of those factories where the fixing of hours beforehand would impose an unreasonable limitation on the working of the factory: for example, there are factories where work comes in at unexpected times and has to be done with extreme expedition. Sub-clause (2) is based on section 30 (2), but it is proposed that the power to grant exemptions should be exercised by the Chief Inspector, subject to the control of the Local Government. Sub-clauses (3) and (4) are designed to secure that the limits prescribed by Local Governments for overtime apply to such exemptions and that they do not remain in force for an unreasonable period.

Clause 45.—Sub-clause (1) is based on section 24, but it is proposed to change from 5-30 a.m. to 6 a.m., the hour before which women may not normally be employed. The object is to secure for women a night rest of not less than 11 hours, which is the period prescribed by the International Convention relating to this subject and recommended by the Labour Commission. The latter's proposal to extend the period within which a factory may employ women to the hours between 5 a.m. and 10 p.m. has been strongly criticized and is not embodied in the Bill. The first proviso is based on section 51 (2) and the second on a recommendation of the Labour Commission. It is applicable only to seasonal factories, and is intended to enable Local Governments to enforce the legal hours in rural factories where repeated infringements have shown the necessity for further limitation. Its application will not reduce the maximum hours for which women may work but will limit further the hours within which they may be employed. Sub-clause (2) is based on section 32A (b) but provides for exemption by rules instead of by notification. Sub-clause (3) has the same object as sub-clause (5) of clause 43.

Clause 46.—This is a new provision designed to meet the difficulties of factories working on shifts. For example, a factory worker who works up till 4 a.m. on Sunday morning and then gets 40 hours of rest, commencing work again at 8 p.m. on Monday night, has at present to be exempted from the provisions relating to the weekly holiday.

Clause 47.—Sub-clauses (1) and (2) replace section 31 and embody the Labour Commission's recommendation that work in excess of 60 hours in the week should be paid at the rate of time and a half. It is proposed to make similar provision for work done in excess of the daily limit of hours in a non-seasonal factory and, in sub-clause (3), to provide for similar payment for all work done by virtue of an exemption from the weekly holiday.

Clause 48.—Cf. section 25.

Clause 49.—This embodies a recommendation of the Labour Commission and is designed to give the Local Governments power to control the working of multiple shifts.

Clauses 50 to 53.—These embody, so far as children are concerned, the substance of sections 23 (a) and 7 but, in modification of a recommendation made by the Labour Commission, it is proposed to enable Local Governments to prescribe for the guidance of certifying surgeons granting certificates physical standards to be attained by children.

It is also proposed, as recommended by the Labour Commission, that adolescents should be required to produce certificates of fitness before they can be permitted to work as adults. The ages of 15 to 16 suggested by the Labour Commission have been criticised as unduly narrow and adolescence has been defined so as to include persons between the ages of 15 and 17. Adolescents may be certified as fit either for children's work or for adult work. In the former case they will be subject to all special restrictions imposed by the Act on the work of children, and in the latter case they will be subject to none of these restrictions. The Labour Commission also suggested that young persons should be prohibited from working at night, but the advantages to be gained by preventing male adolescents who are certified as fully fit for adult work from working at night do not outweigh the difficulties that would thus be created.

Clause 54.—Sub-clauses (1) and (2) are based on the recommendations of the Labour Commission. Sub-clause (3) is based on sections 23 (b) and 51 (2). The same modifications have been made in the case of children as in the case of women. Sub-clause (4) is designed to ensure that every child, without exception, enjoys a weekly rest. Sub-clause (5) is taken from section 25.

Clauses 55 and 56.—These extend to children the principles applied to adults in clauses 40, 41 and 42.

Clauses 57 and 58.—These embody the principles of section 8A, but it is proposed to extend it, as recommended by the Labour Commission, to persons who appear to the Inspector to be children or adolescents.

Clauses 60, 62 to 69.—These embody, with the necessary consequential additions, sections 41, 43, 44 and 44A. Section 43A, which provided for the grant of compensation to injured workers out of fines has been omitted, as adequate provision is now made by the Workmen's Compensation Act.

Clause 61.—This follows a recommendation of the Labour Commission and is designed to secure in suitable cases adequate penalties in the case of repeated offences.

Clause 70.—This is a new clause designed to ensure that whenever possible the person responsible as occupier is clearly designated.

Clause 72.—Cf. section 45.

Clause 73.—Cf. section 46. The provision is at present limited to parts of the factory where certain work is carried on. It is proposed to extend it to all parts of the factory where children are employed.

Clause 74.—Cf. section 47.

Clauses 75 and 76.—Cf. sections 48 and 49.

Clause 77.—Cf. section 36 (1). Sub-clause (2) is new.

Clause 78.—Cf. section 38.

Clause 79.—Sub-clause (1) is based on various provisions throughout the Act. Sub-clauses (2) and (3) are based on sections 39 and 40, but the exception contained in section 39 (1) has been omitted.

• Clauses 80 and 81.—These reproduce sections 54 and 58.

Clause 82.—The proviso is inserted to ensure that there is no breach of continuity in respect of matters not covered by section 6 of the General Clauses Act, 1897.

Method of
extension of

CHAPTER IV.

PENALTIES AND PROCEDURE.

Penalty for illicit export.

30. A breach of the provisions of sub-section (1) or sub-section (2) of section 19 shall be punishable as if it were an offence under Item No. 8 of section 167 of the Sea Customs Act, 1878, and the provisions of section 168 and of Chapter XVII of that Act shall apply accordingly. VIII of 1878.

Penalty for making false return.

Any owner of a tea estate, or his agent or manager, who has furnished any return under sub-section (1) of section 20 or under sub-section (1) of section 29 containing any particular which is false and which he knew to be false or did not believe to be true, shall be punishable with fine which may extend to one thousand rupees.

Penalty for obstructing inspection of tea estate

32. Whoever obstructs any member or officer of the Committee while such member or officer is entering upon or inspecting the lands of any tea estate under sub-section (2) of section 29, and whoever, having control over or custody of any records of a tea estate relating to the cultivation of tea on that estate, refuses or fails to produce such records when required by a member or officer of the Committee under that sub-section, shall be punishable with fine which may extend to one thousand rupees.

Penalty for illicit cultivation.

35. (1) No Magistrate other than a Magistrate of the first class shall take cognisance of an offence under section 31, section 32 or section 33, and such Magistrate may take cognisance of such an offence only upon complaint made by a person authorised by the Committee in this behalf, and with the previous sanction of the Local Government.

(2) The Committee shall be responsible for the conduct of all prosecutions of offences under section 31, section 32 and section 33.

STATEMENT OF OBJECTS AND REASONS.

In October, 1932, the representatives of the Indian tea industry approached the Government of India with a view to securing their support to an international scheme for the restriction of exports of tea. The condition of the industry was precarious and the collapse of many concerns imminent. Government, therefore, expressed their willingness to consider, on its merits, any practical scheme that might be put forward. The Indian Tea Association, acting for the industry, produced a scheme which had the support of tea interests both in Ceylon and the Netherlands East Indies. The main features of the scheme were:—

- (i) that the exports of tea would be restricted to a percentage of the maximum exports from each producing country in any of the three years, 1929, 1930 and 1931;
- (ii) that the restriction scheme would remain in force for 5 years commencing from 1st April, 1933; and
- (iii) that during this period existing areas under tea would not be extended beyond half per cent. of the present planted area.

The scheme also provided that the heads of agreement would be enforced in each of the contracting countries by the Government concerned.

2. The results of a referendum issued to all known estates have been examined and it appears that over 92 per cent. of the industry, reckoned in terms of production, have expressed themselves in favour of the scheme. The Governments of Madras, Assam and Bengal, within whose jurisdiction bulk of the tea in British India is cultivated, are prepared to restrict the issue of fresh leases for tea cultivation for the period of the agreement and have also agreed to the restriction of planting of areas already leased. Indian Associations have expressed themselves as strongly in favour of the scheme as British interests. Government have, therefore, decided to give official recognition to the scheme and to give legislative sanction to its operation. The Governments of the Netherlands East Indies and Ceylon have already passed laws to give effect to the agreement.

CALCUTTA, THE 4TH DECEMBER 1931.

RESOLUTION—No. 20834P.

The Governor in Council has had under consideration the report submitted by the Committee appointed to inquire into the occurrence at the High Detention Camp on the 16th September 1931, and has decided to publish for general information the conclusions at which he has arrived.

2. It is clear from the report of the Committee that before the 16th September there had been various instances of misbehaviour on the part of the detenus in the camp, which show that the detenus gave continuous trouble and annoyance to those who were charged with the duty of guarding them. On the 15th a number of detenus tried to force their way past the inner gate and assaulted a sentry who rightly stopped them. His Excellency in Council agrees with the Committee's view that these incidents, especially that of the 15th, had produced ill-feeling between the detenus and the sepoy; and he notes that in all the incidents the detenus were the aggressors.

3. It is also clear that on the night of the 16th detenus were again the aggressors and two sentries were interfered with by them. At all times interference with a sentry is a serious offence, and when the interference takes place at night, the gravity of the offence is greatly enhanced. The sentries thus interfered with would have been justified if after warning they had fired at the detenus concerned instead of merely giving an alarm.

4. It seems to His Excellency in Council that there can be no question that the entry of the guard into the camp after the alarm had been given was justified; it was their clear duty to enter and go to the help of the sentries.

5. With regard to the firing which took place subsequently and is described by the Committee as a regular fusillade from the sepoy, it must be remembered that an alarm had been given and that shots had been fired by sentries; and that after the guard had entered there was what the Committee describes as a half-hearted retaliation by some of the detenus. As no order to fire appears to have been given, the extent of the subsequent firing which took place cannot be justified. Although the evidence that some of the sepoy entered the building and there caused some of the casualties is not quite convincing, His Excellency in Council accepts the finding of the Committee, and holds that the action of these sepoy was a serious breach of discipline.

6. His Excellency in Council fully agrees with the Committee's finding that neither the Commandant nor the Inspector had any complicity in the shooting affair, and is satisfied that the insinuations made against these officers are totally unfounded.

7. The conclusions to which His Excellency in Council has come are therefore that the primary responsibility for the incident, which resulted in two deaths and injuries to several persons, rests partly with those detenus whose misbehaviour had brought about the irritation and high tension which the Committee find to have been in existence before the 16th September, and more particularly with those who interfered with the sentries on the night of the 16th September. He also finds that the guard which entered the camp when the alarm was given was not kept under proper control, that there was unjustifiable firing and that some of the sepoys entered the building and caused injuries to some of the inmates. He also accepts the conclusion to be drawn from the Committee's report that an officer of rank superior to that of a havildar must ordinarily be in the vicinity of the camp to deal with emergencies.

8 His Excellency in Council greatly regrets the tragic results of the series of incidents in Hijli Camp. They prove beyond doubt the necessity for the maintenance of a higher standard of discipline among the detenus in such camps. For it is only by the enforcement of strict discipline that the recurrence of such incidents can be prevented. Orders have accordingly been issued to Commandants of Detenus' Camps that the instructions issued for the treatment of detenus must be carefully followed.

9. As regards the police arrangements for guards in Hijli Camp, these have already been revised so that a more responsible officer than a havildar will always be present at the camp, and in addition one of the superior officers will be at once available should the need arise.

10. As regards the breaches of discipline on the part of the police concerned in the incident of the 16th September 1931, these will be dealt with departmentally by the Inspector-General of Police.

(ORDER—Ordered that a copy of the above resolution be published in the Calcutta Gazette for general information.

(ORDERED ALSO that a copy be forwarded to the Government of India for information and to the Inspector-General of Police, Bengal, for information and necessary action.

By order of the Governor in Council,
